The Market.

Trade last week was quite on a par with other years. Good roses have been somewhat scarce, but low grades are overplentiful. Carnations are received in fair supply, but stems are short. A few chrysanthemums and a few violets are being sent in, but only in limited quantities. Asters and gladioli are about out of the market. This makes a little better demand for other stock, and especially as dahlias are almost a failure in these parts. The weather has been extremely mild for September and cannot be said to be seasonable. We may expect a considerable shortage of stock should the weather turn suddenly cold. The fall races made a little stir with the downtown florists, but nothing great.

Various Notes.

A noticeable feature in the Odd Fellows' parade during the convention here last week was a decorated automobile. The decoration was the work of A. C. Jennings, the new King street florist, and was certainly artistic, and for quantity and sizes of plants used it was like a moving conservatory. D. J.

STEAMER SAILINGS.

Steamer orders are not anywhere near so numerous in winter as in summer, but there is considerable travel to southern countries and it is worth while occasionally to remind your customers that you can deliver flowers by telegraph to friends sailing for the Mediterranean, or elsewhere. COBLESKILL, N. Y.—Alfred Goldring has purchased the greenhouse property of the heirs of the late Mrs. Cordelia Lane.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Fire of unknown origin on the night of September 26 caused $1,000 damage to the sheds and greenhouses of David I. Saunders, Second and W streets northwest. The sheds where the blaze started were constructed entirely of wood, and were enveloped in a mass of flames before the arrival of the firemen. Owing to much inflammable material stored in the buildings the fire made an unusually picturesque spectacle.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

J. W. FELDMAN, Canton, S. D., has sold part of his nursery property and will clear off the stock this fall.

NURSEYMEN in the north are in the rush of fall deliveries and report business better than ever at this season.

THE notes on stocks for standard roses on the Pacific coast page of this issue will be of interest to many nurserymen.

JOHN CROSBY, Pittsburg, Pa., is dead, aged 65 years, as the result of an injury inflicted by a horse. He was well known as a landscape architect.

CAPT. H. AUGUSTINE, of Normal, one of the oldest nurserymen in Illinois, gave a talk on "Propagation and Grafting of Fruit Trees," at the meeting of the Will County Horticultural Society at Joliet, Ill., September 29.

DR. W. H. NICHOLS has presented a 32-acre tract to the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, to be used as a botanical garden and public park. The park board of Ann Arbor has purchased twenty-three acres of land adjoining this tract and the entire fifty-five acres are to be improved on a uniform plan, which is now being prepared by O. C. Simonds, Chicago.

A. J. FINDLAY, of Akron, O., formerly proprietor of the Findlay Nursery Co., of Akron, and Hemphill, O., and of Monroe, Mich., who recently sold out his interests in that business to his brother, arrived in Boise, Idaho, September 25, after visiting Twin Falls, Mountain Home and other Idaho points. He is looking for a location for starting a nursery.

NURSERY IMPORTS.

In the last three years the United States imported nursery stock (plants, trees, shrubs, vines, etc.) valued as follows from the countries named:

Country.	1903.	1904.	1905.
Belgium	$ 239,637	$ 223,066	$ 223,181

DEATH OF ALBERT WYCKOFF.

Albert Wyckoff, vice-president of the Albaugh Nursery Co., of Tadmor, O., with offices in Dayton, died suddenly September 24 on a train at Buffalo. He was returning from a visit to his former home at Wilkesbarre, Pa. The remains were returned to Wilkesbarre for burial. He left a widow and one daughter. The latter, Miss Sarah, is a prominent physician and lecturer on medical subjects at Wilkesbarre.

Mr. Wyckoff had bought a fine farm in the mountains near Wilkesbarre and was having it laid out into a fruit farm. Early in life he served through the civil war and was twice a prisoner at Andersonville, and twice made his escape. When he left the prison he weighed ninety pounds, and at the time of his death was an unusually large man, weighing more than 250. He was a genial, whole-souled man, and one whom everybody knew and loved for his cheerful, generous nature. Thirty years ago he was postmaster at Jacksonville, Ill., and shortly after entered the nursery business, and located at Dayton twenty years ago. He was 60 years of age. He was prominent in G. A. POMOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

The Kansas City meeting of the American Pomological Society was one of the most notable of its history. It was held in the heart of the rapidly-developing middle west, and was attended by a representative gathering of noted pomologists from all parts of the country. It follows that an interesting and valuable report is the result. This report was distributed to all members in good standing by Secretary John Craig, of Ithaca, N. Y., early in September. It is available to all who become members of the organization. It is made up of three principal divisions. First, a record of the papers presented and discussions which followed during the three days' sessions. Second, a valuable chapter giving the horticultural history of six of the states of the southwest—absolutely new historical data. Third, the reports of the standing committees of the society, including one on inspection of apples; one on score-card judging; and the exceedingly comprehensive re-

Hundreds of professional and amateur growers from various parts of the Inland Empire, which takes in parts of Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and southern British Columbia, participated in the eighth annual aster show by the Spokane Floral Association held in connection with the Spokane interstate fair September 24 to October 6. The officers in charge are Mrs. John W. Gilson, president, and Mrs. E. Axelson, secretary.

Mrs. R. Weil, of Spokane, who gave away 10,000 packets of seeds to the children of the Spokane district last spring, gives special cash prizes to the amount of $100 for the best exhibits by the children.

The Spokane Floral Association is doing everything in its power to encourage the growing of flowers by the children as well as adults and as a result Spokane has some of the finest gardens in this part of the northwest.

STOCK FOR STANDARD ROSES.

I notice that a question has been asked in the REVIEW within the last few weeks regarding the stocks that should be used in the growing of standard roses. The correspondent asks about Rosa canina and R. rugosa and speaks of both of them as being much used in Europe for that purpose. If any of our readers are interested in either of those varieties on this coast and have any intentions whatever of using them for the purpose of harboring tender varieties, my advice would be "Don't." Many years ago I imported Rosa canina from Germany, and after having tried it in all the ways I thought possible I discarded it.

In the first place I found that it was prone to sucker and it was almost impossible to have the variety draw enough substance from the root to keep the higher portion alive. As for suckering, it acts the same way as do all varieties of roses when the variety budded into them is not suitable, or when from any reason their growth is retarded; they retaliate by suckering.

Another consideration that should be taken into account is that this stock seems to be short-lived on this coast. It is evident that our dry, hot summers do not fill its requirements and I have found it almost impossible to grow it longer than one season without the bark scalding and subsequently dying down to the ground.

With a few heavy-growing sorts I have found Rosa rugosa a good host, but it has much of the habit of R. canina, and under usual conditions it has not appeared to be any longer-lived. It is certain that at least 90 per cent of our best standard varieties will not make a firm union with it under any circumstances.

Speaking of the various varieties of wild roses used in the growing of standard roses, it is surprising what changes have come about within the last twenty-five years. The earliest sort used as a standard on this coast was the old Castilian, and I have on my grounds several specimen roses budded to that variety over forty years ago. They look as though they might live for many years. The objection I found to the Castilian was that after a few years' growth the stem did not grow in proportion with the top, and a top-heavy plant was always the result.

Although not entirely discarding this old kind, I next experimented with Baltimore Belle and found that it could not be depended on to remain alive after a couple of years. It also suckered badly, and in turn I threw it out for what I consider the best of all rose stocks, La Grifferae. This is really the best all-round host for budding. It is not inclined to sucker, buds easily, makes a heavy stem, is easy to transplant and is long-lived. About eighty per cent of our best roses do splendidly on it, and with Manetti for a few hybrids that do not grow on the other I have the best combination that I think can be had in the line of material for standard roses.

mum crop is not yet at its height. Carnations are in poor supply and only fair quality. Much short stock is being offered that has been cut from young plants. Prices have an upward tendency, having advanced at least twenty per cent within the last two weeks. Roses, except short stock, remain scarce; in fact, no fancy stock is offered at all. I have seen no good Beauties in a month, and from present indications none will be offered for some weeks. Lilies of all descriptions are about gone. icle. Presumably the money which the promoters expect to make will come from the subdivision and sale of the 15,000 acres to families who are accustomed to the intensive cultivation of minute subdivisions of land and who, in particular, are familiar with the production of flowers on a large scale for perfumery. of families from one of the most thrifty peoples in the world and the introduction of a new industry into the state. The information comes from Los Angeles and the proposal presumably originated in some fertile brain in that city, whose enterprising boomers are becoming important factors in the development of northern California.

The cultivation of flowers in the open, on a large scale, is new, so far as we know, in California. It is probably not commercially possible except in connection with a perfumery factory to utilize the culls and the surplus which the market will not take at remunerative prices. The industry is extensively pursued in southern France, whose climate is in some respects like our own, but less favorable for this purpose by reason of our freedom from summer rains. It is probably not possible to introduce this industry into California at this time, except by the importation of the people to carry it on. Much technical skill is required in the manufacture of perfumes, but that is not difficult to provide either by importation or the more costly process of development.

Trade is starting finely for the autumn season. Perhaps the greatest help to the trade has been the somewhat cooler weather, which has not only started the orders, but also helped the quality of all greenhouse stock. Some especially fine American Beauty roses are seen. Carnations are better daily, and with the chrysanthemum season just opening, we shall soon have plenty of flowers for all requirements. There have been an unusual number of funeral orders lately. Chrysanthemums appeared September 21 and sold readily, the variety being Monrovia. All the trade would like to see a frost.

Various Notes.

September 25 the club held its regular meeting, with President Stephens in the chair. There was a good attendance. The important question of raising the annual dues was discussed at length. Messrs. The question of more central and better quarters for our meetings was given attention, and we will no doubt shortly move to more suitable rooms. Mr. Curry, vice-president, was chosen to award the prizes for the best school gardens. Edward Helfrich, florist and gardener at the Imbecile Asylum, was elected an active member. M. B. Faxon and Guy H. Woodrow addressed the club regarding its financial management. The president announced that at the next meeting nominations of officers

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. Delivery January 5 to 10 and later. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

While last week started rather quiet, it wound up fairly well. Frost has killed all outdoor flowers and the demand has been fair for greenhouse stock. Roses with all the growers are healthy and some good stock is brought in. Richmond is not at its best as yet, and pinks are small. Brides are plentiful. Some fine short stock sold at $1.50 and $2 per hundred. Beauties are fair. Carnations are poor, no doubt on account of the earliness of the season. Enchantress is about the only variety that has shown up in good form so far. The first lot of violets was received last week. The uncertainty of the violet crop, which was experienced by some of the growers last season, has had the effect of reducing the number of plants grown this season and it is evident that our supply will have to come from outside.

Plants have been moving slowly, the only demand being for ferns.

St. Paul.

Ludwig Anderson, foreman for L. L. May & Co., has been especially successful with Killarney and Richmond, which are fine. Carnations are not doing so well, no doubt due to the houses in which they are grown. Miss Newhart, who has been with May & Co. for a number of years, is fast convalescing from the operation she underwent at St. Joseph's hospital and will be back to work in a few weeks.

F. W. Ramaley contemplates spending the winter in California.

Minneapolis.

Donaldson's Glass Block will have possibly more floor space than any of the dealers when improvements are completed. The new ice-boxes look as though they would hold a car-load of flowers. James Souden, the foreman at the greenhouses, has had good success with the roses, having been able to supply their heavy demand on everything with the exception of Beauties.

Patthey & Thompson's old stand is to be opened by former employees of the park board.

Amundson & Kerschner say they are doing nicely; funeral work seems to be their specialty. FELIX.

LEXINGTON, KY.—Honaker's new store is one of the finest in the country.

DENVER, COLO.—The Braidwood Floral Co. has been incorporated; capital stock, $25,000; John B. Braidwood, C. A. Braidwood and William Williamson, all of Denver, are the incorporators. The first-named is son-in-law of Wm. Clark, of Colorado Springs, and conducted his business for a time.

YOU MAY NOT grow a great many crimson carnations, but of course you grow some. Every up-to-date carnation grower does. They are selling better every year. It will pay you well to stock up with the best crimson ever offered to the trade. Come and see it growing. We are sure you will agree with us on that point. It is blooming freely now. Delivery will begin Jan. 1907. Better get your order in now. $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business was good all last week, notwithstanding that the weather was warm. Everything cleaned up nicely at fair prices. This week opened with a change in the weather, colder with rain.

Asters and gladioli have disappeared. Carnations still are scarce and no chrysanthemums are in bloom among our local growers. Should we have a frost to kill dahlias there will be some tall scrambling for stock for a few days.

Various Notes.

George Blind, of Blind Bros., was married Wednesday evening to Miss Lillie Born, of Renysville avenue. They left for a tour of the eastern cities with the congratulations of his many friends.

A trip among the growers shows that carnation plants as a rule do not look quite as good as last season. Lawsons especially are looking bad.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. is cutting heavily on Maid, Bride, Kaiserin, Killarney, Richmond and Chateaufort. It is the best stock they ever have had at this season.

John Wyland has discarded all roses this year, except part of a house of Richmond, confining himself to carnations.

Blind Bros. are cutting some fine Beauties, Killarney and Richmond.

A. E. McCord, formerly with Blind Bros., has taken the flower stand in the Fifth avenue arcade. Hoo-Hoo.

MOBILE, ALA.

The great storm last week did great damage to crops outdoors, but greenhouse establishments escaped serious injury, except A. F. Duplan's place at George and Elmira streets, which was practically destroyed. It was not a large plant. C. Ravier & Sons think they got off easily with a loss of $2,500. All stock in fields for hundreds of miles along the Gulf coast was more or less injured. The wild smilax people report difficulty in getting into the woods since the storm.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.

A Sunday spent in visiting the most important places of this city was a pleasure to the writer. There are some eight or nine places, all devoted to growing cut flowers and pot plants and, as the report goes, another firm is to build near Mountain Home cemetery.

Grofvert & De Smit's place is looking fine. Carnations are a specialty and well grown. A house of roses also is looking fine. Boston ferns and mums in pots will find ready customers.

Mountain Home cemetery, with Mr. Frazer as superintendent, is as usual in fine shape.

F. W. Meyers, the Riverside florist, has his carnations in fine condition. His Enchantress have fine stem and color.

The Dunkley Floral Co. is busy with extensive repairs and therefore late in getting carnations in, but will finish planting shortly.

The G. Van Bochove & Bro. greenhouses are, as usual, in prime condition. Roses, carnations and mums are better than ever. This firm is sparing no expense to get the best of stock and the ever increasing trade shows clearly that good stock is what people are after.

The Central Michigan Nurseries make a nice showing. A house of mums is fine. Carnations are looking well. Their roses are rather small, as they have changed from beds to benches again, and, therefore, had to delay planting. In all, the place is in better condition than I have seen it before. H. M.

SAULT STE. MARIE, MICH.—Otto H. Weber has bought the Edgerton estate, and will hereafter conduct the business.

DECATUR, ILL.—Mrs. Maude Miller has sold her flower store in the Central block to A. C. Brown, of Springfield. Mrs. C. H. Laughlin will be in charge hereafter. Mrs. Miller expects to go to St. Louis to reside.

TOPEKA, KAN.—Frank Sachs invited his friends to Herman hall September 25, to celebrate the wedding of his son, Wilhelm. Some uninvited guests were asked to leave, and one, who is a local prize fighter, waylaid Mr. Sachs, assaulting him.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business took an unusual spurt last week, resulting in a general clean-up of the market. Asters are things of the past, leaving a hole to be filled in by roses and carnations, which are hardly equal to the task. Beauties are seldom to be obtained in this market. Among roses, Bride, Kaiserin, Maid, La Detroit, Richmond, Meteor, Killarney and Niphetos are commonly seen, bringing anywhere from $1.50 to $6 per hundred. Carnations are showing a marked improvement as a result of cooler weather. Enchantress is especially good, while Lawson would draw the booby prize. The price of carnations ranges from 50 cents to $2 per hundred. Some fine valley is on the market. Snapdragon and cosmos are also filling in. Green is plentiful.

Various Notes.

Harry Rackham is ill with typhoid fever.

B. Schroeter's men are being kept busy with several large store decorations for fall openings. Newcomb, Endicott & Co. used several van-loads of palms and foliage plants, besides several thousand best grade cut flowers.

Philip Breitmeyer has been away on business for a few days.

The mother of J. F. Sullivan died at Philadelphia last week, causing his absence from Detroit for a few days.

A step in the right direction toward cultivating a taste for flowers among Detroit's younger generation, is taken by the Twentieth Century Club and other Detroit societies. Each spring seeds are distributed to the children of the public schools and in fall cash prizes are awarded to the schools making the best showing in cut flowers and plants. Acting as judges, Messrs. Wm. Brown, P. Breitmeyer, Wm. Dilger, E. A. Scribner, Norman Sullivan and Walter Taepke awarded prizes last week to five schools. Special mention was made of three other schools for meritorious work.

Watch Us Grow

ARAUCARIAS, the best decorative plants Nature produces, our specialty.

Every man in business and life, to be successful, must adopt one thing as his specialty and that specialty, of whatever nature it may be, he must guard, study and push to such an extent that it not only benefits himself but he must continue it so every one who seeks his aid, services or his article, which he advertises or practices, will share a slice of his activity and prosperity. I made the importation and cultivation of araucarias a special study in my life. The figures below will show my success in business from the first year; by commencing with an importation of 250 and now, the eleventh year, my importation has grown up to 6,000 (come and see it), the reason being that the araucaria grows yearly more in favor with the plant consuming people all over the country, as a most admired decorative plant for the parlor, bed-room, dining and sitting-rooms, stores and hotels, lawns and porches. The outlook will be of an importation of at least 8,000 to 10,000 in spring of 1907. To secure this vast amount for 1907, I left Hoboken Aug. 15, striking for Belgium, to make contracts for next year. I shall also bring over with me at the same time a large lot of choice Azalea Indica and Palms, etc., for Christmas and Easter forcing. No money will be spared to secure for my customers the cream of the Belgium greenhouses only.

Please note lowest prices for September.

Araucaria Excelsa, 12 to 14 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 50c. 14 to 16 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 60c. 16 to 18 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 yrs. old, 75c. 18 to 20 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.00. 20 to 24 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.25. 26 to 30 inches high, specimens, 7-in. pots, 6 yrs. old, $2.50 to $3.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, have 1000 of them. Never were they as nice as this year. Plants are as broad as long, from 12 to 20 inches in height, 3 to 4 perfect tiers, 20 to 30 inches across from tip of one tier to the other, 3, 4 and 5 yrs. old. 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00, up to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, perfect jewels in shape and size, their beautiful greenish blue tiers give them such a striking appearance, that anyone seeing them must fall in love with them on sight. Plants, 6 to 7-in. pots, 3, 4, 5 perfect tiers, 15 to 25 inches in height, from 15 to 30 inches across, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 to $2.50 each. Please bear in mind that the above mentioned varieties are the cream of Belgium's productions. We have thousands of them and can meet all demands.

Kentia Belmoreana, 6-in. pots, 4-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, bushy, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.25; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, 75c to $1.00 each. These are the sizes entered in the customs house.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

Greenhouse Heating.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

How much greenhouse glass can be carried on a boiler of eighty horse-power, steam being used and 60 degrees to 70 degrees required in the climate of western New York? How small a range of glass could be operated economically on this boiler? J. C. T.

The eighty horse-power boiler should be adequate to carry about 35,000 square feet of glass at a temperature of from 60 degrees to 70 degrees. I do not think it would be economical to use a boiler of this size on a steam basis with less than 15,000 to 20,000 square feet of exposure. This would make about one-half a load. L. C. C.

FIRES HARD.

There seems to be something wrong with our heating apparatus, as it fires too hard in severe weather. We use a Boynton No. 7 sectional water heater placed below the pipes. The flow is through five feet of 3-inch pipe to a 2-inch tee, from which three 2-inch pipes rise one inch in ten feet to the far end of the houses and fall back on the opposite side to the return tee. Our two houses are 12x35 and 14x40, side walls five feet, nine feet to the ridge. Each house is piped separately from the boiler. The expansion tank is over the boiler. In weather as cold as zero it is nearly impossible to keep the houses above 45 degrees, firing with Kanawa coal and wood. Have we enough pipe and boiler capacity? W. B.

The small house, 12x35 feet, in order to maintain a satisfactory temperature during the severe weather should be provided with ten lengths of 2-inch pipe. If the piping is all under the benches a 2-inch flow and four 2-inch returns on each side will be satisfactory.

The house 14x40 feet should have eleven lengths of pipe. If the piping is arranged under the benches a 2-inch flow and five 2-inch returns on the most exposed side, with a 2-inch flow and four 2-inch returns on the other side, will do the work. I do not have the rated capacity of the boiler you are using, but the boiler to do the work should not be rated at less than 1,000 square feet of radiation. L. C. C.

VIOLETS ON TABLES.

I have built a violet house 14x50 with 4-foot walls and with three benches three feet high. The house extends east and west. There is a 7-inch cement wall on the north side and it is double-boarded with building paper on the south side. I have a Wilks hot water heater and am ready to put in the pipes. I will be gratified for your advice regarding the correct position, etc. The Wilks Co. sent me a drawing showing the pipes under the benches. Is this right for a violet house or should they be on the side walls above the benches? How much lower should the boiler be than the flow pipes? Should the flow ascend? If so, how much? I am picking up a great deal of information from the REVIEW, and consider it my best investment. E. W. G.

It is an easy matter to tell you how much pipe to put in this house to maintain the required temperature for violets. But under the circumstances I will not guarantee satisfaction, because the type of bench construction used is not well adapted to the work in hand. The most successful violet growers use solid benches and overhead heat. My experience with violets on elevated benches, even with overhead heat, has not been altogether satisfactory.

I shall advise the use of coils on the side walls but do not think they will give house with one walk, or a 20-foot house with two walks are the most convenient dimensions for violet houses.

In your case, if you use hot water, as I infer you do from the heater named, you will need a 2-inch flow pipe under the ridge, returning just under the gutter on the side walls by four 1½-inch pipes on each side. The flow pipe should have an upward slope from the boiler to the far end of the house, say of six inches in the length of the house, and the returns an equal drop. The top of the boiler should be two feet or more below the lowest pipe in the house system. The expansion tank should be connected to the main return near the boiler and be elevated so as to be at least six feet above the highest point in the heating system.

L. C. C.

BOILER AND PIPING.

I have two houses 20x100, with walls four feet high, and two houses 27x100, with walls six feet high. My boiler is 3x12 feet, with thirty 3-inch flues. Is it large enough? There are two 2-inch overhead flows in each house and 1,200 feet of 1¼-inch pipe in each. Is it sufficient radiation in Missouri climate?

R. L. I.

radiation, or 2,200 feet less than you actually have. It would be wise to install two boilers of the size specified. That would give you a factor of safety of about 800 square feet of radiation, or enough to carry another cool house 20x100.

L. C. C.

TIME AND HEAT UNITS.

If ashes are put on the center of a burning mass of wood in the firepot to make it burn slower and longer, will we get the same amount of heat out of those pieces of wood as if we allowed them to burn up freely and shut off the draft?

J. F. D.

Provided that combustion is complete, i. e., the wood or fuel is completely burned, it will make no difference in the total amount of heat thrown off whether the burning takes place in one hour or four hours. The amount of heat given off in any given time will depend upon the rate at which the burning takes place, but the total amount will be the same whether the given quantity of fuel is burned quickly or slowly. Different fuel substances give off different quantities of heat for a unit volume, or weight of the material, but time is not a factor. In fact, there is just as much heat liberated when a cord of wood rots as when it burns. In one case the process is rapid and the heat is perceptible, while in the other it is so slow that the heat is imperceptible.

I am putting up two propagating houses, each 10x100 feet, side walls four feet, ridge seven feet. I am planning to heat with hot water. Can I trouble you to advise the best arrangement of piping for Minnesota climate?

F. F. L.

For propagating houses the plan of piping I should follow would be to run a 2½-inch riser under the ridge to the far end of the house. There take off two branches and return under each side bench with four 2-inch pipes, eight 2-inch pipes for the whole house. I should then box in the bench so as to confine all the heat possible underneath it, arranging the bench so as to leave about 1-inch space between the back of the bench and the wall of the house to allow the passage of heat and to keep the bench away from the cold side wall of the house. Hinge one run of boards so the heat can be liberated if desired.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

How much greenhouse glass can be carried on a boiler of eighty horse-power, steam being used and 60 degrees to 70 degrees required in the climate of western New York? How small a range of glass could be operated economically on this boiler? J. C. T.

The eighty horse power boiler should be adequate to carry about 35,000 square feet of glass at a temperature of from 60 degrees to 70 degrees. I do not think it would be economical to use a boiler of this size on a steam basis with less than 15,000 to 20,000 square feet of exposure. This would make about one half a load. L. C. C.

FIRES HARD.

There seems to be something wrong with our heating apparatus, as it fires too hard in severe weather. We use a Boynton No. 7 sectional water heater placed below the pipes. The flow is through five feet of 3-inch pipe to a 2-inch tee, from which three 2-inch pipes rise one inch in ten feet to the far end of the houses and fall back on the opposite side to the return tee. Our two houses are 12x35 and 14x40, side walls five feet, nine feet to the ridge. Each house is piped separately from the boiler. The expansion tank is over the boiler. In weather as cold as zero it is nearly impossible to keep the houses above 45 degrees, firing with Kanawa coal and wood. Have we enough pipe and boiler capacity? W. B.

The small house, 12x35 feet, in order to maintain a satisfactory temperature during the severe weather should be provided with ten lengths of 2-inch pipe. If the piping is all under the benches a 2-inch flow and four 2-inch returns on each side will be satisfactory.

The house 14x40 feet should have eleven lengths of pipe. If the piping is arranged under the benches a 2-inch flow and five 2-inch returns on the most exposed side, with a 2-inch flow and four 2-inch returns on the other side, will do the work. I do not have the rated capacity of the boiler you are using, but the boiler to do the work should not be rated at less than 1,000 square feet of radiation. L. C. C.

VIOLETS ON TABLES.

I have built a violet house 14x50 with 4 foot walls and with three benches three feet high. The house extends east and west. There is a 7-inch cement wall on the north side and it is double-boarded with building paper on the south side. I have a Wilks hot water heater and am ready to put in the pipes. I will be gratified for your advice regarding the correct position, etc. The Wilks Co. sent me a drawing showing the pipes under the benches. Is this right for a violet house or should they be on the side walls above the benches? How much lower should the boiler be than the flow pipes? Should the flow ascend? If so, how much? I am picking up a great deal of information from the REVIEW, and consider it my best investment. E. W. G.

It is an easy matter to tell you how much pipe to put in this house to maintain the required temperature for violets. But under the circumstances I will not guarantee satisfaction, because the type of bench construction used is not well adapted to the work in hand. The most successful violet growers use solid benches and overhead heat. My experience with violets on elevated benches, even with overhead heat, has not been altogether satisfactory.

I shall advise the use of coils on the side walls but do not think they will give house with one walk, or a 20-foot house with two walks are the most convenient dimensions for violet houses.

In your case, if you use hot water, as I infer you do from the heater named, you will need a 2-inch flow pipe under the ridge, returning just under the gutter on the side walls by four 1½-inch pipes on each side. The flow pipe should have an upward slope from the boiler to the far end of the house, say of six inches in the length of the house, and the returns an equal drop. The top of the boiler should be two feet or more below the lowest pipe in the house system. The expansion tank should be connected to the main return near the boiler and be elevated so as to be at least six feet above the highest point in the heating system.

L. C. C.

BOILER AND PIPING.

I have two houses 20x100, with walls four feet high, and two houses 27x100, with walls six feet high. My boiler is 3x12 feet, with thirty 3-inch flues. Is it large enough? There are two 2-inch overhead flows in each house and 1,200 feet of 1½-inch pipe in each. Is it sufficient radiation in Missouri climate?

R. L. L.

The piping is satisfactory for steam, particularly for the houses 20x100 feet, a little scant for roses in the houses twenty-seven feet wide, but all right for carnations and other cool stock. The boiler in question is just about half large enough to care for the plant in question. You have in the four houses, as piped, about 5,200 square feet of radiation, and the boiler has about 375 square feet of heating surface, which gives it a capacity to carry about 3,000 square feet of radiation, or 2,200 feet less than you actually have. It would be wise to install two boilers of the size specified. That would give you a factor of safety of about 800 square feet of radiation, or enough to carry another cool house 20x100.

L. C. C.

TIME AND HEAT UNITS.

If ashes are put on the center of a burning mass of wood in the firepot to make it burn slower and longer, will we get the same amount of heat out of those pieces of wood as if we allowed them to burn up freely and shut off the draft?

J. F. D.

Provided that combustion is complete, i. e., the wood or fuel is completely burned, it will make no difference in the total amount of heat thrown off whether the burning takes place in one hour or four hours. The amount of heat given off in any given time will depend upon the rate at which the burning takes place, but the total amount will be the same whether the given quantity of fuel is burned quickly or slowly. Different fuel substances give off different quantities of heat for a unit volume, or weight of the material, but time is not a factor. In fact, there is just as much heat liberated when a cord of wood rots as when it burns. In one case the process is rapid and the heat is perceptible, while in the other it is so slow that the heat is imperceptible.

Current Comment.

Fine weather has continued, but cool nights remind us that autumn is here. The drought still prevails and unless we get copious rains before hard frost arrives, the winter's loss among ornamental trees and in orchards will be serious. With the exception of department store openings, there have been no special events among our society folks, but nevertheless business for the whole summer has been much better than previous years.

Asters are about gone. Gladioli are fine and plentiful. Dahlias of good quality are more abundant, and roses and carnations increasing weekly, and improving in quality. Of the latter Lawson, Enchantress and Boston Market are mostly seen. There is no Lawson disease seen here. On the contrary, we never have seen this grand variety look so promising. Last Christmas scarlet carnations brought a most profitable price, but at other seasons were rather a drug, so not many are planted, and those mostly Flamingo and Palmer's Red Lawson.

Baseball is over, picnics are past, the ponies have gone south, so we are settled down to hard work for the winter.

The Democratic state convention was held in our city last week and we talked and heard of little else. I have not learned that democracy's presence here created any unusual demand for flowers. Something that comes in bowls is a much greater favorite with Tammany Hall and its braves.

Phil Scott has departed for Denver to join again his partner in business as well as partner for life, and babies. He spent several weeks with his brother, David, in the little village of Corfu, where steady application to the wheelbarrow increased his weight and improved his health.

George W. McClure is back from Scotland, charmed with the sights and welcome he received from old friends. He says Switzerland is the beauty spot of Europe and Kew Gardens the greatest example of horticulture.

Wm. Hewson, foreman for the Wm. Scott Co., was invited to act as judge at the New York state fair held in Syracuse. He filled the position most acceptably and as he was the guest of David Campbell, the able park superintendent of Syracuse, it is needless to say he had a royal time.

We have been honored of late by a call from James Wheeler, president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of good old Boston. As a horticulturist and all-round fine man Mr. Wheeler stands high in the community where he is best known. A. K. Rogers, of Readville, Mass., also gave us a call. These New England men came to Buffalo to see their old friend, Charlie Sandiford, and he can be proud of the model place he had to show them.

Miss Schultheis, head of the firm of that name of Scranton, Pa., was in town this week. This courageous little lady has undertaken a three weeks' western trip all alone and is going to get home safely. She is business from her little toes to the top of her shrewd head. Such a woman is a fortune to any man. She can talk florists' business far more understandingly than most men in the profession. ORCHIDS

FLORISTS' ORCHIDS.

A Modern Necessity.

The florist who is anxious to keep abreast of the times, and who is quick to note the growing tendency of the people for more variety and better produce, is constantly beset by the problem: Shall I raise orchids and thereby encourage the æsthetic tastes of my patrons, or shall I discourage the sale of orchids and purchase the blooms from a distance only when compelled to do so by an exacting customer?

This problem is also made more difficult to solve by the current idea that the culture of orchids belongs to the realm of mystery. The initiated refer to this as "the bugaboo of orchid culture." It is the opinion of the writer that if as much attention were paid to the orchids of the establishment as to the annual crop of geraniums, success would be assured.

No Mystery in Treatment.

While the writer hesitates to say that the culture of a mixed collection of orchids is an easy matter, yet it is true that the few species of orchids suitable for the florists' trade can be raised with success and profit if handled by a man of average intelligence, who will observe and follow a few quite flexible rules, such as refer to seasons of rest and growth, temperature, air circulation, etc.

Specially built houses are not required for florists' orchids, but low houses are preferable. No orchid should be grown more than four feet from the glass, and half that distance is better.

Nearly all of the florists' orchids may be considered as bi-products, as they may be suspended from the roofs of palm or fern houses, where a light shade is used during the summer months. Never hang the plants higher than easily can be reached from the walks, as the average man with the hose will not take the trouble to climb up to examine his plants, and either a too wet or too dry condition is the result.

Whenever there is a steady demand for orchids, space should be given on the benches to secure adequate attention and best light conditions. Wherever bench culture is resorted to there should be a double or false bench of narrow slats placed over the lower bench, as in this way perfect drainage is secured, and a moist atmosphere is maintained in the growing season by dampening the gravel or cinders on the lower bench.

Potting Material.

Never mount the plants on blocks or boards, as the plants soon deteriorate and lose their ability to produce bloom. It must be remembered that although it is difficult to kill an orchid, yet the starvation which is often the result of block culture will soon result in unprofitable plants. Pot the plants in either pans or half pots, or baskets.

For potting material, adhere strictly to orchid peat (osmunda fiber) and insist on getting young peat, as the old peat is too wiry and open to sustain the plants. Chop the peat with a hay-cutter, to save time, retaining the fine particles, which should be mixed with the coarse peat to form a denser potting material. Break a large hole in the bottom of the pan and place over it one large crock, no more. The old system of one-half crocks simply furnished a safe retreat for snails, sow-bugs and cockroaches, the chief enemies of orchids. It is a good plan to place the coarsest peat in the bottom of the pans, reserving the youngest and softest peat for the surface.

The Season of Rest.

It safely can be said that fully half of the amateur orchidists kill their plants by giving them too severe a season of rest. While it is true that in the tropics there is a long rainless season, yet the condensing of the moisture in the humid atmosphere of the tropics results in a heavy dew, which serves to sustain plant life during the dry season. This condition of affairs is vastly different from that of a greenhouse in the northern latitudes, where excessive firing is resorted to in order to maintain a moderate temperature in zero weather.

Never allow the pseudo-bulbs to shrivel. Water occasionally and syringe on all sunny days in the resting season, which should usually begin after the flowering, or at the maturation of the annual growth. Retard the formation of new growth as long as possible, by a drier condition and by a lower temperature. At this time all potting or top-biata, which blooms in autumn; C. Percivaliana, the Christmas cattleya, which, although smaller than most of the labiate section of cattleyas, has the most beautiful lip; C. Trianae, the most useful winter cattleya; C. Schroederiana, succeeding C. Trianae; C. Mossiae, blooming in the early summer; C. Gaskelliana, also good as a late summer orchid, but not so easily obtainable in quantity.

The Laelias.

Next in importance to the cattleyas are the laelias. L. purpurata is often referred to as the king of orchids. It blooms in the spring, has longer flower stems than the cattleyas, and in this respect is quite desirable. L. anceps, which blooms in early winter, is a desirable orchid, because of its long stems. The usual objection to this orchid is that its blooms are short-lived. If the stems are placed in warm water for a couple of hours, after being cut, the flowers will last much longer, as is true in the case of the poinsettia. This orchid can be obtained at a lower price than any other large-flowering commercial orchid. L. albida is a small-flowered species, but its free-flowering habit and white flowers, coming in at the winter season, make it exceptionally desirable.

Coelogyne and Dendrobiums.

One of the most valuable of all orchids is Coelogyne cristata. Its white flowers are produced in great abundance in the winter. It can be raised with profit in the north, along the Great Lakes and along the coast, but it would be a dismal failure as far south as St. Louis, without special provisions for cool treatment.

Dendrobium Phalaenopsis also is one of the finest of the florists' orchids. Its long, graceful sprays are excellent for cutting. It must be grown in a rather high temperature, and although a fall bloomer, it also blooms at various times. D. formosum giganteum is also an excellent orchid. Its large, white flowers may be used as substitutes for cattleyas. It does not, however, last long in cultivation. The stock must be replenished every few years.

Oncidium.

Standing in the first rank as a yellow orchid is Oncidium varicosum Rogersii.

dressing should be done. It is a good rule to pot one year and top-dress the next.

Fertilizers.

The question of fertilizers for orchids is easily solved. When sphagnum is used with the peat, it is better not to use manurial fertilizers, as they cause too rapid decomposition of the sphagnum, the result being the decay of the roots. With the peat system here advocated, it is well to use the Cookson formula, which is especially adapted for orchids and is much used in England. It is as follows: Three ounces of nitrate of potassium; two ounces of ammonium phosphate, dissolved in three gallons of water; use one liquid ounce of this solution to every gallon of water applied. Use this fertilizer about once each week during the growing season.

What orchids to grow is perhaps the most important question. They must be obtained in quantity and must be reasonably cheap. They must also flower at a season of the year when there is a demand. This point can be solved by each one for himself. In the north orchids may be disposed of at almost any season of the year, while farther south they would be a drug on the market during the summer months. By careful selection a continuous crop of bloom may be secured.

The Cattleyas.

The cattleyas are by far the most popular and profitable orchids on the market. They may be purchased by the crate, unestablished, at reasonable prices. For a succession of bloom, the following order may be maintained: Cattleya la-

This Show of Orchids would be Invaluable to Any Retailer.

Cattleya Mossiae.

This floriferous orchid may be obtained in quantity at a low figure. Its graceful spikes lend themselves to artistic treatment. It should be grown in a moderately cool house, on the benches. A little leaf-mold added to the peat would benefit this species, as its free-flowering propensities rapidly weaken the plants.

Cypripediums.

Among the many cypripediums, only one is suitable for the trade. This is C. insigne, which blooms just after the chrysanthemum season. This is a good Christmas flower. It must be given bench-room, but otherwise treated as other orchids. It is a mistake to try to grow the plant in leaf soil.

The Phalaenopses.

The most beautiful of all orchids, the phalaenopses, Schilleriana, the pink, and amabilis and its large-flowered variety, Rimestadiana, the whites, would undoubtedly command good prices and attract much attention if they were more successfully cultivated. The phalaenopses are not really difficult to raise and are extremely prolific. They require a high temperature and should not be disturbed at the roots any more than is absolutely necessary. If they are grown in shallow, broad baskets, in extra select soft orchid peat, and given a moist atmosphere, with no draughts, and a rather strong but subdued light, there should be no difficulty in attaining complete success. The plants should be hung not more than one foot from the glass.

The broad roots cling with such tenacity to the pan or basket that it is almost impossible to separate them with success. Therefore, it is better to place them in broad, shallow baskets, which can be built up each year, if necessary, to accommodate the growing plants. Before the growing season, and just after the moderate rest, which the phalaenopses require, it is well to carefully remove all the old peat and dead roots, washing out, with a small, strong stream from a hose, all the old material. Allow the plants to dry and then stuff carefully with the best peat obtainable. It is also well to place a wad of sphagnum on the surface (not all over, as it often induces a growth of algæ) to act as an indicator to make sure that the plants have sufficient water during the growing season. The whitish appearance of the sphagnum will quickly indicate the dry condition.

Culture and the Future.

Many more might be added to this list of commercial orchids, but a sufficient number have been enumerated to supply flowers at almost every season of the year. It also is easy to obtain specific directions for the culture of each species, but common-sense, coupled with a little knowledge of the condition under which the plants grow in a state of nature, will soon be the sole guide for the successful orchid grower.

The orchid has come to stay and the heavy demands of recent years have made such inroads upon the natural supply that it will not be many years before we will be unable to obtain the large-flowering orchids from the tropics. But there always will be a good supply of hybrids, which each year are getting to be cheaper and which will soon be within easy reach of the progressive florist. The chief value of the hybrid lies in the fact that it blooms, in many cases, several times each year, and therefore requires a much shorter, if any, season of rest.

In conclusion it is the opinion of the writer that the chief reason why orchids are barred from culture by most florists lies in the fear of failure, and not because they do not desire to have the prestige which a window full of orchids would bring them. The remarkable fact about the orchid trade is that it has developed in spite of the opposition it has encountered, and the record of the past few years shows that it will not be long before orchids will be considered as staple as the commoner flowers of the day.

A GOOD BOUVARDIA.

Bouvardia Humboldtii corymbiflora is one of the few fragrant members of the bouvardia family. Although it has been in cultivation over thirty years, it is rarely seen in either private or trade collections. It is, however, coming back into publicity, like many other old and half-forgotten plants. It comes into flower earlier than the other members of the family, blooming continuously from August until November. Its large, jasmine-like flowers are excellent for bouquets, for choice design work and are highly prized by ladies on account of the rich perfume, which is strongest at night.

Propagation may be effected either by root or soft wood cuttings, the latter being, if anything, preferable to the former. If kept pinched and potted on in a warm house they soon make good plants. They should be planted out in rich ground at the end of May, occasionally pinched and lifted ere the last of September. If shaded for a few days and well syringed they readily recover from the effects of removal. They do not need a high temperature to flower in. A carnation house suits them well. After flowering they may be cut back, kept somewhat dry and stored in a cool house until planting out time comes around again.

This bouvardia is worth growing for the flowers it furnishes while in the open ground. It may be left out until cut down by frost. Then the roots can be dug, placed thickly in boxes and stored for planting another year. Roots two or three years old make big plants and furnish a lot of cuttings, but younger stock propagated during winter will make nice bushes. This is much the best of the bouvardias and merits more extensive cultivation. The flowers are highly prized by all critical buyers. W. N. C.

COUNCIL OF HORTICULTURE.

Arrangements have been made for a meeting of the National Council of Horticulture, at Chicago, Friday, November 9 at 10 a. m. Delegates are requested to meet at the flower store of P. J. Hauswirth, 227 Michigan avenue, and from there will go to a room in the Auditorium Annex, where the sessions will be held.

Details for the press bureau work for the coming year will be considered and acted upon, together with the matter of holding a national congress of horticulture and horticultural exhibition at the Jamestown exposition in 1907. It is expected that a report will be made by Robert Craig, who is making a personal visit to the Jamestown Exposition Co. for the purpose of investigating the practicability of a congress and exhibition. Other matters which should be brought before the council will be considered at this time.

Anyone having thoughts or suggestions for the consideration of the council is asked to correspond with the secretary or if possible to be present at the meeting of the council and present his views. H. C. IRISH, Sec'y.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Hydrocyanic Acid Gas.

I notice in the REVIEW for September 27 an inquiry from W. R. G. and a reply by Mr. Scott regarding the use of cyanide for scale insects. If Mr. Scott could see the way tons and tons of cyanide are used here in fumigating citrus trees he would soon admit that it is sure death to scale. I have yet to see anything it would not kill—even plants, if used strong enough—but in proper hands it is harmless, some say even beneficial to all vegetation, though thoroughly destroying all insect pests, except red spider, possibly. We have here in purple scale a variety much more tenacious of life than any of the greenhouse varieties and yet it is being almost entirely cleaned out where thorough work is done. Mr. Scott should come to California if he wishes to learn how to fight scale insect pests.

FRED RAFFERTY.

How Insects Breathe.

With deep respect and admiration for our mutual friend and benefactor, Wm. Scott, and only because he asked for a call-down, and always takes one in a way that makes him still more beloved by his brother florists, whether they know him personally or not, I would like to take exception to his expression, "insects which have lungs," a remark I have noticed a few times from his pen.

I always read Mr. Scott's "Miscellaneous Seasonable Hints," with much interest, and he does us more good than we imagine, always hitting some nail on the head, or making us suddenly remember something neglected; but to come back to the subject, no insect breathes through lungs proper, as in the mammals, but through a number of openings, "spiracles," found along the sides of the body, and leading into a system of air tubes extending to all parts of the body. This holds good with only minor variations for all classes of insects or hexapoda, be it a scale, thrips, aphid, fly, bee, beetle, or butterfly. The red spider is not a true insect but belongs, as the name would suggest, to the order of spiders. Thanking Mr. Scott for a good many dollars saved through his hints and excellent Manual, I would respectfully recommend to him another manual, "Comstock's Manual for the Study of Insects," a book that ought to have a place next to his own on every florists' bookshelf. GOLDEN SPUR NARCISSUS.

Supposing you have put the bulbs in flats as soon as received, they should be well rooted by December 1 and then can be brought into the greenhouse. They will do well for two or three weeks beneath a bench in a cool house, then put them in a temperature of 75 degrees, with shade overhead, and they should be in flower by January 15. The Golden Spur is the finest of all the moderate-priced narcissi. W. S.

MORRISON, ILL.—Davis Bros. are completing a new show house of ample size and lighted by electricity.

SOIL FOR VIOLETS.

After using soil in the greenhouse one season for violets, can it be taken out and spread on the ground a foot thick, sown with clover or grass for three years, turned several times, and then be used again with good success. W. C. P.

In answer to this query I would say that this is the one way to do, and I should not be afraid to try using the soil again if circumstances demanded. Yet if I could get other soil I should do so, as violets are more than particular and if it were possible we would never use the soil the second time for them, preferring not to take any chances of making a failure for the lack of such a precaution. R. E. S.

GRASS FOR NAME.

Enclosed please find a kind of grass of which I would like to have the correct name. W. S.

The grass, so far as can be determined from the condition of the specimen, is the ray darnel perennial rye grass (Lolium perenne). Another darnel (Lolium temulentum) has the evil distinction of being the only poisonous grass known, at least its seeds once had the reputation of stupefying those who ate them.

SNAPDRAGON AND CANDYTUFT.

When should the seeds of snapdragon and candytuft be sown for winter forcing in greenhouses? What variety of each is the best for the purpose? I wish to grow them for cut flowers.

W. H. O.

Candytuft can be sown at once. Sow in shallow drills across the bench and thin out as they grow. Try the White Empress, also some of the White Rocket. They need the full light and should be grown cool.

The snapdragon, or antirrhinum, should have been sown two or three months ago to flower during winter. Seeds sown now would not flower until February. I would advise you to buy plants if you desire flowers at the holidays. Field-grown plants are advertised in the REVIEW. W. S.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

A Deal in Futures.

The early flowering varieties will now be giving bloom of quite good size and length of stem, that is, if allowed or encouraged to do so, but this is a matter concerning which every grower must be governed by conditions of his market.

As a rule carnations are not much sought for while chrysanthemums are in season, therefore it would seem advisable to conserve a portion of the plants' energy that would be expended in bloom production to be used at a later time when the divine flower is in brisk demand and higher in price. Every fall we see quantities of carnations sold at very low prices, the growers claiming the retailers will not pay decent prices, consequently no disbudding is done, with the result that the blooms are small, the stem short and weak and the stock in general anything but inviting. The fault is not with the retailers, but with those growers who hold a cent so close to the eye that they fail to see the dollar at arm's distance.

October Crop Not All Profit.

Do not imagine by harvesting large crops now, when artificial heat is not an item of expense, that whatever is realized is all velvet. Of course you will need a certain amount of bloom to maintain regular shipments or supply local trade, but see to it that this be of the best grade possible, for as truly set forth in a recently published essay by Mr. Skidelsky, "Superior product is sure of market."

Disbudding.

The operation of disbudding must be carried on religiously at all times, primarily to increase size of bloom and substance in stem, but also to prevent useless waste, for is it not reasonable, in the plant's attempt to develop several buds on a stem that the energy expended on the superfluous side buds is out of keeping with economy? If this be true in any degree, it is easy to see the reason for curtailing somewhat on bloom production at this time of year. Give the time taken to develop buds a little study.

Go over the beds twice weekly, cutting at the most two buds at one time from the well furnished plant. Allow the buds to develop fairly well, but not showing color, and cut stems just as if taking off fully developed flowers. The removal of buds at intervals contributes to the continuous flowering habit and prevents the serious check likely to result in removing too much tissue at once.

Two weeks of this treatment is generally sufficient and during that time many buds will have been removed from a thousand plants, but with care and judgment in selecting such as can well be spared, the increased returns will pay for these and the time consumed many times over. GEO. S. OSBORN.

LEAF-SPOT.

Under separate cover I send you samples of Lady Bountiful carnation foliage which died at the tips of the leaves. Otherwise the plants are looking fine and are making a rapid growth. Can you tell me what the trouble is and what remedy to use? My soil is a piece of sod manured in the fall, turned under and another coat of manure spread over and left until spring, when it is plowed and harrowed every week until housing time. Before taking into the house a treatment of bone-meal was used, but no fertilizer has been added since planting. C. G.

Your Bountiful are suffering from an attack of the common leaf-spot, or Sep-toria dianthi. To combat this disease you must keep your plants overhead as dry as possible, or as their condition will warrant. Reduce the syringing to once each week from now on, and if the plants are entirely free from red spider it would be well to dispense with the syringing altogether until you get them free from this disease. It delights in a close, humid atmosphere, and so you want to work in just the opposite direction. Give all the air you can and sunlight. Give water at the roots liberally to promote a strong growth, but do it early in the day and select bright days to do your watering, so that all excessive water will evaporate before evening. Dusting the plants with lime and sulphur will help materially, especially during rainy spells. Allow it to remain on the plants several days before washing it off.

You will be running a little fire heat before long now and you should paint one steam pipe in each house with a rather thick paint made of lime and sulphur in equal portions and water. Paint about half of the upper side of the pipe, which will be strong enough. By painting about three feet and skipping that much each time you will get it about right. A small crack of air should be left on when the sulphur is applied to the pipes to prevent it from getting too strong. It is liable to take the color out of the colored blooms when too strong.

The bone-meal in the soil would not start this trouble, although it might add some to the foulness of the air if it were applied in large quantities and thereby aggravate the case.

A. F. J. BAUR.

ROSES

COMBATting GREENFLY.

With the approach of cool weather greenfly will begin to be troublesome, and if neglected will soon overrun the house. The damage these pests can create in a short time among the soft wood, foliage and tender buds can hardly be estimated.

In order to keep the house clear of greenfly, fumigation should be practiced periodically and persistently, as no one effort is sufficient to keep the house clean for any length of time. When a house is fairly clean of greenfly a mild fumigation, if carefully performed once a week, will keep them so effectually in check that no great damage can occur.

The conditions favorable to satisfactory fumigation are, first, a rather lower temperature in the house than the normal, and especially on a day when the glass is colder than the house temperature, as this has a repellent effect on the fumes crowding them downward towards the plants. Second, the soil in the benches should be moderately dry and the act of fumigating should be performed when evaporation is at a minimum, so that there will be no tendency to floating. These conditions are best obtainable just at daybreak.

The fumes do not require to be kept in the house longer than twenty minutes, as by that time, if the fumigant is of the right quality and strength, the work should be complete, and any longer retention of the fumes causes a stale smell in the house.

As soon after fumigating as possible, if the day is favorable, the foliage should be thoroughly syringed. This will wash off those flies not yet dead and freshen up the house.

Of course, these instructions do not apply to fumigation where the agent employed is cyanide of potassium, which requires special instructions for its use.

RIBES.

SCALE ON ROSE PLANTS.

Will you kindly tell me the name of this insect? I found it on my roses. I often see it around this country. Please tell me all about it. M. E. A.

These specimens were dead and dried up, which makes identification difficult. They are, however, scale insects (Lecanium), and seem to be the variety hemisphaericum. They are usually found on old and neglected rose plants, both inside and outside of the greenhouse. They can be controlled by spraying with whale oil soap, kerosene emulsion, or, if they are in the greenhouse, by the fumes of hydrocyanic acid gas. If they are not too numerous they can be removed by using a stiff brush and a wash of any pure soap.

RIBES.

CLOTHILDE SOUPERT ROSES.

Will you please let me know how Baby Rambler roses and Clothilde Soupert should be treated at this time of the year? Plants are out in the field.

C. U.

A liberal treatment of these roses would be to lift them at the end of October, or before we get very severe weather. Pot them in sizes that will just hold their roots and plunge the pots in a coldframe. Cuttings of both these roses of the moderately ripened summer's growth will root readily now, or a week or two later. If there is a slight bottom heat so much the better. Keep the plants in frames from severe freezing and do not let the soil in the pots get dry. Freezing when the roots are starved and the sap is all out of the wood is what kills.

W. S.

NECK CRACKING.

Please tell me what is the trouble with my Wm. Duckham chrysanthemums? The buds have attained the size of a silver quarter and are splitting off at the neck, just under the bud, with a horizontal crack. The bench was watered three times with weak fertilizer made from cow manure and about the end of July received a top-dressing of about a quarter of an inch of loam and manure. The Duckham is in a bench with other varieties that are all right. Will the flowers develop? How can I stop the splitting?

EXHIBITOR.

The trouble is caused by the pumping up of more sap than the bud can assimilate and the cracking of the stem is Nature's way of checking the flow. Duckham, in common with other very strong growers, needs little stimulant to cause some of the buds to crack, and even in extreme cases to snap right off the stem. Roses, when growing rapidly and highly fed, will do the same thing, hybrids growing in pots more particularly. In the case of the mum I believe a heavy watering, even with clear water when the roots are dry and thirsty, will produce this trouble. Exhibitor's flowers will finish all right and the split stem will be hidden by the flower except in one or two cases, but he at once should stop feeding any varieties so affected and keep the beds more on the dry side from now on. Always heed the danger signal and when you see the neck of a flower splitting at once stop feeding.

THE STANDING WREATH.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a large funeral piece made by George Launey, who conducts a store at 42 State street, Chicago. It was for the funeral of young Mr. Steele, of the Steele, Wedeles Co., where the funeral flowers were estimated to represent $2,000. This piece stood eight feet high. In it were used 600 Marshall Field roses for the wreath. Lilies of the valley were the only other flowers used in the wreath, which was of loose construction now considered essential in the best type of funeral work. The green was adiantum and heightened the loose erect. The base wreath was of American Beauty roses. The fact that the ribbon used was eight inches wide will give some idea of the size of the design.

FUNERAL FLOWERS.

How many galax leaves are required to make a first-class job in constructing a wreath on a 20-inch or 24-inch frame? Should one or two leaves be wired to each pick? Also, what is the latest and best way to make a flat bunch of roses or carnations? Is it necessary to use a form of any kind?

A. H. D.

A first-class job might be done in making galax wreaths by the use of widely varying numbers of leaves. Some florists make a galax wreath with the leaves flat on the moss, simply overlapping each other; 100 to 150 leaves will suffice. The best style of galax wreath is made by wiring one, two, or three leaves with full length stem on a toothpick. The use of varying numbers of leaves to a pick facilitates the making of a finished job. Two leaves to the pick would be used for most of the work. The leaves being wired on long stems makes the wreath loose and full. Such a wreath on a 20-inch to 24-inch frame would require 250 to 300 galax leaves.

Flat bunches of roses or carnations are made without any sort of frame where the stock used has sufficiently long and strong stems. Where shorter stock is used the maker-up usually takes leucothæ sprays for the base, merely attaching his flowers by wrapping the stems with silkline, or No. 24 wire.

WASHINGTON.

A Commission House.

It may surprise many to learn that a market or commission house for the exclusive handling of flowers, has never been established at the national capital. While flowers are sold in the Center, Riggs and other markets, they are but a cipher compared to the other lines of business carried on at these places. Briefly stated, there is not, and never has been, a place where a retailer can go and be reasonably sure of getting what he wants. It is now proposed to remedy this inconvenience and at the same time provide a place where the small and large growers will, with good stock, be placed on an equal footing. On October 5 a meeting of growers and retailers was held at the store of Mayberry & Hoover, at which preliminary arrangements were made to open a commission house. It was decided that a corporation composed of growers and retailers with a capital stock of $25,000, the holdings limited to not more than $3,000 each, could handle the business satisfactorily. One-half the stock was immediately subscribed and there seems no doubt that the project will be successful. Among the most interested are Mayberry & Hoover, Z. D. Blackistone, W. W. Kimmel, Grillbortzer Bros., C. E. Brooks, Henry Pfister and J. A. Philipps. In the section of Virginia and Maryland adjacent to Washington great developments have recently been made in commercial growing. It is hoped and believed that a commission house will be a boon to such growers as well as a time saver to those in the business in the District of Columbia.

Club Affairs.

The annual dahlia exhibit of the Washington Florists' Club was given October 2, as briefly reported last week, in Scottish Rite hall, on G street northwest. The new varieties attracted much atten-and Kriemhilde belongs to the same classification, only it is done in a beautiful blush rose pink.

Everybody was pleased with the show. The club has been in existence since 1886, but only began to get its growth about three years ago, and this is declared the best exhibit to date.

As an incentive to competition, prizes and certificates were awarded by a committee, including George Cooke, George Field, Charles McCauley, George Shaffer and J. E. Anderson.

First-class certificates were awarded Richard Vincent, Jr., & Son, of White Marsh, Md., and W. R. Gray, of Oakton, Va. Honorable mention was given W. W. Evans, of Hamilton, Va.

It is proposed to give an exhibit of roses in December, for local dealers, under the direction of the officers. Peter Bisset, president; Z. D. Blackistone, vice-president; Charles McCauley, secretary, and William H. Ernst, treasurer.

The great feature of the local club's existence, however, is to be the convention of the American Rose Society, in Washington, in March, 1907. The finest roses grown in this country will be displayed, and some of the prominent grow-

PAUL R. B. PIERSON.

The demise of Paul R. B. Pierson, at Tarrytown, N. Y., September 28, has been chronicled. He was known to all the visitors to the establishment of his son, F. R. Pierson, and was held in much esteem. In speaking of his father's life the son said:

"In his early life he was a wood engraver when wood engraving was an art, and before the days of mechanical processes. He was one of the best wood engravers in the country, until his eyesight failed, when he retired, which is now quite a number of years ago. Since that time he has made the greenhouses his headquarters, in which he was much interested, as you know, as he loved everything that grew; in fact, I rather attribute my taking up the florists' business to his interest in such matters when I was a boy. When he was a young man he had charge of the engraving department in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in Washington, from 1857 to 1859. In later years he was associated with Benson J. Lossing, the historian, in business, and afterwards succeeded him. He was afterwards on the Century staff.

"His death was sudden, and although he had had pleurisy for some little time, he was gaining constantly, and we expected he would recover until the day he died, when heart failure set in, and he sank rapidly, until his death on Tuesday night. Only a short time ago he was walking to Scarborough for exercise—a five miles' walk—which for a man of 78 years of age showed his bodily vigor, and his mental vigor was as strong as that of a man of 40. His death to us, although we knew he was ill, was very sudden, because he seemed to have years of a strong, interesting life ahead of him."

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business was good the entire week. The weather, however, was disagreeable last week and colder, and nearly every one cleaned up with fair prices. Jack frost is looked for any day now. When it comes the outdoor plants will close their eyes and the market will be better for the indoor stock. Carnations seem to be plentiful for this time of the year and enough to meet the demand. Chrysanthemums are coming in slowly, while roses are still plentiful. Greens of all kinds are now more steady. Callas are making their appearance.

To Revive Flower Show.

By a unanimous vote the Park Board, Tuesday night, decided to revive the custom of holding flower shows in the park greenhouses during the spring and fall of each year. The first show will be held in the fall of 1907. Owing to the fact that the greenhouses are at present filled with flowers and plants for the parks and squares it will be impossible to hold a show during the coming spring.

The custom of holding flower shows was abandoned several years ago. It is thought that by the use of proper safeguards the shows can be held at a reasonable cost. To obviate the abuse of giving away the flowers grown for the exhibition it is proposed to adopt stringent rules. Mayor Timanns is strongly in favor of holding the flower shows. He attended the meeting of the Park tion. Among them were conspicuous the Twentieth Century and Pink Century. The Grand Duke Alexis and democratic Mrs. Jones were in harmonious juxtaposition. The Countess Lonsdale showed long, red petals, which radiate in flaming points like badly painted sunsets, ers will attend. Mr. Bisset is solely responsible for the convention, as he presented the argument that Washington would be the best city for the convention, since it is according to his statement, "one of the worst supplied cities for flowers in the land."

Board Tuesday night and seconded the motion for holding the shows. Commissioner Edward D. Booze brought the matter up and spoke of the large crowds that were attracted by the exhibitions in former years.

Various Notes.

Dahlias are among the charms of autumn flowers.

The exhibition of dahlias at the Fernery, 1421 North Charles street, is attracting attention. Over 200 varieties are shown. There are dahlias named for Florodora operas and dahlias named for the aristocracy. The flowers are arranged on all sides of the room, which makes the effect of a beautiful bower, reddened by autumn leaves. Some of the varieties come near rivaling the chrysanthemums. The show is under the management of J. D. Blackiston and is the first of a series that will be held this fall. When King Chrysanthemum time rolls around this blossom will be shown. Over 150 varieties, it is expected, will be exhibited, and carnation and rose shows will also be held. Mr. Blackiston also expects to give an exhibit of bulbs.

Plans for a botanical garden at Homewood Greenhouse are made and it will likely be the first building erected. Under favorable conditions it is hoped to develop a garden as typical of the flora of our region as the Castleton gardens, and it will be one of the sights of the city and one of the centers of botanical study.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The last week's business had a more encouraging look. Carnival week and the veiled prophet's ball helped trade some, but not as much as some of the downtown florists looked for. Still a nice trade has been reported in other lines, especially small weddings and funeral work. The cold nights have shortened up outdoor stock so that little of it comes in except cosmos.

Chrysanthemums are scarce as yet. The horse show which is on this week generally uses up quite a lot of them. As the show is two weeks ahead of last year, American Beauties will have to take their place. Quite fine roses are coming in. Brides and Maids are most plentiful. Richmonds are in more than usual. Fancy long Beauties are in better supply, also other grades in these.

Carnations are in big demand at advanced prices: Extra fine white, Lady Bountiful and Boston Market; in dark pink, Joost and Lawson, and light pink, Enchantress. These are in better flower and longer stems than any of the others.

Extra fine lily of the valley can now be had at $4 per hundred. Violets are improved, the cool nights giving them better color. Cosmos is plentiful in all colors. Asters, dahlias and gladioli have departed. Tuberose stalks still are coming in. Plenty of Asparagus Sprengeri, smilax, and adiantum are in the market.

Various Notes.

J. D. Thompson, of Joliet, Ill., was a visitor last week.

Chairman Smith will call a meeting of the trustees of the club this week to lay out plans for entertaining the members the coming season. Mr. Smith says there will be something doing at every meeting. By this the attendance will be greatly increased.

The Bentzen Floral Co. had a prettily decorated wagon in the label parade last Thursday morning.

Grim & Gorley also had a handsome wagon in the label parade. Vincent Gorley was on top throwing out carnations along the route.

J. F. Windt, on Bayard avenue, has his large showhouse stocked up with fine plants, both blooming and decorative.

Henry Braun, late foreman for A. Jablonsky, now is with Alex. Johnson, 6311 Easton avenue.

H. J. Weber & Sons, and J. W. Schuette & Co., are sending out handsome illustrated catalogues.

W. H. Kruse, who has a fine stand on Arsenal street, reports plenty of orders for fall planting. Trade in cut flowers and design work also is looking up.

Two florists' bowling teams will be formed to bowl every Monday night at the new De Soto alleys. One will be known as the Wholesalers, the other the Retailers. Those who will compose the teams will be: Wholesalers, Ed. Gerlach, Geo. Schriefer, Otto Bruening, Will Smith, Fred Alves; Retailers, H. Lorenz, L. Giger, W. Adels, H. Young, J. Arata. Your correspondent has offered a gold medal valued at $10 for the bowler making the highest average for the season. We understand that other prizes will be offered for these teams by some of the wholesale houses. Those wishing to offer any prizes should see Will Smith who will have charge of them.

PAUL R. B. PIERSON.

The demise of Paul R. B. Pierson, at Tarrytown, N. Y., September 28, has been chronicled. He was known to all the visitors to the establishment of his son, F. R. Pierson, and was held in much esteem. In speaking of his father's life the son said:

"In his early life he was a wood engraver when wood engraving was an art, and before the days of mechanical processes. He was one of the best wood engravers in the country, until his eyesight failed, when he retired, which is now quite a number of years ago. Since that time he has made the greenhouses his headquarters, in which he was much interested, as you know, as he loved everything that grew; in fact, I rather attribute my taking up the florists' business to his interest in such matters when I was a boy. When he was a young man he had charge of the engraving department in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in Washington, from 1857 to 1859. In later years he was associated with Benson J. Lossing, the historian, in business, and afterwards succeeded him. He was afterwards on the Century staff.

"His death was sudden, and although he had had pleurisy for some little time, he was gaining constantly, and we expected he would recover until the day he died, when heart failure set in, and he sank rapidly, until his death on Tuesday night. Only a short time ago he was walking to Scarborough for exercise—a five miles' walk—which for a man of 78 years of age showed his bodily vigor, and his mental vigor was as strong as that of a man of 40. His death to us, although we knew he was ill, was very sudden, because he seemed to have years of a strong, interesting life ahead of him."

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business was good the entire week. The weather, however, was disagreeable last week and colder, and nearly every one cleaned up with fair prices. Jack frost is looked for any day now. When it comes the outdoor plants will close their eyes and the market will be better for the indoor stock. Carnations seem to be plentiful for this time of the year and enough to meet the demand. Chrysanthemums are coming in slowly, while roses are still plentiful. Greens of all kinds are now more steady. Callas are making their appearance.

To Revive Flower Show.

By a unanimous vote the Park Board, Tuesday night, decided to revive the custom of holding flower shows in the park greenhouses during the spring and fall of each year. The first show will be held in the fall of 1907. Owing to the fact that the greenhouses are at present filled with flowers and plants for the parks and squares it will be impossible to hold a show during the coming spring.

The custom of holding flower shows was abandoned several years ago. It is thought that by the use of proper safeguards the shows can be held at a reasonable cost. To obviate the abuse of giving away the flowers grown for the exhibition it is proposed to adopt stringent rules. Mayor Timanns is strongly in favor of holding the flower shows. He attended the meeting of the Park tion. Among them were conspicuous the Twentieth Century and Pink Century. The Grand Duke Alexis and democratic Mrs. Jones were in harmonious juxtaposition. The Countess Lonsdale showed long, red petals, which radiate in flaming points like badly painted sunsets, ers will attend. Mr. Bisset is solely responsible for the convention, as he presented the argument that Washington would be the best city for the convention, since it is according to his statement, "one of the worst supplied cities for flowers in the land."

Board Tuesday night and seconded the motion for holding the shows. Commissioner Edward D. Booze brought the matter up and spoke of the large crowds that were attracted by the exhibitions in former years.

Various Notes.

Dahlias are among the charms of autumn flowers.

The exhibition of dahlias at the Fernery, 1421 North Charles street, is attracting attention. Over 200 varieties are shown. There are dahlias named for Florodora operas and dahlias named for the aristocracy. The flowers are arranged on all sides of the room, which makes the effect of a beautiful bower, reddened by autumn leaves. Some of the varieties come near rivaling the chrysanthemums. The show is under the management of J. D. Blackiston and is the first of a series that will be held this fall. When King Chrysanthemum time rolls around this blossom will be shown. Over 150 varieties, it is expected, will be exhibited, and carnation and rose shows will also be held. Mr. Blackiston also expects to give an exhibit of bulbs.

Plans for a botanical garden at Homewood Greenhouse are made and it will likely be the first building erected. Under favorable conditions it is hoped to develop a garden as typical of the flora of our region as the Castleton gardens, and it will be one of the sights of the city and one of the centers of botanical study.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The last week's business had a more encouraging look. Carnival week and the veiled prophet's ball helped trade some, but not as much as some of the downtown florists looked for. Still a nice trade has been reported in other lines, especially small weddings and funeral work. The cold nights have shortened up outdoor stock so that little of it comes in except cosmos.

Chrysanthemums are scarce as yet. The horse show which is on this week generally uses up quite a lot of them. As the show is two weeks ahead of last year, American Beauties will have to take their place. Quite fine roses are coming in. Brides and Maids are most plentiful. Richmonds are in more than usual. Fancy long Beauties are in better supply, also other grades in these.

Carnations are in big demand at advanced prices: Extra fine white, Lady Bountiful and Boston Market; in dark pink, Joost and Lawson, and light pink, Enchantress. These are in better flower and longer stems than any of the others.

Extra fine lily of the valley can now be had at $4 per hundred. Violets are improved, the cool nights giving them better color. Cosmos is plentiful in all colors. Asters, dahlias and gladioli have departed. Tuberosa stalks still are coming in. Plenty of Asparagus Sprengeri, smilax, and adiantum are in the market.

Various Notes.

J. D. Thompson, of Joliet, Ill., was a visitor last week.

Col. Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, is a caller.

M. Butterfield, of the Farmington Nursery, at Farmington, Mo., was in town last week looking for help.

Smith & Young, of Indianapolis, Ind.,

The New Location of Welch Bros., Boston.

are sending to Ellis a fine lot of Brides and Maids.

W. C. Smith & Co., are handling a fine lot of small ferns, also large Boston and Whitman.

Chas. A. Kuehn spent a day at the Springfield fair which he says was a great success. George Angermueller also spent a few days at the Springfield fair and reports a great show in all lines, especially in the floral line.

Chairman Smith will call a meeting of the trustees of the club this week to lay out plans for entertaining the members the coming season. Mr. Smith says there will be something doing at every meeting. By this the attendance will be greatly increased.

The Bentzen Floral Co. had a prettily decorated wagon in the label parade last Thursday morning.

Grim & Gorley also had a handsome wagon in the label parade. Vincent Gorley was on top throwing out carnations along the route.

J. F. Windt, on Bayard avenue, has his large showhouse stocked up with fine plants, both blooming and decorative.

Henry Braun, late foreman for A. Jablonsky, now is with Alex. Johnson, 6311 Easton avenue.

H. J. Weber & Sons, and J. W. Schuette & Co., are sending out handsome illustrated catalogues.

W. H. Kruse, who has a fine stand on Arsenal street, reports plenty of orders for fall planting. Trade in cut flowers and design work also is looking up.

Two florists' bowling teams will be formed to bowl every Monday night at the new De Soto alleys. One will be known as the Wholesalers, the other the Retailers. Those who will compose the teams will be: Wholesalers, Ed. Gerlach, Geo. Schriefer, Otto Bruening, Will Smith, Fred Alves; Retailers, H. Lorenz, L. Giger, W. Adels, H. Young, J. Arata. Your correspondent has offered a gold medal valued at $10 for the bowler making the highest average for the season. We understand that other prizes will be offered for these teams by some of the wholesale houses. Those wishing to offer any prizes should see Will Smith who will have charge of them.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business was unusually brisk last week, cleaning up the market. At present writing chrysanthemums have not put in an appearance, but they are expected momentarily. Funeral work has created a demand for light-colored stock, carnations especially. Saturday evening it was next to impossible to obtain white carnations or Enchantress.

Roses are improving rapidly, prices ranging from $3 to $6 per hundred. The best carnations bring $2. Green is not plentiful.

Club Meeting.

The first meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club in its new quarters was well attended. Cigars were passed several times during the evening, it being housewarming night. Secretary Sullivan was absent from the city. A new entertainment committee was appointed, as follows: William Brown, Robert Rahaley and William Hielscher.

At a special meeting of the officers a program was arranged for the ensuing year. It was approved and ordered printed in pamphlet form for mailing to members. It was also decided to send to each member about three days before a meeting a postal stating what is doing that particular night.

The president and his staff deserve much credit, as the program is complete, containing everything from a smoker to a series of essays by the club's ablest speakers. It therefore is the duty of each member to attend meetings as much as possible, for even a theatrical troupe prefers to act to a full house.

The opening of the question box brought forth some interesting discussions on various subjects. "In spraying with nicotine must it come in contact with the insect?" This question was answered with a decided yes, it being stated that this insecticide emits no fumes. Painting a solution of four parts water to one part nicotine on the steam pipe was also spoken of as being effective. In doing this the operator must walk rapidly so as not to inhale the fumes.

The old question of keeping boarders was again thrashed out. Breitmeyers' are building a special house for this purpose. Robert Watson also has one house devoted to boarders. Azaleas and plants in poor condition he positively refuses to keep. For good plants he charges $1 per square foot.

Fred Pantke brought some chrysanthemum foliage, showing the disastrous work of the leaf-miner. This pest in the form of a maggot of a creamy color, about a quarter of an inch long, could plainly be seen at work in the leaves; in some leaves three and four were visible. Mr. Unger, gardener at Belle Isle, will experiment on this new trouble.

Albert Pochelon was given a vote of thanks for a design presented to the club. It represented a four-leaved clover, was made of cabbage and other vegetables and wild asters. A butterfly made of skeleton leaves, true to life, rested on one corner of the design.

Henry Fruck showed a vase of some fine flowers of cockscomb from a strain of seed raised by himself.

Beside Mr. Sullivan's paper, Harry Hunter has been asked to read a paper on herbaceous plants at the next meeting, October 17.

Various Notes.

Thomas Browne, of Greenfield, slipped and wrenched his knee in bad shape, laying him up for some time. Although not yet able to work, he gets around with the use of crutches.

Henry Fruck, of Grosse Pointe, after about five years' experimenting, has succeeded in obtaining a new seedling of a cactus dahlia. The flowers measure four and a half to five inches across, are supported on long, wiry stems, with foliage similar to a rose. The color is a fine cerise-red, becoming more gorgeous under artificial light.

The business at 245 Woodward avenue, known as George Leadly, has changed hands. The business is to continue under the same name, with Mrs. Allen P. Cox as proprietor and manager.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Business started out the past week in good shape on account of a few fashionable weddings, but slackened up Wednesday and Thursday, and there was not a great deal doing the balance of the week, with the exception of funeral work orders, which were unusually heavy with some of the dealers. It can be safely said that the cut flower buyers are home into winter quarters. Loose cut flowers are selling nicely; the demand about equal to the supply. The stock is now the best. It is very noticeable that there are a great many more roses of a second grade than what there are of the first; the result is that the prices are lower. Good seconds are selling for $1 per dozen, while firsts are easily sold at $1.50 per dozen. Killarney and Moulton seem to be the best pinks and good stock of either variety is easily sold. Kaiserin is very fine with some of the growers. In fact, the good results from it have had a tendency towards growing it exclusively instead of the Bride. Many more Ivories have been planted this season than heretofore. Perles seem to have been almost entirely discarded and the yellow roses on this market are shipped in. The carnations so far are not a success. Few good blooms are cut. The plants look well, but the flowers are small and inferior. In consequence, prices are away down. The writer has not seen any stock that is worth more than 50 cents a dozen.

St. Paul.

The St. Paul Floral Co. has been cutting some fine stock. The repairs made on their houses during the summer months give them an entirely different appearance. From the looks of the stock at the present time it appears as though they would be making heavy cuts in a short time. Frank Gustafson, the proprietor, reports a good trade.

The Warrendale Floral Co. has been bringing in some very nice Richmonds. The stems are not very long, but the blooms are almost perfect.

Vogt Bros. report a fair trade. The opening of the Aberdeen hotel in their locality will undoubtedly help them out.

Minneapolis.

A visit to the Minneapolis Floral Co. shows some extensive improvements. They have installed new boilers, built a large brick boiler-house and added three large greenhouses 135 feet long to their plant. The Kate Moulton rose is largely grown and heavy cuts are made daily. Mr. Monson, the proprietor, has also been successful with Richmonds and Kaiserin. He has a number of sports from the Moulton, including a pure white, which show up well. His chrysanthemums are looking well. His 45,000 carnations are in good shape, but the cuts so far are small.

O. S. Swanson seems to have the demand for Moultons, especially first grade stock. He reports a fair trade and fully up to expectations. FELIX.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Local demand has increased during the last week and shipping business continues brisk, so that the market has passed through a quite satisfactory seven days since last report.

The feature of the market has been the transfer of demand from American Beauties to chrysanthemums. The run on Beauties has continued for more than a month and, indeed, there still is a brisk call for them, but in the last week the interest has centered on the queen of autumn. It appears that chrysanthemums generally are later than had been expected and those who were fortunate enough to have crops of early flowers have realized prices much better than usually prevail in the first ten days of October. It has taken $3 to buy anything coming in and some of the stock which has fetched that price was about as poor as ever was sold in this market. A fortnight hence such flowers will not be worth a 2-cent postage stamp. It has been impossible to fill anything like all the orders sent in for mums.

The rose market has taken a decided slump. Brides are more abundant and Bridesmaids are being cut in quantities which preclude a good market for all the stock. The best grades have weakened only slightly in price. It is the short stock that suffers most. Good Richmond is seen and sells fairly well, better than Liberty. Chatenay is not so abundant. Killarney is seen in fair quantity. There are varying reports as to its salability.

There are all the violets the market needs, for demand is not brisk. Harrisii lilies continue to advance in price. Asters are nearly gone although we have not yet had a frost. Dahlias are received in considerable quantity but are not readily salable. A few tuberose are received and sell well, for white carnations are not yet abundant. Colored carnations also continue short of the demand and prices rule strong on all good stock in this department. The green goods market is well supplied but the demand is excellent.

The change to cool weather on Tuesday has had the result of shortening receipts to a certain extent in all departments, welcome as to Brides and Maids but unfortunate as to other items. We had our first light frost on the night of October 9. Only the tenderest plants suffered. Cold weather in the northwest is reflected in the demands made on this market by that section.

Employees' Ball.

The wholesale florists' employees will give their first annual ball at Columbia hall, 638 North Clark street, October 31, Halloween. The committee on arrangements consist of H. W. Rogers, E. C. Benthley, Charles Ernie and Leonard Kill. J. P. Risch is treasurer. The boys plan most lavish decorations and a high class event. The refreshments will be non-alcoholic.

Greenhouse Builders Enlarge.

As everybody knows, this has been a record season for the manufacturers of greenhouse building material; indeed, they have been running to the limit of their facilities. One and all they have confidence in the future and are preparing to enlarge their capacities for next season.

The John C. Moninger Co. will erect a new building adjoining its present plant and exactly doubling the floor space, installing new and improved machinery.

The Foley Mfg. Co. will erect an entire new plant, the old factory being held under lease expiring next spring. It now is entirely inadequate to the needs of the business. Of course the new building will be large enough for further development and up-to-date in every particular.

The A. Dietsch Co. put up a new building last year and has floor space enough to handle its business for some years but needs more machines and more power to operate them. These will be installed this winter.

Various Notes.

C. L. Washburn says that if chrysanthemums sell as well during the balance of the season as they have to date it will be a record season for the growers. Bergmann, Monrovia and Fitzwygram are the principal sorts seen. Mr. Washburn says they could have sold several times as many as they were able to get last week.

W. W. Randall is sending souvenir postal cards from the New West Baden Springs hotel, West Baden, Ind.

Most of the supply houses are handling American Beauty brand tissue, made especially for florists' use by Hollis & Duncan. It is heavier, stronger and better finished than ordinary tissue and it is being shipped all over the country by the local supply dealers.

The Flower Growers' Market is taking on new activity and at the same time the season's fresh coat of white paint.

Edgar Sanders celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday anniversary yesterday. There were, as usual, a number of visitors, as several make it a point to set apart October 10 for a call on this popular pioneer florist.

A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, says they have been obliged to turn down orders for probably 5,000 chrysanthemums more than they have been able to supply in the last fortnight.

Fletcher James, son-in-law of George Wittbold, has resigned his position as carnation foreman for the George Wittbold Co. and has bought out Mrs. Weber's plant at Des Plaines, Ill. The houses contained chrysanthemums, violets and miscellaneous stock, but Mr. James shortly will put the place in carnations.

Jos. Foerster, who has charge of Geo. Reinberg's selling department, says that in his opinion there has been much superheated atmosphere employed in the exploitation of the Killarney rose. They have it in good shape, but do not find the buyers blocking the door in their rush to get it.

The retailers have been calling on McKellar this week for large quantities of Dendrobium formosum for bridal bouquets. He has received in the last few days several shipments of this orchid as fine as ever were seen in this market.

N. J. Wietor is enthusiastic over October Frost, the early white chrysanthemum with which they have been doing so well in the last fortnight. It is the best of the early whites and all that they have cut readily have brought $4 per dozen. Mr. Wietor says they have received many requests for large quantities of stock plants, but that they will reserve the stock for their own use next season.

Leonard Kill is the fortunate possessor of two boxes for the series of national championship baseball games. Kruchten & Johnson state that they will shortly be in need of all their space for chrysanthemums. One grower advises them that he will have 200 dozens for All Saints' day, November 1.

Kennicott Bros. Co. received 4,000 asters October 8. Much of the stock was excellent and all of it readily salable because of the difficulty of finding good carnations.

The Florists' Club meets tonight. There was a meeting of the executive committee of the Horticultural Society of Chicago at the Auditorium Monday evening, at which flower show preparations were forwarded.

N. J. Rupp spent last week in Milwaukee. Poehlmann Bros. Co. is at it again. At the state fair at Springfield last week they made practically a clean sweep, capturing all the firsts on roses and carnations except one or two won by H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford. August Poehlmann staged the stock.

J. A. Budlong is cutting heavily of Bridesmaid, much heavier than Bride. The E. F. Winterson Co. reports a good sale for field-grown carnation plants. An advertisement in the REVIEW which cost them $2.10 brought orders for about $100 worth of stock.

H. N. Bruns says that he has on hand a good many less cold storage valley than he used last year in the period which must elapse before the new crop can be flowered. As the demand for valley is increasing right along, he will not be surprised to see a shortage and high prices for good valley in this market in November and December.

Percy Jones visited the Des Plaines growers last Sunday and says stock is looking well with all. E. H. Hunt's say that while not so many Chatenay are grown as last season, still there are enough for all requirements. Among the week's visitors were: F. H. Kramer, Washington, D. C., on his way home from Mexico; P. S. Amstutz, of P. S. & I. B. Amstutz, Toledo, O.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA.—Evenden Bros. are pushing work on one of the largest and most up-to-date houses they ever have added to their place. BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—Henry Burt has purchased the entire stock of the old Sanatorium greenhouse, thereby adding considerably to his present supply. He is building an addition to his greenhouse. LAWRENCE, KAN.—C. M. & S. L. Luther have been established for fifteen years and have a large local and shipping trade. They have 9,000 feet of glass and plan the addition this fall of a house for palms and ferns.

Current Comment.

Business in this part of the world is beginning to move along. We have a few changes in the way of stores. Mrs. Suder moved her store from Adams, near St. Claire, to a location opposite the Central high school on Madison street. Instead of using only half of a store, as before, she now has a whole store, with a fine basement, and as Madison street is the natural outlet for our best residence district, there is no reason why she should not break all records. The store is well fixed up, looks neat, and is under the management of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Gallo-way, who surely are the right people in the right place.

Another firm has started in business on St. Claire street, near Adams, under the name of the Schoen Floral Co., under the management of Frank Schoen, late of G. A. Hehl's store force and before that of Murdoch's, Pittsburg. Mr. Schoen says that the business so far exceeds all expectations. This is an incorporated stock company with plenty of capital back of it.

The Perennial Gardens Co., under the management of J. L. Schiller, started in business last spring. A tract of land, including the building of the late Ziegler Filter & Pottery Co., at Miami, a suburb of this city, was bought and planted with a lot of hardy stock that turned out well. At present they are busy putting up six houses 18x125, Moninger material, to be heated by hot water with a Kroeschell boiler under forced circulation. The houses are to be used for palms, ferns and a general line of catalogue stock. They have just received a large shipment of peonies from Holland and Mr. Schiller reports the bulb business as coming along nicely.

I. N. Keller, of Bay Shore, has just finished a house 25x100, which he intends to use for sweet peas and a general line of stock.

Wohler Bros. are putting up two houses 27x100 to be used for lettuce this season and later for carnations and mums. Their carnations are doing nicely.

S. Peck has his two new houses on South street planted and the carnations are looking well. The houses are 22x100 feet.

T. Magee, of Scottwood, is justly proud of his Gloire de Lorraine begonias. His roses also are fine. His poinsettias are not as good as in former years, yet they are good.

I have to report the death of Nic Feitz, a native of Luxemburg, who for a number of years managed St. Mary's Catholic cemetery. He worked before that for a number of years for Mrs. H. Suder and G. A. Hehl.

C. F. Imobersteg, a native of Switzerland, died September 27 at his home on Western avenue, where his greenhouses also are located. One of his sons is continuing the business and one daughter is married to Otto Krueger, of Krueger Bros.

At our last club meeting, which was entirely informal, our president and secretary being absent, Mr. Schiller showed a fine bunch of dahlias and a lot of the newest cannas. E. A. Kuhnke displayed a lot of Bostons in 5-inch and 6-inch pots and a few cut carnations, including Rose Pink Enchantress and some of his latest seedlings, among them Cranky Peggy, a carnation that splits its calyx all around and which, on account of the large number of petals, looks like a snowball or chrysanthemum. The Detroit Florists' Club, after inspecting a few flowers last season, called it a freak.

The Market.

Cut flowers are selling much better and prices have stiffened somewhat since our last report. Until the chrysanthemum deluge arrives a good market is likely. Roses are doing somewhat better. Even short-stemmed Brides and Maids have made $2, while top grades have sold up to $8 per hundred. The best whites still are Kaisersins. Of these some fine blooms arrive. Chatenay and Wellesley show a steady improvement. Some fair Liberty and Richmond are coming in. The last named fades, which is not in its favor. Beauties are appearing with longer stems and the best have made $4 to $5 per dozen.

Chrysanthemums are becoming more plentiful and bring $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen. These include some good Monrovia, Glory of Pacific, Polly Rose and Bergmann.

Carnations are plentiful but clear well. Enchantress, as usual, is the dominant variety and would seem to be more largely grown than ever. A great many growers continue to pin their faith in Lawson. Fancy blooms are making $3 and poorer grades down to $1.50 per hundred. Violets, especially singles, are abundant. These are largely picked outdoors, as a big proportion of the plants are not housed until they get a good freezing. Prices average 50 cents, a few select bringing 75 cents per hundred. Asters now are scarce. Nice blooms readily bring $2 and more could be sold at these prices. Gladioli are about over. Tuberoses have a small call. Lilium longiflorum and a few L. Philippinense are seen. Dahlias have only a moderate sale. A slight hardening tendency is noted in green stock.

Various Notes.

At the Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting on October 16 in addition to the paper by J. B. Velie on "Greenhouse Construction," there will be an exhibition of geraniums by young gardeners, for which several money prizes are offered. There will be other interesting exhibits and a good deal of miscellaneous business to be transacted.

Paul E. Richwagen still is marketing a splendid lot of asters which now bring the highest prices of the season.

Brockton Fair, New England's greatest outdoor carnival, held on October 2 nearly opposite their old place at 24 Tremont street, where they have an up-to-date store.

H. M. Robinson & Co. now are occupying Welch Bros.' old premises. We expect their next move will be to a store on one of the prominent business streets, as their output shows a continuous increase.

J. T. Butterworth, of South Framingham, has a grand show of Cattleya labiata and other seasonable commercial orchids. At present these are being more used than ever by the higher class of stores.

E. Sutermeister still is busy putting bulbous stock in flats and pans. He has bought more heavily of these than usual this season and reports his stock as being unusually fine.

Mann Bros. are bringing in fine lots of dahlias to the markets. Somehow these flowers do not seem to meet with much appreciation in Boston, but we think there is a future for them. As long-stemmed flowers, however, they are not a success.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, have, as usual, an immense quantity of chrysanthemums, some of which they now are marketing. Their big stock of carnations looks unusually well this season.

The annual exhibition of fruits and vegetables at Horticultural hall on October 10 and 11 proved the best seen here in years. The collections of vegetables arranged for effect were telling features.

A call on Welch Bros. showed that about everything now is in smooth running order in their fine new store. A large showcase for novelties in plants and flowers in one of the large windows will prove interesting. The firm has issued a neat map showing the location of the store.

WHOLESALE GROWERS OF CUT FLOWERS

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business along all lines is showing improvement. The wholesale houses are cleaning up nicely with a shortage on lilies, Beauties and carnations. A few chrysanthemums are coming in, but not enough to cut any figure. A number of the growers will be in this week with their early varieties. There are quantities of short roses which have been selling cheaply. Among the retailers there is more life, some early weddings helping business considerably, but the small retail trade is slow, as any who have gardens can still cut a bunch of flowers, for we have had no sign of frost up to this time.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening. The notice said there would be some surprises in store for the members, and there really were, as the meeting was the most interesting and profitable one we have had for a long time.

Some carnations were shown by Mr. Lorch, and Fred Burki introduced the carnation subject, giving much valuable information, the result of his years of experience, answering all questions, and there were many. The principal query was regarding stem-rot in Lawson, which has caused so much trouble in this section. The greater number laid the blame on the wet season in the field, while some thought the variety was gradually weakening. Mr. Lorch, whose stock is probably the least affected of any, blamed it on the handling after they were housed; but some growers who have always been successful would not stand for that, as they had planted their own stock and Lawson was the only thing which went back. They then brought some stock from Ohio and other places and planted that with the same results, and which made them more positive that the variety was weakening. I believe this was the general opinion. A few growers have replaced their Lawsons with some other varieties of pink and we ought to be thankful for that.

Schenley park showed a lot of fine decorative plants and W. J. Smith was then called on to offer suggestions on how to use such plants for decorations, and also for remarks on window decoration. He offered many good suggestions on what to do and what not to do. William Loew showed a basket of vegetable flowers, which was quite an artistic piece of work, and has one advantage over cut flowers, and that is when tired of looking at them you can make soup out of them.

David Frazer, who has just returned from Europe, was to have told us his opinion of how they do things on the other side, but his talk was held over until the next meeting, which will be a chrysanthemum night, and will certainly be worth keeping in mind and attending.

Various Notes.

With a friend I visited the Pittsburgh Rose & Carnation Co. last Thursday. Their stock is looking better than ever before at this season. They will commence cutting chrysanthemums Monday. Mr. Burki took us out to see a new oil well they are drilling, and we were just in time to see a flow come just as the driller was taking the tools out of the hole, and there being nothing to hold it, the oil squirted forty feet into the air, completely soaking the drillers, who were trying to shut it off. I have heard since that it looks like a sixty-barrel well. They are installing an immense new boiler and at the same time building a new boiler-house. Hoo-Hoo.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Good, clear, crisp, exhilarating weather opened the present week, with nothing in the wholesale cut flower market in excess of the demand and prices steady at last week's improved level. Shortage in supply and no sign of the coming mum flood will doubtless keep the ship on an even keel all this week and so maintain the good nature of the wholesalers and the growers. What will happen when the chrysanthemum river overflows its banks? We must judge by the experiences of other years. Doubtless you will hear the slump 1,000 miles away. It always comes. It is patiently expected and it has never been known to disappoint, so keep your eye open and wait. The advance guard is already knocking at the gates, splendid flowers, the best of them commanding $6 a dozen. But they are yet few and far between. Before the week ends many a stream of them will center here and the retail windows will be ablaze with them.

Violets have not begun to improve. Quality, color and demand all demonstrate the wisdom of the contention never to ship a violet to the New York market before the middle of October. If growers will heed this suggestion next year it will be dollars in their pockets and the depressing send-off of this and other seasons avoided. That first crop should never get beyond its own barnyard.

Beauties are scarce and the best are independent; $30 per hundred is easy and some bring even more. Quality is improving as the mercury descends. Good Maids and Brides, too, are booming and $6 to $8 was asked and given without argument. The lower grades have sold rapidly. Carnations look like themselves again. Enchantress leads the upward tread and many of the old favorites again are on deck. Lawson is especially brilliant.

Orchids are abundant, all seasonable kinds. Every window worth while has a beautiful display. This seems to be orchid week in earnest. Prices are firm and advancing. Contracts are booked away ahead, and for the season. McManus tells me "the orchid is king."

Lilies bring better prices, also valley and as for the once despised dahlia, never has such fine stock in such great variety reached New York and they begin to be appreciated and as they deserve. The new varieties bring good prices and all through the present week they will hold their place and re-assert their claim to recognition.

It is gratifying to see the season's opening made so early and hopefully and to know from now on the florists' business will boom daily until the "robins nest again."

Club Meeting.

Nearly fifty members were present at the club meeting Monday evening. The interest was maintained until nearly 11 o'clock. The next meeting, the second Monday in November, will be ladies' night, chrysanthemum night, and the banner meeting of the year.

The special committees read resolutions on the deaths of Roger O'Mara, Joseph Johnson and James Weir, Jr.

Committees on resolutions on the deaths of the mother of S. Burnett and the father of F. R. Pierson were appointed.

Messrs. Zvolanek, Turner and Lovett were elected to membership and Lewis Olsen and Andrew Carlson were proposed.

The resignations of Edward J. Taylor, of Southport; Samuel Thorne, of Millbrook, and John Champion, of New Haven, Conn., were read and accepted with regret. On Mr. O'Mara's motion Mr. Thorne was elected an honorary member of the club.

Charles Totty reported for the committee on awards for the following exhibits and the thanks of the club were tendered the exhibitors: Gerbera Jame-soni magnifica, by O. V. Zangen, Hoboken, N. J.; dahlias, by H. Beaulieu, Woodhaven, L. I.; dahlias, by Fred Hollender, Ozone Park; Chrysanthemum Mrs. R. Fothergill, a new pink variety by Mr. Totty, on which judgment was deferred; Andrew Wilson, of Summit, N. J., exhibited his own plant oil and insecticide.

President Scott announced the nomination committee and suggested the re-opening of the question box at future meetings and other methods of increasing the general interest in the club's advancement.

Mr. Jaenecke, of Queens, L. I., proposed for immediate discussion: "Is a Stove Plant a Greenhouse Plant?" A spirited discussion of an hour resulted. Messrs. O'Mara, Beaulieu, Birnie, Wheeler, Nugent, Scott, Weathered, Zeller, Lenker, and others took part and great interest and merriment resulted. It was finally moved that the term "stove and greenhouse plant" be considered obsolete and abolished, and that they be classified hereafter as greenhouse plants and that this suggestion be made to all the horticultural societies in the United States, and was unanimously approved.

The house committee, under the leadership of Prof. Nugent, maintained its seductive and satisfying reputation.

Various Notes.

Killarney roses are popular and a great demand is evidently on the tapis for the winter. Richmond is itself again, or getting there.

George Mathews, the sweet pea expert, of Great Neck, is back from Scotland, where he spent the summer.

C. W. Ward has returned from his various journeys in his own country, his trip to Europe having been postponed. His fine carnation novelties are already here and bringing top prices as usual.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Craig, of Philadelphia, were in the city last week celebrating anniversaries and enjoying the great white way. Mr. Craig reports an unusual stock and demand for his bulbs and other specialties and is optimistic

Traendly & Schenck will open their upper floor this week, giving them about double their former space and in time for the big chrysanthemum display which they intend to make and which may be safely predicted will be one of the best fall shows in the state and well worth a visit from the out-of-town florists who come now daily to purchase their yearly supplies, palms, ribbons, etc., in ever increasing numbers.

Russin & Hanfling, the supply men, now occupy the entire building at 114 West Twenty-eighth street, and will build an extension shortly. Their factory has been removed to these premises and their business is growing fast. Among their novelties are many new basket designs.

Reed & Keller have just patented another sago palm clasp, so simple and effective that the one only recently placed on the market has been recalled. Delph watering cans, shoes and figures are other novelties here that should be seen. Night work already is necessary here. The supply season has opened on time and it promises with all the supply men to exceed all records.

The Geller Supply Co. has added the entire second floor to its space and has now no more room than needed. Novelties are numerous and business is constantly increasing here.

Gunther Bros. are ready for all the increased business the establishment of the reorganized firm deserves. Abundant space and conveniences all will be utilized. They anticipate a steady supply of orchids during the season. Many new growers are on their books. They have had a fine dahlia trade during the last three weeks and have done much to make this flower popular in New York.

at the house of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., over 2,000 Enchantress being used. Mr. and Mrs. Leikens have returned from Newport after a most satisfactory season there.

The Horticultural Society of New York has an exhibition of hardy flowers on Wednesday and Thursday of this week at the Museum building, Bronx park. This, too, is the opening meeting of the winter sessions of the society. Dr. Britton is in Jamaica, in company with Dr. Underwood and Professor Evans, of Yale.

Several New Yorkers are going out November 6 to see how Chicago handles flower shows. They may be considered "from Missouri."

Our seed and bulb houses are having the season of their lives. Every firm is busy and demand exceeds all records. Specification seems unnecessary where all are prosperous. Those whose facilities make window display possible have kept up the interest of the public by constantly changing novelties. Henderson, Thorburn, Boddington, Stumpp & Walter Co., and Rickards Bros. all have windows worth crossing many a bridge to see.

In all the retail florists' windows the value of unique and attractive daily change of decoration is more and more apparent. Autumn leaves already are in evidence. Beautiful vases in dozens of new designs add effectiveness. Orchids especially give tone and style. Hydrangea paniculata, Eulalia Japonica zebrina, tritomas and now chrysanthemums hold the pedestrian in admiration. The windows of the retailer are an index as to his ability and prosperity. They speak "with no uncertain sound."

McManus, at orchid headquarters, has a wonderful assortment of all the leading varieties on exhibition. His big store on Twenty-eighth street never is without a generous supply from many of the leading orchid growers of the country. The bookings for the October orchid weddings indicate a boom in both the matrimonial and orchid market.

P. J. Donohoe, superintendent of the Morris K. Jessup estate, and uncle of W. H. Donohoe, the retail florist, died October 1. Mr. Donohoe was universally respected. He was gardener for James Gordon Bennett, John Jacob Astor, and in his present position during the past sixteen years. The funeral was largely attended and the floral offerings numerous and beautiful.

John Seligman & Co. have, with added ice-box and office facilities, one of the most complete and convenient stores in the wholesale district. They are adding to their staff of growers rapidly. The last year has been an eventful one for both members of the firm.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

At the Mineola fair Mr. Jaenecke, of John Lewis Childs, took fifteen first prizes on fifteen entries for plants, distancing all competitors.

Francis J. Reynolds, who died in Brooklyn September 27, was a prominent lower Fulton street florist, and as the son of Thomas and Catherine Reynolds was well known in that section of the city, where his parents had lived for many years. He was born in Brooklyn, and never was married. He had lived for some time with his brother George at 230 Bergen street, from which place the funeral was held.

George Julius, 115 Lexington avenue, presented William R. Hearst with a handsome floral emblem, nine feet high, made of red roses. The tribute was a token of personal esteem from the florist to Mr. Hearst.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The conditions prevailing in the cut flower market this week are most unusual for the season. There is a surprising scarcity of choice stock, noticeable chiefly in carnations and in roses. The dahlia still reigns supreme; quality and quantity have never been equalled in this market. This popular flower goes a long way towards making up the deficiency felt. Violets have made their appearance in sufficient quantity to be a factor in the market. The singles are of course the more plentiful, but a few doubles of fair quality can be had.

Chrysanthemums made their appearance September 12, as mentioned in this column, but until this week there were never enough to be seriously considered.

Now, however, the vanguard of the early varieties are here in force. Glory of Pacific, pink, Mrs. Kalb, white, Tint of Gold, and Polly Rose, white, have reinforced Monrovia, making a fair assortment. Prices, however, are high, as always at the beginning of the season. Orchids are finer and more plentiful than we have ever had them in this market. Cattleya labiata is the main factor but a general assortment can readily be secured. The cooler nights have done much to improve the quality of roses. Both Beauties and teas are rounding into form, although it will take some time yet before we have the best stock that our growers can produce.

It is noticeable that carnations are far behind last season at this time. Growers who were shipping by the thousand are now shipping by the hundred only. This is due partly to the wet summer, many plants failing to mature rapidly, partly to the prevalence of stem-rot, and partly to the misapprehension on the part of the growers as to existing conditions. The supply of early chrysanthemums will be a week or ten days later than usual, leaving a vacuum in the market that the carnation could do much to fill.

A New Industry.

Philadelphia has been accustomed for so long to depend on the neighboring cities of New York and Washington and the towns of Summit and Rutherford for orchids that it is difficult to realize than an orchid specialist has been steadily at work for some time supplying this market. Through the courtesy of Samuel S. Pennock Phil was enabled to visit the greenhouses of Alphonse Pericat at Collingdale in Delaware county, where orchids are specialized. Mr. Pericat, though a comparatively young man, has devoted over a quarter of a century to study and care of his favorite flower. When only 12 years of age he began his life work in France, and since then he has had charge of the Rothschild collection in that country, and of large private collections here. A few years ago he started for himself and while his business is still of modest proportions he feels that there is a growing demand for the flowers he produces.

The most striking features of an orchid establishment are the large capital required to fill the greenhouses in proportion to the cost of construction. A carnation grower, for instance, who spends several thousand dollars on greenhouses can ordinarily stock them for a comparatively small amount, whereas the orchid grower, on the contrary, spends far more on his stock than he does on his houses. The orchids are gathered by collectors in different countries, chiefly South American. A collector sends natives out in the woods where the plants abound. These natives gather and deliver them to the packers, who ship them to the grower. Great destruction is wrought among the orchids by carelessness in gathering, many immature and half dead specimens being sent here that are worthless when received.

The principal varieties grown are Cattleya labiata now in bloom, Cattleya Trianae, probably the most profitably, as it blooms during the party season, Cattleya Schoderiana, Cattleya Mossiae, that blooms during May and June, Dendrobium formosum, white, and oncidiums, yellow, and last but not least Cypripedium insigne. Mr. Pericat has some specimens of beautiful fancy orchids that are, alas, not appreciated on this side of the water, where size is a too important attribute. The orchids are grown almost entirely in pots, set on boards. No ashes are used, as it is important that they dry quickly. The stock was in very fine condition, giving promise of a large cut this season. One block of Cattleya labiata that had just come through the custom house, was being potted and appeared to be almost ready to flower. It is needless to say that these were not freshly gathered orchids. Mr. Pericat is an enthusiast in his work, as all successful growers must be, and his ideas were full of interest to his visitors.

An Advanced Age.

The rather prosaic business of selling bulbs and seeds must according to modern ideas have some poetry in it to become really successful. Anybody can put a few bulbs in a vase but it takes an artist to make those bulbs so attractive that people jostle and crowd each other in order to see them, and their purses fly open as though by magic to secure some of these same bulbs. With flowers this is not so extraordinarily difficult as with bulbs, for nature intended flowers to be beautiful, whereas bulbs are merely the workers that produce beautiful effects, and to make them charming is a pretty difficult thing. This has been accomplished at a seed and bulb warehouse in this city where the windows, scrupulously clean and neat, are most effectively arranged with ferns, green lights and Japanese figures, all setting off to the best possible advantage a display of Chinese sacred lilies and their kindred water-loving bulb, Narcissus grandiflora Soleil d'Or. These windows are the H. F. Michell Co.'s, and to put the case algebraically, as Charles Baxter is to Pennock Bros., so Phil Freud is to Henry F. Michell.

Various Notes.

Harry Bayersdorfer, the merchant prince of this city, is tremendously overworked at this time. He does not mind this, but the unavoidable detention of certain cases in the custom house, needed to complete outgoing orders, is most exasperating.

Leo Niessen humorously describes the situation by saying that the florists of the universe have not yet been aroused. The sun still rises in the east.

Some of the visitors reported at M. Rice & Co. this week were M. Johnston and Mrs. Johnston, of Baltimore, Md.; Bernard Hobbs, of Mann & Brown, Richmond, Va.; George Blind and Mrs.

The Rutledge Nurseries, Rutledge, Pa., are sending fine Glory of Pacific chrysanthemums to Edward Reid.

William Swayne, of Kennett, Pa., is sending choice Mrs. Kalb chrysanthemums with long stems to William J. Baker.

Gerschick & Oellers, of Germantown, are cutting choice Glory of Pacific and Polly Rose. Their carnations are in fine condition.

The advance in express rates affecting wild smilax will prove a serious factor to the decorators.

The Millbrook-Lee Greenhouses, Maull & Howell, Whitford, Pa., are sending fine carnations to William J. Moore.

Berger Bros. are receiving choice consignments of violets. Their first chrysanthemums, Glory of Pacific and Polly Rose, came in on Wednesday.

The October meeting of the Germantown Horticultural Society was devoted to dahlias, sent by leading specialists, and gentians, gathered by the botanical committee at Limerick, near Collegeville, Pa.

M. J. Brinton, of Christiana, Pa., is sending extra fine smilax to W. J. Baker.

Edward Reid is one of the most important factors in the carnation market today. He is strong both on quality and quantity.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. are receiving some fine Beauties.

Both Myers & Santman and George Burton are beginning to cut Beauties heavily. These two growers are mainstays of the Leo Niessen Co.

Max Roeder, in charge of the greenhouses of Lewis Burk, of Olney, has a very fine Japanese garden under his care.

A. J. Pennock, the valley king, will join the benedicts November 1.

Fred Berger, of Germantown, has been devoting the past week to a careful survey of the field before the serious work of the season commences.

ILLINOIS STATE FAIR.

The florists' department of the Illinois State Fair at Springfield last week was unusually well filled, thanks to the efforts of the Illinois State Florists' Association. Albert T. Hey, of Springfield, was on hand all week, representing the association. President J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, had expected to be there, but was called home by a telegram announcing the death of a nephew in a railroad accident. The display of cut flowers and plants was one of the most attractive features of the grounds and the building was thronged all the week. The increase in premiums served to draw out better competition. Following were the awards:

Collection of stove and greenhouse plants effectively arranged—George Van Horn, Springfield, first; David Wirth, Springfield, second; Albert T. Hey, Springfield, third.

Twelve palms grouped for effect—David Wirth first, George Van Horn second.

Six palms grouped for effect—George Van Horn first, David Wirth second.

Two palms—George Van Horn first, David Wirth second.

One palm—George Van Horn first, David Wirth second.

Twenty-five ferns distinct, one of each—Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, first; Albert T. Hey second.

Four adiantums, distinct, one of each—Albert T. Hey first.

One araucaria, large specimen—Vaughan's Seed Store first, Albert T. Hey second.

One specimen fern, any variety, not less than a 10-inch pot—Vaughan's Seed Store first, Geo. A. Kuhl second.

Collection of crotons, not less than twenty plants—Vaughan's Seed Store first.

Collection of geraniums, not less than twenty-five plants—David Wirth first, Albert T. Hey second.

Collection of begonias, including ornamental foliage and flowering kinds—David Wirth first, Albert T. Hey second.

Collection of succulents—H. Janssen, Springfield, first; Albert T. Hey second.

Collection of bulbs—Vaughan's Seed Store silver medal.

Collection of Baby Rambler roses—Vaughan's Seed Store first, Albert T. Hey second.

Twenty-five American Beauty roses—Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, first; A. C. Brown, Springfield, second.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 26th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

At Elkhart, Ind., Oliver and Joseph H. Grosh are preparing to open a feed, implement and seed store.

THE frost kept off long enough to give the vine seed growers all that was coming to them from this year's crop.

If the Long Island seed crops will only do the right thing there may be cabbage seed enough to go around.

THE Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., has purchased the stock of Philippine lily bulbs grown by Dr. Neeley, of Paulding.

THE latest reports from the Pacific coast are more encouraging. There will be some fair deliveries made on onion seed after all.

THE long, warm autumn has been favorable to the tomatoes ripening for seed and the yield will be larger than was anticipated.

FROM present indications it looks as though the coming year will be a good one for the seedsman who has the right sort of stock on hand.

FOR the fifth successive year the Archias Seed Store, Sedalia, has won first premium for its display of seeds at the Missouri State Fair.

THERE is some complaint from onion growers that the bulbs are not keeping well this year. As might be expected, they blame the seed for this.

It is reported that neither peas nor beans will cause much anxiety to either the grower or the purchaser after the returns are all in. It is not stated when that will be, however.

THE onion set grower is asked to guarantee that his goods will remain firm and sound for three months after they are in the warehouse of the purchaser. This is asking almost too much.

VISITED CHICAGO: Max Wilhelmi, of Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kan.; F. W. Maas, of Planters' Seed Co., Springfield, Mo.; Roland Belgiano, of F. Belgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md.

THIS week Chicago has been the center of disturbance in the onion set market; last week it was Louisville. It is expected that it will switch around to Baltimore and Philadelphia later.

WITH radish seed scarce, the popular varieties of onion seed almost beyond reach, and the editors of the cut rate seed catalogues holding back copy, things are quite interesting as a whole.

IN Pennsylvania the opposition to the free seed scheme and the consequent waste of government money is manifesting itself strongly. Organization after organization of farmers, notably the grange bodies, has declared against the waste of government money in seed distribution.

THE Lawrence, Kan., Gazette gives F. W. Barteldes and Max Wilhelmi credit for much work toward making the town a better place to live in.

J. L. HOPKINS & Co., New York, imported pumpkin and asparagus seed to be used in the manufacture of drugs. The customs collector assessed duty at thirty per cent under paragraph 254, as seeds not specially provided for, and the General Appraisers affirmed such action, as in their protest Hopkins & Co. did not show that the seeds were not in a condition to prevent sale for planting.

FRANK OSBORNE, manager of the seed corn department of the Sioux City Seed and Nursery Co., has been looking over his contract corn in Plymouth county, Iowa, and was much pleased with the prospects.

HOLM & OLSON, St. Paul, deny the report current in the trade since S. D. Dysinger entered their employ, that they are about to add a seed department in their immense new store; indeed, O. J. Olson says they hadn't even thought of it.

JOS. STECKLER, of New Orleans, states that from careful investigation he believes the vegetable crop of Louisiana will be reduced fifty per cent as a result of the recent heavy storms, which have resulted in a large call for seeds for replanting.

It is believed that the principal reason why Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, are dropping the seed department is that they have been unsuccessful in their efforts to find a man qualified to run the department on the scale of the rest of the business. Sears, Roebuck & Co. do not do things by halves.

J. M. THORBURN & CO.

For the last eight years J. M. Thorburn & Co. have occupied a building at 36 Cortlandt street, New York, from which the construction of new railway terminals has forced a removal to 33 Barclay street, the building pictured in this issue running through the block to 38 Park place. The business was established by Grant Thorburn in 1802, at 20 Nassau street, where it was carried on for many years, and in 1808 by a miracle escaped total destruction by a fire which swept the neighborhood. In 1814 the business was totally prostrated by the proprietor expending his whole capital and more in fruitless preparations and attempts to raise seeds, etc., which could not be imported during the war. This notice appeared as an advertisement on the back cover of G. Thorburn & Son's catalogue of 1827. On the back cover of the 1822 catalogue appeared the following advertisement:

G. Thorburn & Son take the liberty of informing their friends and the public that they are constantly supplied at their warehouse, 20 Nassau street, New York, with a general assortment of garden seeds suitable for cultivation in the U. S. and West Indies. Grass seeds of every important and valuable kind; hawthorn quicks for live fences or hedging; a great variety of flower seeds and roots, procured from various parts of the world; spades, shovels, rakes, hoes, hand ploughs, etc., etc.; bird seed of every kind; English split and whole peas for boiling; American and Scotch oatmeal; English grits, etc., etc.; a constant supply of garden seeds put up by the Society of Shakers at Lebanon, also their compressed medicinal and culinary herbs.

The more effectually to accommodate their customers they have connected with the seed trade, a botanical and agricultural book store, where a great variety of the most valuable publications on subjects, especially the modern works of merit, may now be had, including the agricultural almanacs of the states of New York, Pennsylvania and Connecticut to be had every year as soon as published.

In 1816 Grant Thorburn recovered from the prostration of his business as recorded in 1814, and "with the help of $500 advanced by a friend" he commenced anew, "having for nine years past stood the attacks of several powerful opponents, and among the last though not the least was the great Ruta

In 1826 G. Thorburn & Son purchased the Friends' Meeting house in Liberty street. The house had been occupied by the Society of Friends "as a place of burial, school and meeting house for upwards of 140 years." This house is described in the Thorburn catalogue of 1827 as "a commodious two-story brick building 40x60 feet, lighted with twenty windows." This "commodious" building contained as well as a large assortment of seeds and bulbs a valuable assortment of song birds, "to the inspection of which the public is welcome every lawful day from sunrise to sunset." The catalogues of the firm between 1827 and 1844 were destroyed by mice.

In 1844 we find the firm James M. Thorburn & Co. at 15 John street, near Broadway, garden and greenhouses at Astoria, six miles from New York on the banks of the East river, near Hurlgate. Stages to Astoria at that time ran several times daily from Chatham street, opposite the City hall, and prospective customers were given at the end of catalogue precise directions as to how to get to the greenhouses with the assurance that the precise plant selected would be sent "carefully packed to any part of the United States or West Indies." Up to this time the Thorburn catalogue was a small volume indeed, measuring only 4 1/2 x 7 1/2 and containing only sixty pages. Yet the assortment of seeds of all kinds, including tree and shrub seeds, which has continued to be a specialty with the firm, was quite large and cultural directions were given quite exhaustively.

In 1865 we notice the price of Daniel O'Rourke peas as $14 per bushel; Advancer, $1 per quart; Champion of England, $12 per bushel. In that year we notice listed for the first time Carter's First Crop peas at $2 per quart, and in 1866 McLean's Little Gem at $45 per bushel. We also notice Yorkshire Hero priced at $20 per bushel, McLean's Advancer $20 and Champion of England $9 per bushel.

In 1867 the firm began to specialize on grass seeds and its catalogue of that year gave comprehensive instructions for the formation of lawns from seed. The grasses listed as far back as 1865 included about thirty-five varieties. Since then special attention has been given this subject and the grass seed end of the business is ever on the increase.

In 1870 was first listed a collection of "novelties," under which head we find Conover Colossal asparagus, New Egyptian Blood Turnip beet, Crosby sweet corn and Alpha peas. Among other introductions were Late Rose potato, 1872; Beauty of Hebron potato and First and Best pea, 1878; White Elephant potato, 1881; Challenger Lima bean, Extra Early Refugee bean, Market Gardener Private Stock lettuce, 1882; Thorburn potato, 1886; Oemler's Triumph watermelon, 1887; Pride of Newton bean, Improved Stonehead Heavy Red Dutch cabbage, Large Late Flat Dutch cabbage, Rural New-Yorker No. 2 potato, 1889; Refugee Wax bean, Extra Early Flat Turnip beet, New Everbearing cucumber, Coldframe White Cabbage lettuce, 1890.

In 1867 the firm listed for the first time Trimble '5 sugar corn, which was carried until 1882, when it took its new and better known name, Ne Plus Ultra. The Country Gentleman, now so well known, was first catalogued in 1893.

The first dwarf Lima bean ever introduced was placed on sale by Thorburn & Co. In 1894 came the world famous Carman No. 1 potato, and in 1895 Carman No. 3. This firm has done more for the improvement of the potato than any other in existence, and when the announcement came in 1905 of Noroton Beauty it met with almost unprecedented sale.

J. M. Thorburn & Co. was incorporated in 1895 with F. W. Bruggerhof as president, Mr. Bruggerhof having been connected with the business since 1849. He became a partner in 1855 and still is actively engaged, superintending everything.

The new warehouse, 33 Barclay street, is a model one and was completely remodeled for its present use. It is five stories high, and has in addition to the basement a sub-cellar, each 25x160. There are 28,000 square feet of floor space. There are over 1,200 drawers and closets for vegetable seeds; about 150 bins for vegetable seeds in bulk; about 2,000 flower seed drawers; over 250 receptacles for tree and shrub seeds alone, and over forty bins for grass seeds. By comparison with any other seed house in America the Thorburn equipment will compare favorably and beside the facilities of 1802 there is shown fully as great progress as has been made by the country at large in the 104 years.

THE VALLEY CROPS.

The most recent reports from the lily of the valley growing districts of Germany are satisfactory. The weather is continuing favorable for the maturing and some especially fine lots are expected to be on offer. Although quantities will be above last year it is hardly expected the supply will be quite up to the demand; in fact, if the demand continues on the increase to the extent it is generally expected to by exporters, a certain amount of shortage may be expected in best samples. In consequence of this outlook there is exceptionally keen competition among dealers and exporters to procure all useful samples and some high prices are being paid to growers. Therefore some considerable advance is expected all around on last season's rates to users in England and America. Certainly the attitude of the trade in England at the moment, is to use a much increased quantity during the coming season, in spite of the generally low averages in prices of cut valley during the past season.

J. B.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

One effect of the recent dry weather, a benefit to the seedsman, is the great shortage of fodder, in consequence of which there is a good demand for seed for catch crops for immediate sowing, causing a slight rise in price and some brisk business in Trifolium incarnatum, Italian crimson clover and other quick growing fodder plants. In view of the light crop of Italian crimson clover harvested last year, stocks of this line are getting low in consequence of this unexpected demand.

Some good business is being done this year by bulb growers, both in England and Holland, in Narcissus Ajax Prinsep. For a long time this variety has been a 'drug on the market, principally because although forcers paid a good price and used large and heavy bulbs, a good percentage of bloom could not be obtained and there was no profit left in cultivating them. It is now, however, becoming more common knowledge that to insure perfect success in forcing Prinsep, bulbs that are perfectly smooth-skinned and spherical, with only one thin neck and such as have only one center of growth, should be used. Given proper cultivation, Ajax Princeps, when selected as above, will be found to be one of the finest of forcing trumpet daffodils. On the other hand, for a good bedding effect, the heavy mother bulbs previously used by growers for market, are just the samples for use. These mother bulbs, by their numerous offsets, throw up an immense quantity of strong, healthy foliage which covers the ground well and protects the bloom from the splashing of heavy rains, etc., causing these lumpy, ungainly samples to be ideal where a bedding trade is done.

Good business generally is the rule this autumn in the retail bulb trade. Last year was the best for many seasons but this year bids fair to be a record one. All things considered in the general bulb trade, between now and the time (which will be about five years distant) when the new growers of bulbs in the north of Haarlem, and previously mentioned in my notes, place their stocks on the market, some high prices may be expected for all bedding sorts of commercial bulbs and for two or three years buyers will do well to make their arrangements as far ahead as possible.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

[Luther Burbank; a Short Review of His Work in Plant Hybridization and Brief Comparison With Other Hybridizers, by Patrick O'Mara, Jersey City, N. J.]

When Patrick O'Mara takes his pen in hand those who know the zest he infuses in his writings at once begin to sit up and take notice. Nothing that Mr. O'Mara does ever is dull and when he has a special interest in his subject it goes without saying that what he writes will be especially entertaining. Such is the case with Mr. O'Mara's latest effusion.

It is to be regretted that the gentlemen who have exploited Luther Burbank have used such fulsome phrases as to make it seem necessary to Mr. O'Mara to show the character of some of the claims made for Burbank. It also is to be regretted that Mr. Burbank has given a half endorsement of these extravagant statements by quoting some of them in his catalogues. Mr. O'Mara asserts that when Mr. Burbank labels his catalogue of novelties "The Creations of Mr. Burbank" he makes a claim so presumptuous as to class him with John Alexander Dowie, but most catalogue makers will recognize Mr. Burbank's title as a clever catch phrase rather than as a claim to relationship with Divinity. However, practically all trade growers agree more or less fully with Mr. O'Mara in his estimate of the practical value of the hybridization and selection practiced by Mr. Burbank, no matter how reluctant they would be to assume the public duty with which Mr. O'Mara evidently feels he has charged himself. To those who wish a half hour's easy reading we commend Mr. O'Mara's pamphlet.

LOOKING TO THE AZORES.

From Japan a still further advance is reported in the various sorts of Japanese lilies and more especially does this apply to L. longiflorum multiflorum. In spite of this continual advance, a demand still exists in England, although no grower can see a profit in sight on the sale of the cut lilies at the present high price of bulbs unless some decided advance is made in market values over and above last season's figures.

It will be a welcome addition to the English trade if the new source of supply, the Azores Islands, continues to develop so that in the near future liliams from those islands may be on the English markets annually and in commercial quantities. Some of the larger European handlers of liliams are already turning their attentions in that direction. If some English or German capitalists seriously take the matter up we may expect some large and successful exportations from these islands and it will be a welcome innovation.

The Japanese supply sadly needs a change of both price and quality and also considerable improvement in the business methods of the exporters in that country. According to all accounts the Azores supply will be a vast improvement in quality of bloom and freedom from disease, and the bulbs can be grown and placed on the English and American markets at a much lower figure

WINTERING BAY TREES.

I wish you would let me know about keeping bay trees through the winter.
Do they need sun and heat; if so, how much? I have a large cellar that is kept at about 40 degrees all the time but is rather dark. Would this be a good place? How much water would they require?
T. W.

Your cellar, which is "rather dark," which possibly means that it is not entirely dark, is an ideal place to store the sweet bays for the winter. We have learned through experience and observation some facts on this subject within a few years which are worth recording.
The writer was born in and ran about a garden in the south of England, where the sweet bay was one of the commonest as well as the finest of evergreens, and any winter that there was not more than 15 or 16 degrees of frost the bays came through unharmed. But one winter, that of 1860 and 1861, we had almost or quite zero weather and thousands of grand trees twenty-five or thirty feet high were killed to the ground. We have left bays in tubs outdoors in Buffalo late, where they often have had 15 degrees of frost without any injury, but their roots were wet and frost had gradually hardened them. We also have seen bay trees perish in a warm cellar

dry. Light is not necessary in winter, because there is no active growth. Keep the soil in the tubs moist, particularly

STATE OF GENERAL TRADE.

Reports from all departments of the general wholesale and jobbing trade continued to be of an optimistic nature the last week. A healthy increase in the volume of trade was noted in nearly every quarter. That the movement of general merchandise has reached greater proportions than ever before is witnessed by the constantly increasing railway earnings, which are without precedent.

Buying orders for staple goods showed no indications of any curtailment of the demand, notwithstanding the heavy contracts made early in the fall. Dealers in footwear, furnishings, textile goods, furniture and hardware all reported a heavy trade.

The coal market was characterized by a healthy demand for every kind of coal.
The trade is hampered to a large extent by the car shortage, which is growing more acute every day, and there does not seem to be any hope of relief until the close of navigation. The car situation at the present time is a factor in maintaining prices for all grades of coal.

Vegetable Forcing.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—There again is a market here for the products of the near-Boston vegetable growers. Indoor cucumbers are bringing 60 cents to $1 per dozen; head lettuce, $1 to $1.50 per strap; mushrooms, 50 cents to $1 per pound.

It is an ill wind that blows no one good. The heavy storms in the south are said to have largely reduced the crops of vegetables there and early crops of greenhouse stock may therefore be expected to realize better prices than otherwise would be the case.

BENCHES NOT ADVISABLE.

I am building a greenhouse, 12x60, with 3-foot walls, for lettuce and cucumbers. I use Grand Rapids seed. Can I do as well without benches for both, or must I use benches? The climate here is heavy in winter, with hardly any sunshine. I put in benches eight inches from the glass. If that is not right please give full particulars. C. J. J.

You are better without benches for both the lettuce and cucumbers, but I would advise you to raise the beds about one foot above the floor level, leaving a passageway in the middle of the house. This passageway can be bordered with boards to keep the beds in shape. A 12-inch board, along each side, fastened to posts sufficiently strong to keep it where it belongs, is all that is needed. Such a passageway not only makes it easier to reach the bed when work is being done on it, but the bed being raised above the ground level brings it nearer the light for such a crop as lettuce and insures against stagnation, as the water can pass off much more freely. Having a regular raised bench does not make so much difference for the growing of cucumbers, as these will do well either way if properly handled, but for lettuce the case is different, as it does far better in a solid bed. W. S. CROYDON.

TELEGRAPH CUCUMBERS.

I have some Telegraph cucumbers in 3-inch pots. Will you be so kind as to assist me in the culture of them? I have an ideal house and would like some hints on the amount of soil to use, and as to pinching. A neighbor planted some Telegraph cucumbers and they have grown fully five feet high, with fruit about four inches long, and they seem to drop off, and after a while the plants die. I notice that the plants split at the trunk. I would like to know the cause of it. Is it from too much manure? It seems to be a dry split. This neighbor also had a house of melons which were doing finely until he put on a top-dressing of rose soil, and then the fruit turned yellow and dropped off. Please give the reason. H. L. A.

guard against this the plants should be set on hills of a few shovelfuls of soil, rounded well up so that the water will pass off freely. A good, fibrous loam without the addition of any sort of manure should be used for planting, but after the plants attain size and the roots begin to appear on the outside of the soil a stronger soil can be used. This soil should be placed around the outside of the hills, but placed in such a way that the plants will still be standing on the highest point. On the first appearance of the trouble a little finely-broken charcoal around the neck of the plant will often arrest the progress of the disease. The falling off of the fruit could be accounted for by the unhealthy condition of the plants. But the same thing will often occur in a healthy plant through insufficient pollination, though this applies more to varieties of the White Spine type.

Regarding the melons, the same rules in relation to planting hold good. It was not so much the manure in the rose soil that caused the trouble as the covering up of the necks of the plants, which excluded the air from around the stem and concentrated the moisture there to a hurtful extent. Pinching must be regulated to a large extent by the space allowed for each plant. The side shoots should be pinched so as to prevent them from crossing those of the next plant. If allowed to do so overcrowding would result and deter the development both of foliage and fruit. The leaders should be pinched when within about a foot of the top of the trellis, as it will probably stretch that much after pinching.

ELBERON, N. J.

The Elberon Horticultural Society held a successful dahlia show October 1. The exhibits of cactus, decorative and single dahlias were certainly fine. Among the visitors who were exhibitors were F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, who were awarded a certificate of merit for a collection of new dahlias; G. W. Hale, superintendent for E. D. Adams, Seabright, and James Dowlen, superintendent for H. L. Terrell, Seabright, awarded certificate of merit for collections of cactus dahlias.

A. Strohenger, superintendent for Mrs. Chatalong, Seabright, was awarded a diploma for a vase of alosias.

Among the members, the principal prize winners were I. Kennedy, E. O'Rourke, W. D. Robertson, F. Dettlinger, A. Bauer and A. Greib. Peter Murray staged a fine exhibit of Cattleya labiata. G. M.

FULTON, KY.—Mrs. Jennie has opened a store in the Usona hotel building.

FINDLAY, O.—J. J. Waaland, who recently purchased the Barnd Floral Co., has constructed a large office and display room at the east end of the greenhouse.

THE last year was my first in the business, and it has been a very satisfactory one. I owe a good deal of my success to the REVIEW.—GEORGE E. MANNING, Broadalbin, N. Y.

HERE is a dollar for a year of the REVIEW. I have access to it through the courtesy of our firm, but as there are so many valuable articles in it I wish to keep it on file for future reference.—D. W. BABCOCK, foreman for J. G. Harrison & Sons, Berlin, Md.

The Market.

Cold weather has come at last, and with it a revival of business. It came with a spurt and has kept the trade more than busy since its advent. Receptions and parties are numerous, and the out of town demand so great as to cause a scarcity of carnations, particularly white. There is very little call for red as compared with white and light pink. Lawson also is a favorite. Roses are in crop and equal to all demands, unless it is Beauties, which are off crop and scarce. Carnations still are short of stem and inclined to be a bit soft, and with some of the growers pretty small flowers. Roses are of better quality all around. Mums have made their appearance. Cross is cutting Monrovia, yellow, and Crabb & Hunter some fine palms, white. In about a week there will be in a general crop of Polly roses, Kalb, October Sunshine and others. There are a few single violets being picked, and as a whole the violet crop seems promising. We have had no hard frost yet and salvia and geraniums still are in fine condition.

Paul Gaebel, 73 years old, was buried October 8 from his home, 1090 Hall street. He came to Grand Rapids about twenty-two years ago, starting in the business on Fulton street, next to the cemetery, later removing to Hall street, adjoining Oak Hill and Valley City cemeteries. He built up a fine trade and was respected by all who knew him. He is survived by his wife and four sons. Eugene is superintendent of Oak Hill and Valley City cemeteries. Frank has a greenhouse plant of his own in Warsaw, Ind., while Max and Charles live at home. G. F. C.

STEAMER SAILINGS.

Steamer orders are not anywhere near so numerous in winter as in summer, but there is considerable travel to southern countries and it is worth while occasionally to remind your customers that you can deliver flowers by telegraph to friends sailing for the Mediterranean, or elsewhere. NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THERE is a big demand for agents to canvass for the nurseries of the middle west.

F. M. EWER will establish a nursery on seventy acres of land just purchased at Park Rapids, Minn.

JOHN S. KERR, Sherman, Tex., is to lecture at Paris, Tex., in the interest of the Elberta Fruit Growers' Association.

THE E. Y. Teas Co., Centerville, Ind., has been organized, the interested parties being E. Y. Teas, his son and his daughter.

J. W. TETIRICK & SON, Blackwell, Okla., report a splendid growing season, not only for all farm and orchard crops, but for nursery stock. They say fall deliveries will considerably exceed those of any previous year.

A. C. GRIESA's Mount Hope Nursery, at Lawrence, Kan., was established in 1869 and covers 250 acres and employs 125 to 175 agents. A frost-proof storage building 100x200 will be in use this season for the first time. The stock for the largest apple orchard ever planted in Kansas at one time came from Mr. Griesa; it is near Hutchinson, and 28,000 trees went in at one planting.

EMBELLISHMENT OF WAYSIDES.

[A paper by J. A. Pettigrew, read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, April 17, 1906, continued from The Review of September 27 and October 4.]

Of suitable trees we have an abundance from which to choose. I will enumerate a few that I consider most fitted for the purpose:

Suitable Street Trees.

First and foremost comes the American elm—a grand tree of vigorous growth. It must have room to develop, and a rich soil, fairly moist. A good tree for wide city streets, and without an equal for wayside planting.

The European elm (Ulmus campestris) is a noble tree. It has not the graceful, pendulous habit of the American elm, yet it possesses in its columnar trunk, a stately grandeur hardly equaled by any other tree. It thrives well under adverse conditions. As a sidewalk tree it has many valuable qualities, conspicuous among which is the persistency of its rich, green leaves, lasting as they do, until late in the autumn. In some seasons its summer growth does not become sufficiently ripened to stand the winters in this latitude; yet this trouble is not so serious as to prevent its use for any situation where shade trees can be grown. It loves good soil.

The horse chestnut (Æsculus Hippocastanum) is a tree from Europe. It grows very freely and gives dense shade, and is a popular favorite on account of the beauty of its flowers in the early summer. Its foliage ripens and falls early in the autumn. It is a suitable tree for city streets.

The soft maple (Acer dasycarpum) is a fine tree for wide streets or waysides, where good soil is abundant. It requires space and sunlight to get the best results. It is reputed to be easily injured by storms, on account of weakness of fiber; this occurs only when it is grown under crowded conditions.

The American ash (Fraxinus Americana) is an adaptable tree. It grows fairly well as a sidewalk tree, but it is not so desirable as many others, on account of the late leafing out and early ripening of its foliage. On poor soil, and in dry localities, it is apt to be attacked by borers and the scale insect. In rich soil, its growth is rapid, producing a picturesque tree.

The buttonwood, wrongly called sycamore (Platanus occidentalis), is a lofty, quick-growing tree, but not to be recommended for planting in this district, on account of its liability to be infested with fungi, which blacken the leaves. Its near relation, the oriental sycamore, resembles it greatly in appearance, although a little more compact. This species is much valued south of this latitude.

The maidenhair-tree (Ginkgo biloba) is from Japan. This tree has not been used as a street tree, to my knowledge, except in Washington, where two streets are planted with it, and where it has proved most satisfactory. In good soil it grows rapidly, and it seems to have no insect enemies. It forms a handsome avenue, as can be seen on the Agricultural building grounds in Washington, or on Pierce street, where the planting before mentioned has been done. Boston and vicinity probably is the northern limit of its hardiness, or, rather, I

ORIGIN OF NEW HYDRANGEA.

Thomas A. McBeth, of Springfield, O., who has been growing Hydrangea arborescens alba grandiflora, says his attention was called to it by J. W. McNary, of the firm of McNary & Gains, of Xenia, and he was induced to try a plant. When it came into bloom, Mr. McBeth placed it as a sport of our native Hydrangea arborescens, and could readily see it was bound to be a valuable acquisition to our hardy flowering shrubs. It undoubtedly originated in the gulch in the Neff grounds at Yellow Springs, as wherever he has been able to trace it he always found it came from there. The plant is of a more graceful and compact form than the well known Hydrangea paniculata, single specimens having attained the height of eight feet and as much as ten feet in diameter, completely covered with large, pure white flowers, as many as 150 being counted on one plant, beginning to bloom the latter part of June and continuing through the summer, finally fading to a light green. The foliage is an olive green of good texture and free from insect pests, making a handsome bush when not in bloom. One of the merits of this new hydrangea is that it comes into bloom soon after the snowball is over and continues until Hydrangea paniculata comes in, thus supplying a magnificent bloom when white flowers are scarce.

TO HOLD JOINT SESSION.

The California State Fruit Growers' Association will hold its annual convention at Hanford in December, Hanford being the center of a rich fruit growing section. It has been practically decided that the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen will hold its annual meeting in conjunction with the State Fruit Growers' convention. One-half of the convention probably will be given over to the nurserymen, and this session is expected to be an interesting one. The Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen never has met in California before.

PROFIT IN OUTDOOR FLOWERS.

The extraordinary demand for almost all kinds of common outdoor grown flowers this season has drawn some attention to this branch of the business and it is probable that another season will show much more available stock of this kind. The quantity of neglected stock of the more expensive flowers and their subsequent scarceness probably had considerable to do with the demand, and also the fact that the seasonable flowers such as asters and chrysanthemums are not being produced in sufficient quantity to supply the ordinary needs. Again the public taste seems to be changing to a considerable degree and many of the flowers of our grandmother's time are again in vogue.

I made a call on one of the largest growers in the neighborhood of San Francisco, within the past few weeks, and saw probably the most extensive fields of gaillardias, stocks, coreopsis, dahlias and cosmos to be found here. Quite a portion of the grounds are devoted to carnations and roses under glass also, but the grower informed me that there was no comparison in the profits derived from the outdoor and indoor stock. The balance was all in favor of the first named. The ease with which this stock can be grown and marketed—the heavy demand and the many suitable places in the locality that could be devoted to it should interest a few more successful growers. I have not included violets in this category as they are not a summer blooming flower, and their culture is more difficult than the others mentioned. Regarding the quantities used I might mention them in order; viz., dahlias, gladioli, coreopsis, gaillardias, stocks, bachelor's buttons and cosmos. I might mention some others but the above list has filled the demand nicely for this season. I have also purposely omitted asters, sweet peas and chrysanthemums, as they are usually grown by specialists and not by the ordinary grower.

Plenty of moisture, not too heavy soil, care in picking and handling the flowers are the only requisites necessary in this climate to have an abundance of such stock, and if we are to have the same demand next season that we enjoyed this, there will be considerable money made by the growers. Many of our wholesale men have large patches of vacant land on their premises and that are thoroughly suited to this branch of the business and when some of our most experienced growers say that they have made more money on their outdoor stock, which under ordinary conditions they pay no attention to whatever, than they have from their greenhouses, all summer, it looks like a rather easy way to get some ready coin to tide over the long summer season. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Since our last report we have been kept busy using up everything that was good, bad and indifferent, and the response to queries as to the condition of trade is "never was better with fewer flowers." And this means that the remnant of 1906 outdoor grown stock was a profitable asset.

Asters certainly have been grand, especially those shipped in by H. Clemmens, of Newberg, and we particularly wish to emphasize the quality of the pink variety. Jack frost is not an early visitor and were it not for the heavy fall rains we could pick good asters all through October. So much for the passing of the garden flowers and we once again are glad to welcome the superior grade of stock grown under glass.

Various Notes.

Violets made their appearance two weeks ago, and we were informed that Gus Teufel took the initiative. They were the California variety and gems of the first water.

The first chrysanthemums of the season were seen in Clarke Bros.' window October 1. The appropriate name of this leader of autumn beauties is the Queen. She traveled from Fruitvale, Cal., by special train and we met her at the depot with a brass band. With an erect and perfect form and a bloom of immaculate whiteness, her presence is desirable on all occasions.

Martin & Forbes are now cutting an immense crop of fine roses and their large show window is splendidly adapted for displaying them.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We are having the longest spell of warm weather that we have experienced for the past twelve months. Although it is almost the middle of October the thermometer has registered from 80 degrees to 90 degrees in the shade. This will last but a short time, however, as we are getting well on toward the winter season.

Business has been rather quiet for the past two weeks. The bustle during the entire month of September has given way to a brief resting space which will soon give way, I hope to the regular fall trade. Flowers have been scarce at the same time. The delay with the chrysanthemum crop, coupled with the diminished cuttings from both carnations and roses, has made a big difference with the retailers and many complaints have been heard about the shortness of stock. At this writing, however, we are shown considerably more mums by the growers and the stringency has eased somewhat.

Other varieties of outdoor stock have been greatly in demand, but have been used principally for window decorations in place of more expensive flowers. Violets, owing to the continued heat, are still scarce and of poor quality and their keeping taxes the ingenuity of the florist to the utmost. The price of all grades of stock has not advanced for a fortnight but I look for another small rise in a couple of weeks.

Various Notes.

F. Brandt is on a month's trip to Pasadena and Los Angeles.

Miss Manning, formerly in business here, is now in charge of the decorating at Idora park, Oakland.

Chas. Stappenback is at last firmly established at his old stand on Polk street near Sutter. This street is rapidly filling up with new blocks of stores.

Podesta & Baldocchi report a very satisfactory business for the month of September. This firm make a specialty of shipping and they have had their hands full in this line all summer.

Several Japanese have been looking at available sites in the neighborhood of Elmhurst with the intention of starting an ornamental nursery at that place. They claim to represent several of the largest nurseries in Japan and intend to open a depot for them here.

Miss Solomon, the well known Oakland decorator, reports several big decorations for the early winter season.

R. L. Sayres will take a trip to Portland, Ore., during the coming two weeks.

SPOKANE, WASH.

It is announced that Prof. A. Van Holderbeke, ex-commissioner of horticulture of the state of Washington, now a Spokane man, and J. F. Littooy, former fruit inspector of Snohomish county, will establish in the Wenatchee valley one of the largest nurseries in the northwest. They will plant eighty acres each year for five years and the planting of the trees will begin this fall. Mr. Van Holderbeke is quoted as saying: "The plan we now have laid out will be to get the nursery started immediately. For five years we will put out eighty acres each season. To provide for this we have made a contract with the Wenatchee Canal Co. by which they are to furnish eighty acres each season. All kinds of fruit trees will be set out. In fact, we have 200,000 trees now growing."

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

There is a decided improvement in the market since last report. There is a great demand for good stock and the supply of roses and carnations is short. What stock is brought in by home growers is of good quality, especially pink and white roses. Some had to send to Chicago for stock to help out, there being quite a number of weddings and funeral work, beside two of our annual Priest of Pallas and carnival balls.

There are no chrysanthemums on this market yet and it will be a week or more before there will be any. The buds are quite small and they seem to be developing slowly. The late dahlias are more plentiful now, as we have yet had no killing frost.

Miss Jewell has been quite busy this week. She had a large wedding, decorating St. Aloysius church, also the home of the bride, which kept her rushing for a few days.

Ed Tolquist, who has been in Colorado since last February, on account of poor health, will return this week. He has been employed by Miss Dalley since he was a small boy. We will all be pleased to see him back again and hope he has regained his good health.

Mr. Thornhill, of Rosedale, has made his rounds among the trade this week. He is taking orders for sweet cider and apples. He has picked twenty-three bushels of apples from one tree alone. He has also a large field of cannas which he expects to dig next week.

Ernest Greschoff, who has been keeping the flower beds on the Paseo in fine shape, so that they were greatly admired by the many visitors here last week during the carnival, is now digging the best plants for stock and they are being taken to the city greenhouses at Swope park.

Mr. Freudenthal keeps up with the season. His store seems somewhat small for such a large business. He keeps every corner full of good stock.

Jacob Tobler, in Westport, is busy. We see his wagon rushing around with palms.

MOBILE, ALA.

The greenhouse interests in Mobile were badly damaged by the recent hurricane. At C. Ravier & Son's damage to glass and plants is estimated at $2,500, but no houses are completely down and the plant will be in running order in a couple of weeks.

The Chatogue Greenhouses lost heavily in glass. Two houses are reported to be down.

Miss Maria Minge's main houses were ruined beyond repair and will not be rebuilt on the same place, as the ground is too valuable for building lots.

Miss Geodbrad lost most of her glass.

Mr. Duplan's loss is great. Being on a high, exposed place, his greenhouses literally flew away.

The Industrial Gardens were badly damaged. One house collapsed and the loss in glass is heavy.

Mr. P. Thublin lost one house, which is down.

H. P. Loding lost badly in glass. The houses being protected by large trees, there was not so much danger of complete collapse, but branches from this protection broke panes by the hundreds. There luckily was glass on hand for another addition with which to repair.

L.

U. J. Virgin, of New Orleans, received a letter September 29 from F. P. Davis, of Mobile, Ala., stating that the storm did considerable damage to Mr. Davis' home and nurseries at Springhill, a suburb of Mobile. Mr. Davis' property loss, he says, will foot up $15,000. There were a number of giant oak trees on his place, and when the wind struck them they swayed in the breeze until two or three of them were blown down.

The letter that Mr. Davis wrote to Mr. Virgin was written at 2 o'clock Thursday morning, while the storm was probably at its worst. He says he was unable to tell the extent of the havoc in Mobile, but he surmised it was terrible, because the street cars had stopped running and the electric lights had been extinguished. Springhill suffered heavily from the blow. Houses were badly damaged and trees and plants uprooted.

MABELLE

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems Invariably strong, but always graceful ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. Delivery January 5 to 10 and later. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

The Market.

Business continues very good, as is the supply of stock with the exception of carnations, which have not come in first-class quality or quantity, although they are improving continually.

American Beauties perhaps have held the center of the stage for the past two weeks and they are of fine quality, no single grower apparently having the better of his neighbor, except perhaps as far as sales are concerned. Teas are improving in quality and some first-class stock is to be seen in both Brides and Maids, as well as quantity of short-stemmed stock. Liberty, Richmond and Chatenay are also good, the cut of them being comparatively large.

Asters are on their last legs and only a few stray ones are seen and there is little call for them. Dahlias are yet with us, but are diminishing in size, and a little frost will see their finish. Violets, the first of the season, are now coming in, but are small of flower and somewhat short of stem. The price ranges from 50 cents to $1 per hundred.

The growers expect to have chrysanthemums in quantity in about a week. A limited supply is now seen in the large shops.

Various Notes.

J. A. Valentine and N. A. Benson have returned from a short fishing trip up the Gunnison river. They sent and brought home a fine lot of fish.

W. F. Silvie, who for the past eight years served as patrolman for the city, has opened a flower store at 427 Sixteenth street. Mrs. Silvie was formerly with the Alpha Floral Co.

J. B. Braidwood, of Colorado Springs, has acquired the lease and property of Ben Boldt, of Mud Lake greenhouses. Mr. Boldt expects to take his family to Germany for the winter.

James A. Eastwell, with Smith & Fetters, of Cleveland, Ohio, was a visitor in the city last week.

The Florists' Bowling League reorganized last Friday evening, electing R. S. Mahan, of the Alpha Floral Co., president and E. S. Kennedy, of the Park Floral Co., secretary and treasurer. The teams will bowl Monday evenings at the Brunswick alleys. The Alpha Floral Co. team say they expect to "eat up" all the others before the season is over.

RITTSVILLE, PA.—John F. Horn & Bro. are erecting a boilerhouse and will add a 100 horse-power steam boiler to their plant, besides rearranging the entire system of piping.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

State of Trade.

Trade the past week was rather quiet owing to the bad weather. Lots of rain at the same time the horse show was in full blast, but this did not cut any figure whatever for the want of flowers. Beauties are coming in fine. Also some very fine Brides and Maids, and Richmond, Cosmos and dahlias are plentiful.

The growers here are having much trouble with stem-rot in their carnations in the houses, and it is looking rather shaky for the coming winter.

Various Notes.

Jacob Schulz's new houses are completed and ready for plants.

Henry Fuchs, who has been on the sick list, is able to be out again.

Henry Huth, at St. Stephen's cemetery, is remodeling one house.

Fred C. Haupt has moved into his new residence on Cherokee road.

Fred Schulz, son of Jacob Schulz, has opened a commission house for cut flowers on Sixth street, something that was needed here for a long time.

A. Heitz, opposite St. Louis cemetery, has some of the best pot chrysanthemums about here.

John Bohrmann's place is in fine shape. His Brides and Maids are coming to the front and he has a fine lot of ferns for the retail trade.

HY LIGHTFIELD.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Fall trade has commenced. Short-stemmed carnations are selling for 50 cents a dozen, roses $1.50 and violets $1 per hundred. All outdoor flowers are about done. Bulb trade is slow yet, not much being expected until frost appears. All greenhouses are well stocked with mums, violets and carnations.

Mrs. H. A. Jahn has been the most successful dahlia grower in the city this year. She has won five cups and enough ribbons to make a sofa pillow. H. A. Jahn has a large stock of his new white seedling. He also shows a fine crimson one.

Peter Murray, of Fairhaven, who is eastern agent for F. R. Pierson Co. for their new carnation, Winsor, reports a good sale for this variety this fall, Mr. Murray himself being the originator.

John Rennex, from New York, formerly of this city, was in town Thursday.

Leslie Baldwin, of Brockton, also was here. F. C. C.

BYFIELD, MASS.—S. E. P. Forbes has discontinued the greenhouses, spending the winter in California.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y.—Mr. Wilson, formerly trading as the Reliable Seed Co., at Scranton, Pa., has opened a store here, known as the City Florist. He carries a large line of jardinières, florists' supplies and candies.

Watch Us Grow

ARAUCARIAS, the best decorative plants Nature produces; our specialty.

Every man in business and life, to be successful, must adopt one thing as his specialty and that specialty, of what-ever nature it may be, he must guard, study and push to such an extent that it not only benefits himself but he must continue it so every one who seeks his aid, services or his article, which he advertises or practices, will share a slice of his activity and prosperity. I made the importation and cultivation of araucarias a special study in my life. The figures below will show my success in business from the first year: by commencing with an importation of 250 and now, the eleventh year, my importation has grown up to 6,100 (come and see it), the reason being that the araucaria grows yearly more in favor with the plant consuming people all over the country, as a most admired decorative plant for the parlor, bed-room, dining and sitting-rooms stores and hotels, lawns and porches. The outlook will be of an importation of at least 8,100 to 10,000 in spring of 1907. To secure this vast amount for 1907, I left Hoboken Aug. 15, striking for Belgium, to make contracts for next year. I shall also bring over with me at the same time a large lot of choice Azalea Indica and Palms, etc., for Christmas and Easter forcing. No money will be spared to secure for my customers the cream of the Belgium greenhouses only.

Please note lowest prices for September.

Araucaria Excelsa, 12 to 14 inches high, 5½ in. pots 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 50c. 14 to 16 inches high 5½ in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 60c. 16 to 18 inches high, 5½ in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 yrs. old, 75c. 18 to 20 inches high, 6-in. pots 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.00. 20 to 24 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old $1.25. 26 to 30 inches high, specimens, 7-in. pots, 6 yrs. old, $2.50 to $3.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, have 1000 of them. Never were they as nice as this year. Plants are as broad as long, from 12 to 20 inches in height, 3 to 4 perfect tiers, 20 to 30 inches across from tip of one tier to the other, 3, 4 and 5 yrs. old 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00, up to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, perfect jewels in shape and size, their beautiful greenish blue tiers give them such a striking appearance, that anyone seeing them must fall in love with them on sight. Plants, 6 to 7 in. pots, 3, 4, 5 perfect tiers, 15 to 25 inches in height, from 15 to 35 inches across, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 to $2.50 each. Please bear in mind that the above mentioned varieties are the cream of Belgium's productions. We have thousands of them and can meet all demands.

Kentia Belmoreana, 6-in. pots, 4-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, bushy, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.25; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, 75c to $1.00 each. These are the sizes entered in the customs house.

All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

The Market.

It is a pleasure to see how nicely the wholesale houses are being cleared out of stock most every day. While this is due partly because of the shortness of flowers still there is a very good demand and the daily sales roll up to good figures. The demand extends to all varieties and grades of flowers and it goes to show that the market has the right tone, and that the business ought to hold up right along now. While we have not had a frost yet, with the market in the condition it is in at present, no one wants the outdoor flowers to be killed off, as they come in handy and sell at good prices. Dahlias are having a good call and are selling out at nice prices. Some fine ones are seen and their beautiful colors make them attractive. Mums are not arriving in sufficient quantities to be staple, but by the end of the present week they ought to be much more plentiful. The demand for them at present is fine, and all that come in sell out at sight if they have not been ordered in advance. The prices being realized are all that can be desired. Carnations continue scarce and there does not appear to be any chance for a good supply of them for some time. They are in very good demand and there are not enough of them being received to fill all orders. Roses are in fairly good supply. Brides are in best demand and the price rules highest on them. The supply of Beauties is not as heavy as it was and more could be used to very good advantage. Prices are ruling first class and the best are selling from $3 to $4 per dozen. Good red roses such as Liberty and Richmond are not very plentiful except in short stem. Lily of the valley is selling fast, and some fine stock is being handled. In green goods smilax is scarce, but there is plenty of everything else.

Club Meeting.

It has been decided to postpone the regular meeting of the Florists' Society from Saturday evening, October 13, till Saturday evening, October 20. It seems to be the general opinion of the members of the society that the time has come for the society to break away from the old-time methods that have been in use in conducting our flower shows. Our efforts do not seem to be bringing out the results that they ought, and consequently the shows do not get the support of all the craft in this city. It will now be the aim of the society to find out, if possible, wherein our methods are at fault, and then to correct them. The main object in giving these shows is to educate the public at large as to what is the best in flowers and plants and to give the growers a chance to show the public what can be done in the way of perfecting the various varieties. In order to do this, it is necessary to conduct your shows so that they appeal to as large a percentage of the public as possible. It seems to be the general opinion of the florists of this city that the shows as they have been given in the past have failed to do this. It is now the aim of the Florists' Society to make some radical changes and bring the shows up to the minute, so that they will appeal to all. The society intends to invite the retailers of this city to be present at the next meeting, and it wants them to come prepared to give their opinion as to how the shows should be run in the future, so as to be of the greatest benefit to all. It is the desire of the society to have the cooperation of the store men in the endeavor to give a show that will be acceptable to all departments of our business, and especially so to the public at large. As above stated the meeting of the society has been postponed, so as to give all those interested more time to get their ideas in shape and to give them a chance to come to the meeting ready to state just what kind of a show they think would prove to be the most successful. Anyone who is at all interested in this subject will be welcomed at this meeting, and will be given a chance to say all they have to say on the subject. It is to be hoped that there will be a large attendance.

Various Notes.

Harry Brown, who is with J. Chas. McCullough, is rejoicing over the arrival of a 13-pound boy and well may he, as it is the first child in thirteen years.

Mr. Cobb, of Covington, Ky., who was one of the oldest florists in this vicinity, died during the past week.

Dick Witterstaetter has a new pet in the carnation line. He calls it an Enchantress-Aristocrat. It has the habit of Aristocrat and the color of Enchantress. Dick thinks a whole lot of it. It needs no better recommendation. We will doubtless hear from it later.

Chas. Dietrich, of Maysville, Ky., was in the city placing orders for a large wedding decoration which he will put up this week. Mums will be largely used.

C. J. OHMER.

SCALE ON KENTIAS.

I have a number of kentias and Pandanus Veitchii infested with scale as shown in the sample leaves I send herewith. What is the best treatment for them? I had thought of throwing them away.

C. M. V.

By all means do it; bury them. Seldom have we seen so bad a case. If this is a sample of your stock, your place is much in need of cleaning up. You can remove scale by spunging with warm water and whale oil soap, two ounces in two gallons of water, but you never could make any impression on such a brood as this.

HOWELL, MICH.—N. L. Chamberlain is erecting two greenhouses 34x200 feet. Plants and vegetables will be grown.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Godfrey Aschmann sailed from Rotterdam October 6 and is due home in ten days. When at Milan, Italy, he sent his customers another batch of souvenir postal cards, making over 1,000 in all sent while in Europe.

Greenhouse Heating.

STEAM AND HOT WATER.

Having a given boiler for either steam or hot water, will the boiler heat more cubic feet of greenhouse space, using steam or hot water, and how much? What changes would be necessary, changing from hot water to steam, besides boiler trimmings? W. C. P.

If the greenhouses are piped with malleable pipes of suitable dimensions for steam, a plant can be converted from hot water into a steam plant by installing sufficient valves to cut down the radiation in the houses from a hot water basis to a steam basis; i. e., if steam under five to ten pounds pressure is used, the houses can be heated with from twenty to twenty-five per cent less piping—radiating surface—than with water at 180 degrees.

To state the matter in another form, twenty to twenty-five per cent more glass area can be carried by a boiler on a steam basis than on a hot water basis, the difference being least on the high temperatures and greatest on the low. Unless a plant has been piped with a view of converting it into a steam plant it is likely that the piping will require to be decidedly modified. If you will describe the present plant we can soon tell what changes will be necessary, if any. L. C. C.

HINTS ABOUT CHIMNEYS.

The Herendeen Mfg. Co., in a recent pamphlet, gives the following on chimney construction:

A chimney flue, to effect the best results, should be round. Next in order of efficiency comes the square flue; while the least effective is one of oblong form. The round flue presents an amount of friction surface to the smoke and escaping gases equal to about three and one-seventh times its diameter; the square flue presents four times its diameter as friction surface; while the oblong flue's friction surface increases, beyond that of the square flue, in direct proportion to the extent of elongation. As an illustration: In an 8-inch round flue, the friction surface is 25.13 inches and contains 50.265 square inches of area. In an 8-inch square flue, the friction surface is thirty-two inches and contains sixty-four square inches of area; while in an oblong flue 4x16 inches, the friction surface is forty inches and the area sixty-four square inches.

If the square form of flue is desired, the side of the square should be at least equal to the diameter of the boiler smoke-pipe, as the corners of the square flue are of practically no value for the smoke passage, and in very large flues even become a detriment, in the way of eddying currents which upset the true course of smoke and escaping gases. In other words, the sixty-four square inches in the 8-inch flue are of no greater value, if as great, for the smoke passage, than the 50.265 square inches of the 8-inch round flue.

In an oblong flue, the depth should never be less than from six to eight inches, even for the smallest flues; and the length not to exceed one and three-fourths times the depth. If an oblong flue is unavoidable, better results will be obtained if the smoke-pipe can enter it on the narrow side, as this will allow the smoke and escaping gases more room in which to change their course from the horizontal smoke-pipe to the vertical flue. A flue of less than six inches of depth will not allow freedom of this change of direction, which directly accounts for the unsuccessful operation of boilers on shallow flues, and the consequent condemnation of the entire system. Be sure that the flue is of proper size

MANUFACTURERS OF

Reducing Valves, Back Pressure Valves, Steam Traps, Steam Goods

This is what one of our customers thinks of our valves:

LINCOLN, ILL., January 8, 1906.

THE JOHN DAVIS COMPANY, Chicago, Ill.

GENTLEMEN:—You can strongly and unhesitatingly recommend the "Eclipse" piston type reducing valve to florists. We have two purchased of you last year. We would not have them out for double their cost and find them as sensitive as a watch. We will be in Chicago soon to take up the vacuum system with you.

Yours truly,
W. H. GULLETT & SONS, FLORISTS.

A newly built chimney will not draw perfectly, and due allowance should be made until it is thoroughly dried out, which will probably take a week or two.

In looking over the chimney and connecting the boiler to it, it is well to notice the following:

1. To see that there are no other openings into the boiler flue, either above or below the boiler smoke-pipe;
special care being exercised at the base of the flue that the boiler flue does not connect with the other flues through the soot pocket.

2. That the cross withes or division walls of the chimney, if it contains more than one flue, are carried up to the top of the chimney, so that each flue is independent of the others, throughout its entire length.

3. That the area of the chimney flue is maintained full size throughout its entire length, and is free from all obstructions, such as loose brick, mortar, etc., that might have become lodged in it.

4. That the chimney extends above

DO YOU KNOW ABOUT THE

the highest point of the roof or other immediate surrounding elevation. This is quite important, and failure to observe it may be looked to as cause for poor draft.

5. That the flue is at least six or seven inches in depth and never less in area than the size of the smoke-pipe given by boiler manufacturer.

6. That the boiler sets as near the chimney as possible, thus shortening the length of the smoke-pipe, which is desirable.

7. That the smoke-pipe does not project into the chimney too far, and thus lessen the area of the flue at this important point, where the smoke leaves the pipe and enters the flue.

The Market.

Trade in all lines is getting stronger, all house stuff selling readily. The heavy rains of the past week spoiled a great deal of the outdoor stock and consequently made flowers scarce. The expected frost has not appeared so far and we are having ideal autumn weather. Chrysanthemums will soon be on the market in quantity. There are more mums grown around this city than ever before and all look for a large trade.

Various Notes.

F. A. Conway & Co. intend to plant two acres with their white aster next year; it is a fine flower, pure white, and a good keeper. The firm expects to put it on the market in 1908.

The greenhouses on Warmon avenue recently run by Mr. Schelske have been discontinued, the proprietor having left the city without saying good-bye to his friends.

The different seed houses report a fair trade in bulbs this fall.

A. Wiegand, who is traveling in the Hawaiian Islands, writes that he is having a fine trip and that the country and scenery are magnificent. S.

Dahlia night was observed by the New Jersey Floricultural Society October 5 with an attractive show, which attracted a large attendance of members and friends. The old favorites, with newer strains, particularly in the cactus and single varieties, were displayed. Lager & Hurrell, Joseph A. Manda, and William Barr furnished orchids, and J. C. Williams, of Montclair, fruits in addition to his large dahlia display. Prizes were awarded and certificates given. Two new members were elected and provision made for the forthcoming twelfth annual show in the hall of the Woman's Club, November 5 and 6, the premium list for which may be had by addressing J. B. Scores of Florists Use

HAMMOND'S GRAPE DUST

Chrysanthemums and Carnations

This comes from WALLACE GOMERSALL, late superintendent of the famous "Wodenethe," owned and finely maintained by Winthrop Sargent, Esq., Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.:

"For Chrysanthemums we use GRAPE DUST with the best results by freely dusting with it until the delicate blooms come, then we are a bit shy of it, to prevent any staining of the petals, but during the green state, even in bad weather, there is no trace of fungus, and we keep free of the spot. I have recommended it to many gardeners, and so far my acquaintances have found it very valuable. In common with many gardeners and florists, I have found it of great value in checking the rust on carnations. It is not expensive to use, for by using in air bellows it diffuses itself everywhere, and is, in my judgment, a valuable every day article. For roses it is of exceptional benefit against mildew."

How to Use "GRAPE DUST" for VIOLETS, ROSES, etc., in the Greenhouse.

Fill the house with dust as soon as the plants are set, and let it settle over the plants, or put one pound to a pail of water and spray it finely over everything, plants, ground, benches, etc. Spores are likely to settle anywhere about, and prevention is the best remedy. Its fineness, its reliability, and its great diffusiveness combine to make GRAPE DUST take the highest rank as a popular and economical fungicide, and no mistake about it.

to your coal bill when every heat unit in a "Burnham" boiler must pass back and forth three times the boiler's length before reaching the smoke pipe. Not only a "long travel" but at every point in contact with water ways that grab their share of the heat as it goes by.

Every heat unit grabbed, is a boost on your greenhouse temperature—now with boilers, it's not only a case of how long it takes to boost, but what each boost costs—we absolutely know there's no greenhouse boiler as economical as the "Burnham."

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Storing Outdoor Stock.

Snow and frost have visited most parts of our northern states and the storing of plants and roots must now be seen to. Bay trees need not yet be taken indoors. They will be better outside for another month and will stand 10 degrees of frost without harm if the roots are not dry.

Palms nearly all are natives of a tropical clime, yet it is not necessary with large plants, which should have been outdoors during summer, that you winter them in a high temperature. Kentias and latanias will do quite well if never dropped below 45 degrees. Of course this is much too low for small palms that you want to grow during winter, but large plants that have attained a size as large as convenient to handle you don't want to grow, and if wintered cool they will better endure a chill when you have occasion to use them. Arecas will not winter so cool. The lowest temperature they should be exposed to ought not to be less than 55 degrees. Hydrangea Otaksa in tubs will not be hurt by 2 degrees or 3 degrees of frost. It may take off the leaves, but will ripen the wood, and that is what you want.

A Good Storage Shed.

This wintering of large plants for your customers is a thankless job and you cannot do it unless you charge a good price, or what it is worth. Some years ago it became such a nuisance with us, for a greenhouse, even if you have the room, is not the place, that we built a wooden shed some 30x50, put in plenty of big windows, and ran a 2-inch hot water pipe around the shed. That was just sufficient to keep out the frost, and that is all that is wanted. This has proved an excellent place for sweet bays, hydrangeas and other stock that only needs to be kept from freezing.

About the charge. You should charge $1 per foot for every foot of space the plant covers, either on a greenhouse bench or floor space in a shed. Remember, you have to send for the plants in the fall and deliver them again next summer, and in the case of large plants this takes teams and men.

Cannas.

If we get a few weeks' fine weather there is no hurry about lifting canna roots, but they will winter all right if lifted at once. Shake off the soil from the roots and, after cutting off the stems seven or eight inches above the roots, if it is a fine day, let them lie out in the beds. The sun and air will dry the soil that adheres to the roots and they will winter all the better. Large growers doubtless have root houses or cool cellars to store these roots in, but you can get along very well by putting them beneath a bench where there will be little drip. Be sure to put down a floor of boards to place the roots on. If placed on the damp ground the eyes surely will start in January and February and be a loss. We find the temperature of a carnation house warm enough for canna roots, and carnation benches should not be watered so heavily that they drip through, at least not until April 1, by which time your canna roots are divided and started for another year.

Azaleas.

The importations of Azalea Indica are arriving in good order. Unpack at once and get them potted. The ball of roots is often larger than will go into a pot that will look well or be necessary for the size of plant. It does not seem to hurt the plants in the least to reduce the ball by cutting away, with a big, sharp knife, sufficient soil and roots to allow them to go into a suitable size of pot. Often the soil and roots, when they arrive, are quite dry. If so, after the necessary reduction of the ball dip the roots in a tub of water for a few seconds. We often have found this thorough wetting of the roots very necessary and have seen where neglect to do so has led to the loss of many plants, and the importer got blamed for what was not at all his fault.

These imported azaleas make little if any new root, at least not for six months, and, therefore, soil is not an important consideration. European gardeners used to think peat was absolutely necessary to grow azaleas. We don't have the peat here, and neither is it essential. A fibrous, turfy loam with the addition of some leaf-mold and a little coarse, clean sand will grow them first rate. When potting, get the new soil packed firmly. You cannot do this with your fingers and thumbs, but must use a flat stick. The necessity of this is obvious. If not packed in firmly the future waterings will let the water through the loose soil and leave the more compact ball of roots dry. These remarks about azaleas will apply to other hard-wooded plants that you import, Acacia armata, etc.

Shrubs for Forcing.

Lilac, viburnum, deutzia and other hardy shrubs for forcing will not be here just yet. When they do arrive, don't expose them. They are hardy and stand our severe winters, but in the ground they are under very different conditions. These imported plants have been boxed up, and perhaps heated in warehouses and the holds of vessels, and are in no condition to be at once exposed to a severe frost. Get them out and their roots into moist soil as soon as possible and protect from severe cold with sashes or boards. There is no need of potting these deciduous shrubs. You can pot them as you bring them in to force, but if the roots are dry when unpacked dip them in water before you put them in frames.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

LAST YEAR'S NOVELTIES.

Many of the last year novelties are now sufficiently far advanced to enable one to see how they are going to turn out, and that they will figure very largely on the show boards in the coming few weeks is a certainty. Beatrice May, on the early crown, is building up some magnificent flowers of the purest white. The later buds are flushed with pink, but even they are beautiful. The foliage is somewhat spotty, but one loses sight of that in the splendid head that is coming. While Beatrice May may not pan out in all sections as it is doing in New Jersey, I think, on the whole, it will fully line up to all I have said about it.

Morton F. Plant also is coming splendidly, opening in the full sunlight without any damping or spotting of the petals, and giving abundant signs of again producing one of the largest flowers ever staged. Even June rooted cuttings, which I caught on the first bud they showed, late in August, are making splendid flowers. Plant has foliage and stem to correspond with its enormous flower and should be a fine thing for years to come.

Mrs. Geo. Heaume is almost ready to cut, and while all may not care for its color, it will produce a larger percentage of high grade flowers than any variety I know of, there being no loss excepting such as might have been destroyed by insects.

E. J. Brooks is also showing signs of making a phenomenal flower, and is grand in foliage and stem. The flower is a trifle soft, and needs shading from hot sun, but the variety will repay a little care expended on it. The color, a rich purple crimson, is a telling one for a class calling for, say, six flowers each of six varieties. There seems to be nothing in its color to touch it.

Mrs. W. Knox, as a yellow, is too early for competition, being fully open by October 6. It has its faults, being rather long-necked and spotty in the foliage, but anyone who had it in quantity reaped a golden harvest, for early chrysanthemums sold better this year than for some years past.

Others of the new varieties are not far enough advanced to see what the true character will be, but W. Wells is making enormous buds, and Mrs. John E. Dunne is the admiration of everyone who is growing it, with its great, massive leaves and splendid stem. The Australians seem determined to keep in the front rank. And now for some of the older varieties:

Older Varieties.

Some of the older varieties are now ready for cutting; and, while they are not classed as standard commercial kinds, it might pay some of the commercial growers to get off their Pacifics and Polly Roses long enough to look them over. Mrs. A. J. Miller is a splendid grower, never burns a particle, and comes big and very early. The color, a brick red, is much more attractive under electric light than in daylight.

Lady Hopetoun, a lovely heliotrope pink, is the largest early pink I know. It is a little weak in the neck sometimes, but the flower is always a uniform shade of color, which cannot be said of any other early pink. Pacific is always washy and Coombes has lots of light-colored streaks in it.

Some Novelties.

It is a little early to pass judgment on the novelties, though some are far enough advanced to justify remark. Mary Godfrey is ready to cut and, while rather small, is a beautifully formed flower, and a fine, clear yellow. Another year may see this variety loom up in the early section.

Another one that has possibilities is Money-maker, a Jap incurved white. Early buds are now ready to cut, and the flower is very like Robinson in color and form. It is later here than it is in England, having been certificated there October 4, but a good, large white, fully out by the middle of October, is not to be lightly considered.

Possibly the king of the novelties this year will be the white sport of William Duckham. This is an exact counterpart of the parent in every way, except color, and will make just as big a showing on the exhibition table. Duckham has almost had a monopoly in the pink class for the past two years, in the eastern shows, and the white sport will be welcomed with open arms, as good whites are painfully few just now. Merza, before the advent of Beatrice May, was the standby in whites, but it will not travel good, and time and again has lost an exhibitor prizes, because it would wilt down. With White Duckham in the field, I think that Merza, like Othello, will find its occupation gone.

Miss Miriam Hankey was figured as the largest pink sent out last year, and if stem and foliage are any indication, it is going to live up to its reputation. The bud is swelling finely, and Hankey may rank as one of the top notchers of the year, but it will not be finished for two weeks yet.

Mrs. A. H. Lee is showing lovely color and so far is not burning, which is the fault of all the crimson section over here. One flower from the earliest bud is fully open, but others will not be up for ten days or more. It looks as though it might prove a valuable addition to the red varieties. A few days more and one will be better able to judge.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

RETARDED BY WARM WEATHER.

Enclosed find a few of my mum buds. You will notice that they seem to have a tough skin, and do not open evenly. Will you kindly tell me what to do? All of my early ones are this way.

G. P. S.

The buds were badly shrivelled by the time they reached me, but I can see no signs of anything out of the ordinary.

I am inclined to the belief that the unusually warm September, which is responsible for many of the early varieties being later this year, has caused the buds to hang somewhat. The chrysanthemum is a cool-growing plant, and comes quickly at this time of year, when the night temperature is low and the days clear and cool. Contrast this with the weather we were getting late in September, with a temperature in the 90's. This weather I consider is responsible for the fact that September flowering, and other early types in Europe, fail to come in here until well into October, and even then the petals of many kinds are short and the flowers ragged and uneven. Some of the buds sent were opening nicely on one side, while the other side was still closed. Eventually nature will assert herself, and the buds will burst open all right.

C. H. T.

LEAF-SPOT.

I have quite a number of chrysanthemums with the leaves turning yellow, a sample of which I enclose. Will you tell me the cause and the cure?

T. F.

The leaves sent are affected with what is commonly known as leaf-spot. It is fungoid growth (Septoria) and is caused by the plants getting crowded in the benches, and shutting out the light and air. It will almost invariably be found to start in the center of the bench, where the leaves stay wet a long time and gradually lose their vitality. This disease, as a rule, does little real harm, as it starts on the bottom leaves, which, in the natural order of things, will decay and drop off anyway as the wood hardens on the plant.

Keep the plants on the dry side, the foliage particularly so. Bordeaux mixture will kill the germ of this disease, but I would not use it, unless the plants get badly affected, as it stains the leaves, and they have to be cleaned before the flower is marketed. Take off what leaves you can from the bottom of the plants, whether they are affected or not, so that the sun can shine in on the beds.

C. H. T.

THE OCTOBER FROST MUM.

Among the set of novelties sent out last year by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., was Chrysanthemum October Frost, which has in the last month attracted much attention in cut flower centers, especially in the Chicago market, where it was by some weeks the earliest of the white varieties. Wiator Bros., of Chicago, are its largest growers this season, but next year without doubt many more will plant it as extensively as the available stock will permit. The flower is of large size for such an early variety, good blooms having been cut before the end of September. The foliage is well up on the stem and the neck is strong. Elmer D. Smith says that in selecting the buds it is a decided advantage to secure the early ones, as the flowers from such are much larger and more double than from the later buds.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

President Duckham has announced the committees to examine seedlings and sports on each Saturday to and including November 24, 1906.

Exhibits to receive attention from the committees must in all cases be prepaid to destination, and the entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week preceding examination, or may accompany the blooms. Special attention is called to the rule requiring that sports to receive a certificate must pass three committees.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Early Fire Heat.

This is the time of year when many growers are constantly in a puzzle whether to start up the fires or to worry along without any fire heat until it is really needed every night. Those who grow roses and other plants that need fire heat right along now have a night man on duty, and he can keep an eye on the carnation houses as well. But to those who grow carnations and cool temperature stock, it means putting on a night man, besides consumption of fuel, etc. In the latter case, one is often tempted to put off firing as long as possible, even though the temperature may drop quite low occasionally toward morning. Carnations will not show damage from a low temperature as quickly as most plants, which is perhaps the main reason why such risks are so often taken.

That it is folly to be without a night man as late in the fall as this, cannot be denied. We had an example a few nights ago, when the temperature suddenly dropped to 23 degrees. Any carnation house that was without fire heat on that night surely was too cold to be good for the plants. The check caused by such a severe drop in temperature would take several days to overcome.

If the grower would consider how much headway his plants ought to make in a given time, and try to keep them up to it, he would consider as damage any lack of headway caused by low temperature. That is really the proper view to take of the matter. It is not a question of setting your plants back, but of holding them back. We do not consider that an occasional drop to 45 degrees in the morning will do any harm to the plants, but we do not care to have it happen many days in succession. Lower than that the temperature should never go, lest it have a retarding effect.

Ventilation.

One great mistake which inexperienced growers often make is to close the ventilators tight in the evening after a bright day, thinking to corral a lot of heat in the house, to keep it warm over night. Not only will this always fail to accomplish the desired result, but there is no surer way of starting leaf-spot, rust, or any of the many diseases that are so much complained of these days. I have preached abundant ventilation continually for years, and I still find that plenty of fresh air is the best preventive of disease. It makes no difference whether the temperature is abnormally high or low, fresh air will aid the plants to bear the unnatural conditions. In a moderate temperature the fresh air will help to build up the plant. Perhaps you have noticed how dank the atmosphere is in your house after it was closed all night and the temperature is quite low. It seems like a dark, damp cellar. No plant should be subjected to such conditions.

There should always be at least a crack of air left on the house, except when hard firing is required to keep the temperature up to the mark, and even then the ventilators should be raised an inch or so for an hour each day to change the air. I would much rather have a house drop to 45 degrees with an inch of ventilation, than to have it at 48 degrees and closed tight. It will also be better for the plants if the temperature is 48 degrees with a little fire-heat on, and an inch of ventilation, than to be at 50 degrees with no fire heat. The air keeps moving better, and will remain drier, which is more beneficial to the plants at night. A. F. J. BAUR.

MORE LEAF-SPOT.

We enclose sample of carnation leaves, which are affected with some disease. Will you please tell us what is the best thing to do for these plants. The trouble is spreading rapidly in our house, and will ruin our stock, if it keeps on. J. L. O'Q.

Your carnations are badly affected with leaf-spot, the same as C. G. complained of in last week's issue of the REVIEW, page 1332. You will find full directions for combatting the disease, though I might add that you would better pick off all affected leaves, to get rid of the spores as quickly as possible. In fact, this should be done always in case of such diseases, right at the start. When all the active fungus has been removed, it is much easier to keep the inactive spores in check and destroy them, than when there are quantities of spore-bearing fungi around. It's the surest method of destruction. A. F. J. B.

FUMIGATING CARNATIONS.

I have some carnations in one of my lettuce houses. Will it injure them in any way to fumigate the house with tobacco smoke? Will it injure them to use quite cold water? B. A. B.

Many growers still cling to the old method of fumigating their plants with tobacco smoke to destroy aphids. There are numerous objections to that method, of which I have made mention many times in my notes, but the plants themselves are not easily damaged by the fumes.

The grower who finds a steady demand for his blooms finds it almost impossible to set a certain time each week to fumigate and to live up to it. The condition of the market, and the demands made on his cut, often prevent the regular fumigating, and before he is aware of it, the aphides have multiplied by the million. The odor of the fumes clings to the blooms for some time, and it seems to impair their keeping qualities. It also takes color out of the colored blooms, especially of those varieties that bleach easily, like Mrs. Thos. W. Lawson, Enchantress, etc.

We use the nicotine extracts for spraying. You can apply these and go right ahead cutting the blooms. No damage is done to the blooms and it is less trouble to apply.

Water that will not injure lettuce will not injure carnations in the least. A. F. J. B.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Lateral shoots will now begin to be plentiful and should be removed while they are yet small and in a soft condition. If these are neglected and allowed to remain until they are hard and woody, they have by that time deprived the bud of a great amount of sustenance, destroyed the symmetry of the stem, leaving it bare of good foliage, and, having to be removed by the knife, leave the stem with snags, which destroy all its beauty.

Care in cutting, so that the proper eye is reserved for the new break, should be insisted on, as it is easy for a careless or incompetent hand to entirely destroy the prospects of the next crop, by careless cutting. Tying so that the flower can be cut with its full complement of stem, without loosening all the plant, should also be insisted upon. The only way to obviate this is to have each flower stem tied independently. See also that the flower stems are properly separated, to allow a free circulation of air among the foliage. Keep the benches and walks clear of weeds and decaying leaves; and, as cleanliness is essential to the life of a rose, keep the house tidy and clean.

Those roses which were planted early, and which have been, giving a cut during the last month or so, should receive some feeding by this time. This is easily applied in the form of liquid, which should be rather weak for a first application, or until the plants get accustomed to this class of food. Care should be taken not to allow the benches to become too dry when this is to be applied, as the plants, if thirsty, will absorb too much, which will cause the young wood to wilt.

A light sprinkling of bone-meal or wood ashes, lightly ruffled in, is also of great benefit to roses which are requiring a stimulant. If any mulching is to be applied, it should be put on very thin, in fact barely sufficient to cover the surface. This can be repeated frequently during the winter, and is much safer and more beneficial than applying it in heavy doses.

A VARIEGATED TESTOUT.

A blotched and striped variety of Mme. Caroline Testout rose recently has been exhibited at München-Gladbach, exciting much interest among the visitors. The plant has the exact habit of the parent, is as vigorous in growth, and as abundant a bloomer, and the blooms are the same in form and size, but they differ in being striped or blotched with deep rose; the latter less frequently, and the blotching occurs on the upper or lower half of the petals, whereas the stripes run longitudinally from base to end of the petals. These markings are not regularly disposed over the entire bloom, but partially only, as in the York and Lancaster rose. As is well known, Mme. Caroline Testout is a capital variety for forcing, and this sport from it is likely to be much sought after should it prove constant.—H. T. J.

few nights since," and then he wanted to sit down, but, as usual, everybody shouted, "Let's have the dream," and then he proceeded: "I dreamt I was ascending the golden stairs and there was an ante-room just outside the door where St. Peter was on duty. In this room was a large blackboard, and on this board all those privileged to climb the stairs were supposed to record their misdeeds while in the flesh. To my surprise, on the last step of the stairs I met Dr. Watson coming down. I exclaimed, 'What's the matter, doctor? Surely you have not been rejected!' 'No,' said Dr. Watson, 'it's all right, but I am going for more chalk.'" W. S.

A PENNSYLVANIA STORE.

In the provincial cities of Pennsylvania there are a large number of well furnished and prosperous retail flower stores. Such a one is that shown in the accompanying illustration from a photograph taken at Sewickley. J. K. Hutchison is proprietor of the Sewickley Cut Flower Co. He reports business as excellent in the last year and says he thinks it will be much better this fall. Indeed, he believes that his facilities will be taxed to the utmost.

ALPHA AND OMEGA.

Alpha St. C. Eberfield is the proprietor of the Alpha Floral Co., at Kansas City. The business was started October 18, 1903, at 802 Walnut street. Mr. Eberfield realized the necessity of publicity and judiciously used liberal space in newspapers and billboards. The outcome was to make it necessary to move to more commodious quarters at 819 Walnut street. A strong point which characterizes Mr. Eberfield's success is the sincerity he maintains with everyone. He carries out to the letter all statements in advertising, and when he says that he will do a thing the public has learned that he will do it. But Alpha believes that the short cut to Omega, the SYMBOLIC DESIGNS.

Please tell us the meaning of the following designs: Wreath, rock of ages, sheaf of wheat, pillow, open book, scroll, harp, star and crescent, broken wheel, lyre, broken column, gates ajar, etc., as cross for faith, anchor for hope, etc.

A. C. S.

It is likely that few of the designs mentioned are symbols of anything in particular, as cross for faith, anchor for hope, etc. We will try and give you our idea of what the meanings of several of the designs are. Some may be inventions of the artist and have no symbolic or emblematic meaning.

The wreath is a symbol of victory. It was the custom of the Greeks to crown victors in a combat with a wreath or garland. Webster says, "A garland, a chaplet, especially one given to a victor."

Rock of ages, probably the same as the ordinary cross, but admitting of more elaboration; sheaf of wheat, the harvest has come; pillow, blissful rest; open book, as used in floral designs, an emblem of the holy bible.

A scroll really is only a roll of paper or parchment ready to record your deeds, or your name will be inscribed with the blessed. "Here is the scroll of every man's name" (Shakspeare). Harp and lyre, usually used at death of a musical artist or lover of music, perhaps a symbol of celestial music. Star and crescent, a combination invented by some florist, and symbolic of nothing in particular. Poets allude to the crescent. Tennyson says, "I see the crescent promise of my spirit hath not set." Broken wheel, the cycle of life is broken. Broken column, meaning that death has come during the prime of life; cut off prematurely.

Gates ajar, the gates of heaven are opened to you; the door is left ajar that you may enter.

Speaking about the gates or portals of the supposed heaven, I cannot refrain from repeating a short story. When I had the pleasure to call on Wm. Nicholson, of Framingham, Mass., he introduced me to a well known M. D., a neighbor, and a half hour's ride towards Boston discovered to me that this M. D. was the most delightful companion and finished gentleman I ever had met, a type of man and civilization you cannot meet in any other part of this great continent. He told me that recently Dr. Watson (Ian Maclaren), the famous author of that sweet gem, "The Bonnie Brier Bush," was given a banquet in Boston, and following the talented author was a young lawyer who assumed embarrassment and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, can you expect me to follow the learned doctor? I am incapable. I can only tell you of a dream I had a making of a profit on the business, is through low prices. His was one of the earliest of the popular price stores in Kansas City and he has worked up a large trade, especially in funeral work, on the basis of small profits and big business. Another strong point that has aided Alpha in reaching his Omega is the elegant display he constantly maintains in his windows, and it might be added that his goldfish window is no exception.

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION.

[A paper by J. B. Velle, of the Lord & Burnham Co., read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, October 16, 1906.]

Greenhouse construction may be divided into two different classes, private and commercial. In the former class appearance enters more largely in the design and construction than in the latter, but the object in both is to secure the most durable construction, combined with that of one that will admit the greatest amount of light, the element of expense nearly always being a factor to be considered.

For private use where it is assumed the owner is not compelled to sacrifice durability or appearance because of a lack of capital, the almost uniform con-plate, and posts with cast-iron foot-pieces; third, trussed roof house, having angle-iron plate and posts, and cast-iron foot-pieces; fourth, an all-wood house of sashbar construction, having wood plate and wood posts; and fifth, an all-wood sashbar house, having wood plate and wood sill on concrete walls.

For one starting in the florists' business or adding to his present range, the question is, which construction will pay the greatest dividends in the business. This point rests on the amount of light admitted, the durability of construction, and the probable cost of repairs.

The Lightest House.

From the standpoint of light, assuming that all of the constructions have 16x24 glass placed the 16-inch way, the iron-frame house has a considerable advantage. The size of the standard sashbar in this construction is 15/16x1 7/8 inches and the wood cap for rafter is one and seven-eighths inches each way. The size of the standard bar for sashbar construction is 1 1/2x2 1/2 inches. In an iron-frame house 100 feet long, providing the sun shines at right angles to the length of the house, you would have six feet and six and three-quarters inches of shade against eight feet and three inches in sashbar house, which makes a difference in favor of the iron-frame house of one foot and eight and one-quarter inches of solid shade. It has been argued that because of the depth of the iron rafters, that when the sun shines from the direction of the gable of the house, there is more shade with the iron-frame construction than in the sashbar. This is not so. There is about fifteen per cent more shade in the sashbar house if the sun shines from the direction of gable than in the iron-frame house with 3-inch iron rafters. Furthermore, in one construction the iron frame supports the house, while in the other the sashbars only give strength to the roof. This allows the bars to be omitted under ventilating sash in iron-frame houses, while they have to be run to the ridge in sashbar houses, making additional shade at that point in the latter construction, tisement appeared in the classified columns of a Kansas City paper. Had it appeared with good display some people would have considered it a good advertisement and all would have agreed that it is unique. The text is as follows:

LUTHER BURKANK.

Luther Burbank is a man of small frame, refined features and rather delicate health. His hair is beginning to turn gray and he has dispensed with the heavy mustache, curled like that of a poet, which he formerly wore. Now his face is entirely smooth. He is indifferent about his dress. He has no wife or family to look after him, but his mother, now over 90 years of age, is his housekeeper. His cottage is small, but exceedingly neat and daintily furnished. It is almost entirely hidden by wild roses and other creepers, and it stands surrounded by palms and other shrubs in the middle of a garden of nine acres, with a row of big walnut trees shading the sidewalk.—Wm. E. Curtis in Chicago Record-Herald.

struction is an iron-frame greenhouse on masonry walls. This has been proven by years of experience to meet more nearly the requirements than any other construction.

Commercial Houses.

The person desiring to build commercially, who to be successful must closely Representing Bentzen Floral Co. in St. Louis Label Parade.

count expenditures, cannot usually afford to place a large amount of money in expensive masonry walls. To this person a choice of several distinct forms of construction is offered: First, the iron-frame greenhouse on cast-iron foot-pieces; second, the wooden frame, or so-called sashbar house, having angle-iron by having two rows of bars, one above the other at the ridge sash.

It may seem to some that these figures show so small a difference in light between one method of construction and that of the other that it would not pay in dollars and cents, as far as light goes, to invest any greater amount of money in one construction than in the other. I think, however, if you will go into a house of sashbar construction and then into one of iron-frame construction, you will at once notice a difference in the amount of light in the houses; and I also think you will admit that, if this is easily discernible to the eye, better results will be obtained in the lighter houses, providing all other conditions are the same, than in the one having more shade.

Strength and Safety.

As for strength of construction, the iron-frame house is decidedly the strongest, especially in a wide house. But for a house not over thirty-three feet four inches wide, of usual pitch, which allows for five benches about fifty-two inches wide each, with usual walks, the sashbar construction with angle-iron posts and plate offers an excellent solution for a person who has not the capital to invest in an iron-frame structure. Although many sashbar houses are built wider, in my opinion, to secure an element of safety and strength without undue supports and trussing, the iron-frame house should be used in structures wider than about thirty-three feet.

This sash-bar construction, as previously stated, has some disadvantages, as regards the amount of light admitted, but compares favorably in durability to the iron-frame structure. The same general form of cast-iron foot-piece and angle-iron plate is used in both constructions.

The trussed roof house of sashbar construction, having angle-iron posts and plate and cast-iron foot-pieces, has the advantage of doing away with supporting columns in houses not over twenty-nine feet wide.

The Cost.

The all-wood house of sashbar construction, having wood plate and posts, has the redeeming feature of being the least expensive construction that one can erect, considering first cost only. The sashbar house having wood plate and wood sills on concrete walls is a construction more expensive than a house having angle-iron plate, angle-iron posts with cast-iron foot-pieces, double boarding of cypress below glass, and removable baseboard, while it has the disadvantage of not being as durable, because of the liability of the wood plate and the wood sill on the masonry wall to decay in a short time. Especially is the wood sill on masonry wall a weak member in greenhouse construction.

Let us compare the cost of a house 100 feet long, having angle-iron plate, angle-iron posts, and cast-iron foot-pieces, with the all-wood house, having wood plate and wood posts. The cost of the angle-iron plate for both eaves, together with angle-iron posts and cast-iron foot-pieces spaced every six lights of glass, would be about $120. The cost of the wood plate and cypress posts, spaced every three lights of glass, which is the usual spacing for this construction, would be approximately $60. This makes a difference of $60 in the cost of one house over the other.

Assuming that you build a house 100 feet long, with wood posts and plate, superstructure costing $1,500 complete, you will see that the additional cost of $60 for iron plate and posts is four per cent of the total cost of superstructure of the all-wood house. The heating and benches would cost the same in either case.

Durability.

Let us further assume that the all-wood house would last fifteen years. If you add the same percentage, four per cent, to the life of the all-wood house, the house with iron plate and posts would have to last you only between seven and eight months longer than the all-wood house. However, by investing $60 more you lose the interest on this, except as it is earned in the length of life of your building. If this $60, otherwise invested, should double itself in fifteen years, you would have to figure eight per cent increase in the length of life of the iron and wood house over the all-wood, in order that your investment on either one may pay you equally well. This eight per cent added would mean that the iron and wood house would have to last about one year and three months longer than the all-wood. The actual increase of length of life of house, because of the iron posts and plate, would be many times the one year and three months. If the house with iron plate and posts lasts twenty-two and one-half years, or half as long again as does the all-wood house, which is reasonable to suppose on a basis of the figures just given, your cost per year for superstructure of house would be between $69 and $70 for the iron and wood construction, against $100 for the all-wood, or a saving of nearly a third of your cost per year for superstructure of greenhouses by using iron plate and posts.

Importance of Width.

The design of a greenhouse is fully as important as the construction to be used, in order to cover the ground at the least expense, secure the best circulation of air, and heat to the best advantage. One can readily see that, no matter what the width of the house, the expense of the side walls is the same; consequently the wider the house, providing one keeps within reasonable limits, the less the cost per square foot covered, so far as superstructure goes. The circulation of air is much better in a wide house than in a narrow one, and the wide house is more easily heated in proportion to the surface covered than a narrow one. An example of this can be seen at Waban Conservatories, Natick, where in a house twenty-one feet wide, with ridge about fourteen feet high, there are twelve 1¼-inch pipes; and in a house forty feet wide, with ridge about twenty-one feet high, there are twenty 1¼-inch pipes; and I understand that a higher and more even temperature can be maintained in this wide house than in the narrow one.

Ridge and Furrow.

The ridge and furrow houses, while in almost universal use through the west, are not so extensively built in New England. These houses present the advantage of being more economical than detached houses, because of the elimination of several sides in a block of houses, but they have the disadvantage of more or less shade from the gutters, and more breakage of glass by ice and snow than in detached houses. There seems to be a growing tendency, however, towards this construction.

Pitch of Roof.

The even-span house is the cheapest and in a large majority of cases is the style built. Where houses run east and west, which is conceded by the majority of growers to be the most desirable way of locating them, several of the best growers have the roof on the north side of a steeper pitch than that on the south, both eaves being of the same height. This throws the ridge north of the center, and is done to avoid shade from the ridge on the rear bench or bed.

In Boston, on December 22, the sun shines at an angle of 23 degrees, while on June 22 at 71 degrees. This makes a rise of the sun 8 degrees per month. With an even-span house, running east and west, having the roof 32 degrees pitch, you will see that you will get no shade from the ridge on the rear bench until about February 1, or until the sun gets higher than the pitch of the roof on the north side. If the north side of the house has a pitch of 45 degrees, with the house running east and west, you will get no shade on the rear bench until about March 20. The steeper the pitch of the roof the more surface in it, and a proportionate increase in cost.

Aspect of the House.

It is a question of opinion as to whether the saving of shade on the north bench compensates for the additional cost. If the house is placed facing a few degrees to the east, in order to obtain the morning sun more directly, the shade from the ridge on the north bench is varied. This facing of the house slightly to the east of south seems the ideal arrangement to secure the benefits of the morning sun. There is little difference the year through between the amount of sunshine in the morning and that in the afternoon. Boston weather reports for five years show an average of twenty-four more hours sunshine each year in the morning than in the afternoon.

Ordinarily the pitch of roof giving the best results is 32 degrees, or a rise of seven and one-half inches to the foot. This, however, is varied occasionally for various reasons. In the even-span, ridge and furrow houses, running east and west, a pitch of about 27 degrees is often used with good results. With this arrangement the roof of one house shades the other less than would be the case if the pitch were steeper.

The spacing of 16x24-inch glass in the roof the 24-inch way is quite often done with desirable results, as far as the amount of light in the house is concerned, but this is usually at the sacrifice of more or less glass, as the breakage is usually greater in the house constructed in this manner.

In the Retail Store of A. H. Schneider, Oak Park, Ill.

Ventilation.

Continuous ventilation on both sides of the ridge gives the best results. If one places top ventilators one light apart, there is more space for air to be admitted than if the sashes are continuous, but there is also more liability of a draught. Side ventilation, while desirable for violets or cool plants, is in decreasing demand for use in carnation growing.

Material Important.

The durability of the woodwork in a greenhouse depends on the wood, the method and thoroughness of drying, the manner of applying the first coat of paint, the manner in which joints are made, and the thoroughness with which it is kept painted after erection. Red gulf cypress, from the swampy southern states, stands the test of durability in greenhouse construction better than any other wood. This, however, must be free from sap and should be thoroughly air-dried.

To insure the best results, the first coat of paint should be applied to the woodwork by dipping, rather than by painting it with a brush, for in the dipping process the wood absorbs several times the amount of oil that is retained in the grain by the other processes. This gives a durability and a foundation for future coats of paint that cannot be secured in any other way.

Milling and construction should be such that there will be as little chance of water lodging at joints as possible.

The purchasing of glass, putty and white lead for paint to be used after the priming coat, are matters to be as carefully looked into as any other part of the construction. If a poor grade of any of these is used, they may materially affect the dividends of the florists' business.

There is no class of building construction exposed to more trying conditions than a greenhouse; consequently there is every reason for making the structure as durable as possible consistent with a reasonable outlay. The majority of successful florists, if they have not previously built of a durable construction, are fast learning that a small additional cost for durable members in the construction pays them a large percentage on their investment. I have seen many florists kept from deserved advancement, because of the constant outlay for repairs on buildings erected in what at the time seemed an inexpensive manner.

THE READERS' CORNER.

More About Cyanide.

Concerning the article in the REVIEW, on cyanide gas for plant fumigation, Mr. Summey calls attention to one of the important points in the use of chemically-pure cyanide. By using this grade, one ounce, by weight, two liquid ounces of sulphuric acid, with three or three and one-half liquid ounces of water, forms a proper combination, as found by considerable experiment on the Pacific coast, where we are using tons of the material successfully. An additional amount of water retards combustion, thus forming gas more slowly. I find that an essential point in the use of cyanide is that it must be used at night to avoid burning. Another important point is to have plants as dry as possible. Moisture on the foliage is injurious, causing the plants to absorb the gas, rendering it less effective upon the insects. Moisture in the air has a similar effect.

O. M. M.

It is peculiar that, while so many florists are anxious to obtain information regarding the use of cyanide, few seem to be aware of the valuable bulletins on this subject issued by the Department of Agriculture in Washington. In Bulletin No. 27, Department of Entomology, is given detailed instruction as to its use and management; and if the instructions are carefully followed out, there will be no disappointment in the results. Much still remains to be learned, as the results seem to be more or less influenced by surrounding conditions, such as presence or absence of light, varying temperatures and degrees of humidity in the houses, the stage of growth of the various plants, etc., but for all practical purposes the fumigation will be found satisfactory if done as advised in the bulletin.

I have used cyanide for several years with success. The first year was about 1900, and some experiments carried out then proved its value in the destruction of San Jose scale. Later I used it on double violets to kill black aphids, using at the rate of fifteen one-hundredths of a gram (twenty-eight grams equal one ounce) per cubic foot; single violets at ten one-hundredths per cubic foot. The amount used for the double varieties will burn the foliage of the single.

Last winter a peach and apricot house, badly infested with San Jose scale and red clover mite, was treated with two very heavy doses, the result being that they are now absolutely clean and healthy, though last year, when I first saw the trees, several branches were dead and others dying.

I do not believe that roses will stand a sufficiently strong fumigation to kill any of the insects injurious to them.

Tomato and cucumber vines will stand without injury a sufficient strength to destroy white fly or to stupefy them so that they will drop off the leaves, when they can be washed away by the hose. The actual amount I used for this was not more than five one-hundredths of a gram per cubic foot.

Now a gram, being only one twenty-eighth part of an ounce, is a very small amount, and I find it difficult to get men to understand that a pinch or two of the cyanide may mean death to the plants; so, if the florist is unable to make these accurate measurements himself, he will do far better to get a druggist to make up the desired amount than to use the kitchen scales, or, as I knew a foreman who "knew all about it" do last winter, use a 2½-inch pot to measure with. I heard later that he had burned all his Beauties.

Get the chemically-pure, ninety-three per cent cyanide from a wholesale druggist, in five or ten-pound lots, if a quantity is to be used, and the acid, wherever it can be bought the cheapest. Lehn & Fink, Williams street, New York City, is a reliable house. Follow the government directions and do not experiment, except in a small way, and you will have an insecticide that is invaluable and which is most efficacious. M. N. Ross.

DAHLIAS AT LOCUST FARM.

Locust Farm is the name given a tract of land purchased last season by the Henry A. Dreer Co., Philadelphia. The farm is two and one-half miles beyond their nurseries at Riverton, N. J. It consists of seventy acres in the form of a square, with the old farm buildings in the center. The ground is undulating and fertile, the soil varying from a sandy to a fairly heavy loam. There is a heavy clay subsoil requiring drainage in places. This season, the first under the present owners, five-sixths of the land is under cultivation. The remaining one-sixth will be drained this season and planted with peonies. The stock now growing on the farm comprises dahlias, for which it was primarily intended, hardy phloxes in their first year, cannas, roses, and one or two other things. The dahlias, comprising perhaps a third of the cultivated acreage, have made strong growth. The varieties which were mixed when received have been gone over with care, every plant not true to name being destroyed. So well has this work been done that it is safe to say that the Dreer stock will be true to name next season.

Through the kindness of a member of the company, four excellent varieties are here reproduced with the descriptions: A most beautiful variety for cut flowers is Shower of Fire, a truly descriptive name for an early-flowering, free-blooming, long-stemmed dahlia. Countess of Lonsdale, a well-known standard variety, is prized above all other kinds. Frank Smith, though shaded with magenta, is grown in quantity to meet urgent demand. Mrs. Roosevelt, soft pink, is a large flower of pleasing shade. Gustave Immer is one of the blackest crimsons imaginable, a good flower. A large number of the varieties are what are termed hybrid cactus, an apt name for a section of the so-called decorative class.

The immense field of one-year-old hardy phloxes made vigorous growth until, when coming into bloom in September, they presented a sight so magnificent that when he first saw them Patrick O'Mara arose erect in the trap, exclaiming that he never had seen such a sight. All the best varieties were there, with heavy masses of roots, sturdy tops and big heads of bloom. F. G. Von Lassburg is considered the best white, Mrs. Jenkins, a close rival, and so on through all the colors and shades. Among the best of the newer varieties are Albion, fiery scarlet, early; Selma, soft pink; General Von Hentz, rose purple. Other new varieties of promise are on trial.

The cannas looked remarkably well, vigorous and full of bloom. R. Wallace is considered a fine yellow. It is of good height, free, the flowers of a lemon yellow shade. Florence Vaughan and Buttercup complete a strong trio in a desirable color.

The roses were chiefly monthly and tea varieties. Old favorites were there in quantity, growing nicely. The farm as a whole is in fine condition, telling in eloquent language of the brain and brawn freely expended to bring order out of chaos. PHIL.

FERTILIZERS AND THEIR USE.

[Synopsis of a paper by Prof. R. Harcourt, of the Ontario Agricultural College, delivered before the Canadian Horticultural Association, at Guelph, Ont., August 29, 1906.]

It is well known that in order to secure the best results in animal production, careful selection and breeding must be associated with good feeding. The same is true with reference to the growth of plants, for it is just as essential that there be quick, vigorous growth in plant life as in animal life. The infant plant requires warm air, sunshine, and abundance of easily absorbed food.

Origin and Needs of a Plant.

The young plant starts from a seed. The seed contains an embryo, or germ, which is extremely rich in albuminoids, fat, phosphates, and potash. It also contains a store of concentrated plant food, intended to nourish the young plant until the roots and leaves are sufficiently developed to gather their own supplies.

The future health and vigor of the plant will depend on the amount of food available to the tiny rootlets sent out by the young plant, that the soil is warm, that there is an abundance of sunshine, and that it has a sufficient supply of oxygen and carbon dioxide. If the roots and leaves quickly come in contact with nourishment the development will be rapid. The plant requires oxygen for respiration; it gives off water from its lungs, or the leaves; it assimilates food; it breathes, that is, gives off carbon dioxide as a result of the oxidation of its food.

In all this it is similar to the animal. But it goes even farther and collects its food from the simple substances, such as carbon dioxide and various soluble salts found in the soil, and from these builds up the complex sugars, starches, fats, and albuminoids. Thus it will be seen that the plant must prepare its own food. From what has been said, it is evident that the plant grower has just as wide a field for work as the stock breeder, and that the thorough understanding and development of plant life affords an even wider field for good judgment and study than the animal life.

Sources of Food.

The plant's food is derived from the atmosphere and from the soil. From the atmosphere it gathers carbon dioxide and oxygen, and some plants collect nitrogen. There is an abundance of air around the leaves of the plant, but if the soil is not open and porous, there may not be enough in contact with the roots, for air in the soil in which plants are growing is essential to the life of the plants. This ventilation of the soil is needed to supply the oxygen required in germinating the seed and to permit the roots to live. It is also required to supply free nitrogen for the use of the free nitrogen-fixing germs, and to remove the excess of carbon dioxide which is set free in the soil.

Nitrogen.

From the soil the plant derives nitrogen, chiefly in the form of nitrates, and ash substances. Fortunately, although a great many different elements are absorbed by the plant, only four require particular attention. These are nitrogen, potassium, phosphorus, and calcium. In the absence of nitrogen, a plant makes no appreciable growth. With only a limited supply, a plant begins its growth in a normal way, but as soon as the available nitrogen is used up, the lower and smaller leaves begin gradually to die down from the tips, and all the plant energy is centered in one or two leaves. Nitrogen is one of the main constituents of chlorophyll, the green coloring matter of plants, hence with a limited supply of nitrogen, the leaves will have a sickly yellow color.

Phosphorus.

Phosphorus, in the form of phosphates, is found in all parts of the plant, but tends to accumulate in the upper part of the stem and leaves, and particularly in the seed. Its function

From what has been said, it is evident that the plant grower has just as wide a field for work as the stock breeder, and that the thorough understanding and development of plant life affords an even wider field for good judgment and study than the animal life.

Sources of Food.

The plant's food is derived from the atmosphere and from the soil. From the atmosphere it gathers carbon dioxide and oxygen, and some plants collect nitrogen. There is an abundance of air around the leaves of the plant, but if the soil is not open and porous, there may not be enough in contact with the roots, for air in the soil in which plants are growing is essential to the life of the plants. Nitrogen is one of the main constituents of chlorophyll, the green coloring matter of plants, hence with a limited supply of nitrogen, the leaves will have a sickly yellow color.

Phosphorus.

Phosphorus, in the form of phosphates, is found in all parts of the plant, but tends to accumulate in the upper part of the stem and leaves, and particularly in the seed. Its function is, apparently, to aid in the production and transformation of the protein bodies. An insufficient supply of phosphoric acid always results in a poorly developed plant.

Potassium.

Potassium is one of the most important and least variable of all the elements in the ash of plants. It is quite evenly distributed throughout the leaves, stem, and seed, and generally occurs in the entire plant in the largest proportion of any of the essential ash constituents. The function of potassium is apparently to aid in the production and transformation of the carbohydrates. It is also essential for the formation of protein, and thus indirectly aids in the formation of all organic matter. It doubtless has much to do in the way of regulating the acidity of the sap, by forming salts with the organic acids developed during the growth of the plant.

Calcium.

Calcium is a constituent of the stem rather than the seed, and seems to impart hardness to plants. The exact function of lime is not clearly understood, but it seems to aid in the construction of the cell walls. According to some authorities, its absence is felt in less time than either potassium or phosphorus. It is claimed that a supply of lime is just as essential to the plant in order that it may form cell walls from starch and sugar, as it is for the formation of bone in animals.

Moisture and Humus.

But the presence of the chemical elements of fertility in themselves is not sufficient to insure fertility. To serve as food plants, they must be in a form available to the roots. Water is absolutely essential, both for the solution of the food elements in the soil, and for their distribution in the plant after they are acquired.

Possibly no one factor influences the water-holding power of soil more than humus. It also appreciably affects the general physical condition of the soil, and in its decay it causes potash and phosphoric acid to be rendered available to plants. The various essential elements of plant food may be supplied in inorganic forms, but unless humus is present, to regulate the general physical conditions and to supply the essentials for the breaking-up of the insoluble formed salts in the soils, vigorous plants cannot be produced.

MUSHROOMS.

This has been a most prolific fall for that delicious fruit of the pasture, Agaricus campestris. Someone wanted to know the name of the common edible mushroom. That is the name. Agaricus is the genus of fungi to which it belongs, and its specific name is from campus, a field or open common, as the field devoted to the sports and games of college students is yet called the college campus. The long, hot summer and then the copious rains of the past two weeks will account for the abundance of mushrooms. They have been found in orchards, meadows, and pastures, and every wanderer in the fields has been able to gather all he could carry. It's a great blessing that many of our rural population have not acquired a taste for mushrooms, and we hope they never will. There will be all the more left for us who dote on them.

We once dreamed that we had spread before us more broiled mushrooms than we could eat. It was only a dream, and it never came true. What a lot of lies there are told about the luscious fungi. One farmer will tell you that when he plowed his corn stubble he turned over bushels of them. Another will tell you that he "seen on Bill Skeet's farm, in a pasture, more'n a wagon load." When you go to these favored spots, satisfied with only a remnant of these crops, they all have disappeared. It's been a short but a merry season for the lovers of the mushroom, and let us hope they will be as abundant next fall.

On going out the other morning, shortly after the dew had evaporated, we discovered near the barn a large specimen of agaricus. He was too large to pick, and as he was criticising his grandpa's Buffalo notes we had him photographed. This variety was not the mushroom, but Agaricus Corfuensis, or giant puff-ball. W. S.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

With the advent of the chrysanthemum flood comes again the beautiful, balmy Indian summer of late October, so sure for New York every year, and so ends the fourteen days of strong prices for roses and carnations. But there will be no serious slump and good stock of all kinds will bring good prices, no matter how swift and deep the river of mums may flow.

The chrysanthemums that came to town last week were top-notchers, most of them, and until Friday the best sold for $6 a dozen. Then the price fell gradually as the supply increased. With the warmer weather and the supply growing in volume daily, we may expect to record a big discount in our next report.

Violets are improving in color and perfume. Something shortened the supply on Saturday. The demand could not be filled. One expert declared the west was drawing on our source of supply up the Hudson and paying better prices than we. This will never do. While we are glad to see the west progress, it must not forget that we can only spare what violets we cannot use ourselves, and anyway 1,000 miles is too far to ship them safely or sweetly. When the perfume is dead what have you left, and yet with the stockyards odors I can easily imagine Chicago reveling in the exquisite aroma of violets forty-eight hours old.

Beauties have fallen. They always drop their heads and prices when the big mums appear. On Saturday $25 per hundred was top and the tendency downward, a sort of "bear market," so to speak. Roses of all kinds fell off. There seemed to be no call for reds. Their popularity is waning, perhaps because of their overabundance. Everybody has Richmond. Tastes change. When we had no Liberty or Richmond, even the now neglected Meteor was precious. There is an oversupply of Killarney.

For corsages, brides' bouquets and table decoration orchids have the call, among the 400 at any rate. The retail windows are a safe guide on this question. Not one of them is dressed until it is ablaze with cattleyas or golden odontoglossum. The predicted craze for orchids has materialized sooner than we dreamed. From all over the country comes the demand for plants. Carrillo & Baldwin tell me last week they shipped away nearly fifty cases. This means a local supply in every big city before many years. Meantime New York is and will always be headquarters, for around and within its limits are several of the largest orchid growers in the world.

Carnations are strong and scarce. Never have the high rates held as firmly as early in the season; $5 and $6 was paid last week for Enchantress and good whites. Every variety, where quality was up to the mark, touched high water mark for October, and good prices are likely to continue, for the supply is, I am told, limited in comparison with other years.

Various Notes.

The club meeting, on November 12, should be an interesting one. Most of the mum experts have promised exhibits. Totty will have a lot of his new ones here from Madison. F. R. Pierson Co. will demonstrate what their wonderful new houses can produce. Imagine their extent—nearly 50,000 square feet of glass in three of them!

Wm. Lesser, bookkeeper for Reed & Keller during the last ten years, has not taken a holiday in all that time. Next year he goes for a long European trip. Some idea of his devotion to business may be realized when it is known that in twenty-five years he has not been at Coney Island.

Thomas Young, Jr., has opened his wholesale store immediately above the retail establishment at 41 West Twenty-eighth street. At the funeral of Mr. Hyde, a well-known theatrical manager, last week, the Thomas Young Co. sent a standing wreath of orchids and valley valued at $250.

Arthur T. Boddington has taken the American agency for Edward's English cyaniding apparatus and cyanide sodium, for which they have created much inquiry and demand.

F. W. O. Schmitz, of Prince Bay, has a grand stock of Azalea Indica in many varieties and unlimited quantity, which is being rapidly depleted.

J. F. Sullivan, of Detroit, was in New York last week on his way home from Philadelphia and the burial of his mother. The sympathy of the trade is extended.

John J. Foley, 226 Bowery, is receiving large shipments from his own greenhouses at Madison. He reports a steady call also for his album of designs, all copies of his own handiwork. The boiling of the political pot means busy times for Mr. Foley.

H. H. Berger & Co. are having a loud call for hyacinths, narcissi, tulips and Japanese lilies, their importation this fall being large and their new representative already making himself felt among his friends of other days.

O. V. Zangen, of Hoboken, reports a large sale for seeds of giant cyclamen and his new Primula obconica hybrida, especially the grandiflora compacta variety.

Charles Millang unloaded many dozen cases of boxwood on Saturday, the first installment of his European importations. The new store across the way for the purpose of display and storage will be none too large.

George Saltford's violets from his own place at Rhinebeck begin to manifest second crop color and size. The writer of "How to Grow Violets" asserts that no first crop should ever be picked and that never a bunch of violets should reach the New York wholesale market before October 15.

James Hart, the veteran, has painted, papered and arranged his new store at 103 West Twenty-eighth street so thoroughly that few excel it.

A. J. Fellouris is enlarging his store at 52 West Twenty-eighth street and considerably increasing its depth.

Wm. Starke's importation of boxwood arrived last week from Europe and was rapidly distributed. His conservatory is stocked with palms, ferns and foliage plants, and a brisk trade is prepared for.

A. Warendorff's windows were a dream on Saturday. Here an attractive window is of paramount importance, and this Mr. Warendorff never overlooks. Orchids are used abundantly. Unique boxes, baskets and novelties in arrangement and design are always in evidence.

Van Praag's "Wall street annex" at 66 Broadway proves a gold mine, and with a bull market down there, where a million dollars is a shuttlecock, it is no wonder. Only the finest of flowers will pass in this critical section, where price never is an object and quality alone talks.

David Clarke's Sons are crowded with fall weddings, and their immense store on upper Broadway is ready for everything that comes. The firm's own greenhouses in the Bronx are a wonderful convenience. Theirs is one of the best locations in New York for a high-class family trade.

Business is booming at Alex. McConnell's and the big store in the arcade on Fifth avenue is proving far in advance of the old stand in every way. Its size, light and convenience place it in the first rank among retail stores in America. The New Rochelle greenhouse and nursery are no unimportant adjunct to the completeness of the supply.

The ribbon houses are having a busy season without exception. Schloss Bros. have added considerable room to their stock space and already find night work a necessity. Emil Schloss has completed a thorough canvass of the west, covering the two months since the Dayton convention. Wertheimer Bros. also report a tremendous season. They have some new shades and combinations that are exceedingly attractive. Lion & Co. have had a splendid year and are more than satisfied with the aggregate results of their enterprise. In the cut flower wholesale district on Twenty-eighth street S. Rodh has his convenient headquarters, and he, too, has had the best year in his long experience.

At A. J. Guttman's, fine stock of Wellesley, Chatenay, Killarney, Richmond, Kaiserin and American Beauty arrive daily from his own greenhouses at Chatham, N. J. Victory carnation from Chas. Weber's, Lynbrook, is now arriving in large numbers.

J. SYLVESTER.

Oconto, Wis.

Oct. 15, 1906.

Pacific and Polly Rose are arriving at Ford Bros.' and the big store will be none too large for the promised avalanche from their big growers. Ivory and Bonnaffon will soon be here at the rate of 3,000 a day. Two thousand blooms were handled Monday of this week. Often 10,000 flowers are disposed of in a day. E. J. Taylor, of Southport, Conn.; McMillan, of Grand View, N. J., and Grundmann, of Secaucus, are among the firm's consignors. George Baker, the bookkeeper, and Mrs. Baker have just returned from their annual outing at Greenwood Lake.

H. E. Froment is ready for the fall rush, with heavy shipments of roses, mums and violets assured, and as fine Beauties as reach the New York market. The big store has been enlarged and many conveniences added.

Jos. Fenrich keeps a supply of orange blossoms ready every day for the October weddings and is banking on a mum show of his own when Totty's novelties come to town.

Polly Rose and Pacific in perfect condition reign supreme at J. K. Allen's and already are in uncountable profusion.

Geo. T. Hart, of Rochester, N. Y., was in the city on Monday.

The sympathy of the trade is extended J. B. Kidd, with Wm. Elliott & Sons, in the death of his daughter at St. Helena, Cal.

November 15, Miss Adele Taylor, daughter of John H. Taylor, of Bayside, will be married at The Oaks, her father's country residence on Long Island.

Brooklyn.

The October weddings are numerous. Especially is this so in the borough of Brooklyn, and all the leading florists there are busy. Wilson had three weddings one day last week, with house and church decorations, and every plant in his big store and conservatory was out earning its winter's keep. Flagler, Masur, Wier, Phillips and a host of others in the city of churches have had and are having a splendid fall trade, many say far in excess of other years. To enumerate the successful retail florists of Brooklyn would take a page of the REVIEW. No wonder that the big city has a wholesale section of its own and that Hicks & Crawbuck, Bonnot & Blake, W. H. Kuebler and Henry Crawbuck have more than they can attend to and are regularly moving to larger and finer stores, or adding to the space already at their disposal. All of them have their fine establishments complete for the coming season and are adding to their lists of regular growers every week. Not only Long Island experts, but shippers from Connecticut, Jersey, and even as far as Rochester, send their goods to the wholesale marts in Brooklyn. When the tunnels are completed and real rapid transit becomes a reality Brooklyn will be another New York in its facilities as a wholesale center.

It is not so many years ago when the wholesale business in cut flowers was conducted in Brooklyn through the medium of baskets and shank's horses. Now some of these pioneers have wholesale stores in the heart of New York and indulge in presidential aspirations. One must have been through it all, its ups and downs, its troubles and its triumphs, to realize the wonderful progress made and merchants born and developed in these last fifteen busy years.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

Godfrey Aschmann, the widely known Philadelphia plantsman, reached New York, October 15, on the steamer New Amsterdam, returning from a three months' tour of Holland, Belgium, France, Italy, and Switzerland. He bought a great deal of stock for import and sent his customers all over America a total of 1,100 souvenir postal cards from the various countries visited. He well deserves his title of "The sleepless and indefatigable plantsman."

W. Elliott & Sons had a fine sale of palms, ferns, dracaenas, orchids, etc., October 12. The auction season starts well.

WATERLOO, IA.—W. S. Hall, of Osage, has opened a branch store here in the postoffice block in charge of Miss Pelton.

ASHTABULA, O.—Mr. Gottschalk, who purchased the Bliss greenhouse a few months ago, is clearing away the old house, and will build several houses on the property next spring.

HANCOCK, MICH.—A. M. York makes a large display of chrysanthemums this year. He has recently received a consignment of 15,000 tulip and hyacinth bulbs, imported from Holland.

THE National Council of Horticulture, through its press bureau, recently sent out an article on peonies which was printed by daily and weekly papers having a combined circulation of millions of copies. The article, which said that "the peony has become a rival of the rose; during its season it floods the flower markets, almost to the exclusion of other flowers," concluded as follows: "Peony roots may be purchased at this time of the year from any florist, the older plants being most expensive."

THE St. Louis Florists' Club, at its meeting October 11, took a vote as to the desirability of changing the S. A. F. meeting from August to November. Opinion was strongly opposed to the proposed change.

At the big and successful exposition of advertising methods and processes just closed at Chicago there was displayed the following sound advice: "If your business is not worth advertising, advertise it for sale."

DON'T LOSE IT.

You may have a little surplus stock in some line—not much, perhaps, but enough to cut quite a hole in the profit made on the whole lot if this little surplus is lost. But it isn't necessary to lose it. Nearly always there is someone, somewhere, who needs just that little batch of plants. You can reach that someone, everywhere, through a classified advertisement in the REVIEW, at a cost of 10 cents a line. Frequently a 30-cent advertisement will sell $30, $60 or more of stock, depending on its seasonableness and abundance. Everyone reads the REVIEW's classified ads. Don't let the little surplus go to waste.

ATTACK EXPRESS RATE.

The jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission over express companies, granted under the new rate law, is likely to be tested for the first time, in a proceeding started by the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists against the United States Express Co.

In a petition of the society, filed October 9, the commission is informed that florists in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, shipping flowers to New York, are aggrieved because of an advance of rates, which is very near ruinous. The change was made May 1, and rates advanced twenty to fifty per cent. As florists cannot use slower means of transportation, they are compelled to pay any rate the companies see fit to impose, and they demand investigation and an order establishing a reasonable rate.

NEW ENGLAND DAHLIA SOCIETY.

As reported in the REVIEW at the time, the dahlia growers of the east held a meeting, September 5, and appointed an executive committee to organize a society.

The executive committee held its first session October 6, and has the following report to submit: That the new society be called the New England Dahlia Society. That the object of the society is to promote the culture and development of the dahlia, to accurately determine the several classes thereof, to disseminate information, and to secure uniformity in awarding prizes at the various flower shows, to establish a standard nomenclature, and to award recognition to new varieties of sterling merit.

That any person interested in dahlias is eligible to membership of this society. Fee, $1 per year.

That the officers shall consist of president, vice-president, secretary, treasurer and a board, consisting of president and secretary, as ex-officio, and five members to be elected by the society.

That the annual meeting shall be held in connection and on the first day of the annual dahlia show of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, and at such other times as the board of directors may determine, and notice of all meetings shall be mailed to each member of the society a week in advance.

A meeting will be held at Horticultural hall, Boston, November 6, to take action upon the report of the committee.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Plant Registration.

The Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., submit for registration the following:

Rosa rugosa magnifica (rugosa x Victor Hugo), habit vigorous; flowers five inches in diameter, double, color bright crimson; foliage resembles rugosa.

Canna Meteor, foliage green; flowers large, deep crimson, in enormous trusses; height five feet.

Canna New York, seedling No. 1549, flower true orchid form, unusually thick petals; foliage veined and splashed with bronze; height six to seven feet.

WM. J. STEWART, Sec'y.

OBITUARY.

Isaac P. Dickinson.

Isaac Palmer Dickinson died in Morganville, N. J., October 3. Mr. Dickinson was born in Russell, Mass., in January, 1825. His parents located in Springfield about 1837. He began business as a market gardener about 1848, but the rapid growth of the Forest park district caused him to sell his land and remove to Morganville about twenty years ago. There he established several large, modern greenhouses. He continued in the market garden business up to the time of his death. The remains were returned to Springfield, Mass., for interment.

Mrs. John S. Barnhart.

The wife of John S. Barnhart, of Canton, Ill., died October 8, from injuries received the preceding Friday, when the pony she was driving became unmanageable and threw her out of the cart. Her skull was crushed, making an operation necessary to remove the pressure from her brain. There was little hope of her recovery, although she showed a slight improvement Saturday. She was 51 years of age, and was married to Mr. Barnhart in 1890. She was held in high esteem by her many friends, and there is general regret for the sad accident, and the community extends sincere sympathy to the bereaved husband.

S. J. Long.

S. J. Long died at his home in Petoskey, Mich., October 10. He was the founder of the florist's business in that city; and from a small beginning, built up a successful trade. His wife, who always has assisted him, will continue the business in the future. About a year ago, Mr. Long suffered a paralytic stroke, which ultimately caused his death. His funeral was in charge of the I. O. O. F. and he was buried beneath the blooms he helped to grow, and which he loved so well.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.—The Lake Geneva Gardeners' and Foremen's Association has arrangements completed for the second annual chrysanthemum exhibition, which will be given at Lone's opera house, November 9 and 10.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

With last week's two days of cold weather the market began to boom. Supplies were restricted and the demand suddenly accelerated. The result was a sharp advance in price all along the line, but least pronounced in roses. A return to mild temperatures on Sunday, since continued, has had the result of increasing production along certain lines, but outdoor stock being now unobtainable through the wide territory served by the Chicago market, the demand is much stronger than at any time this season. Shipping trade is excellent. There can be no complaint on the score of out-of-town orders; the only difficulty is to fill them. The city retailers are doing a good business and everyone would be happy were carnations more plentiful.

Not within the memory of the oldest inhabitant have carnations been so scarce or so high in price at the middle of October. Were they permitted to do so the city buyers would have taken all the carnations last week produced, but in most cases the wholesalers held nearly all their receipts for the out-of-town buyers. Of course they charged market prices, which brought no end of complaint from those who did not understand the situation. For best white and Enchantress $4 per hundred has been the ruling quotation, but of course much stock has sold at $2 per hundred and lower. How long the scarcity is to continue is problematical. Growers say there is nothing in sight on the plants.

Beauties have taken another boom this week. There is much stock in the market and nearly all of it is good. Brides and Maids again are in full crop, with a large proportion of the stock grading excellently, but all receipts have been well cleaned out each day. Red roses are in better demand than in the past fortnight. Chatenay is in and selling well. Killarney brings as high as $10 per hundred.

Chrysanthemums have been splendid property up to this date. This week has seen a marked increase in the supply and it is likely that the market will be heavily stocked by the end of this week, with prices much lower. It has been a fine market for chrysanthemums thus far.

New York violets are coming and of good quality for this early date. A few home-grown singles are available. Harrisii lilies continue to advance in price. Valley is selling well.

There is a large demand for green goods of all kinds and the commission houses are selling quantities of finely colored autumn foliage for use in the decorations for store openings.

Killarney.

There are six or seven houses growing Killarney more or less extensively and not all are having equal results, which has provoked considerable discussion of this rose. The Ernst Wienhoeber Co. has a standing order with Weiland & Risch for daily supplies of Killarney and when Mr. Wienhoeber was asked for an expression of opinion he said:

"The Killarney is a rose in color and habit to my liking, and I find that a good many of my customers ask for it, and want it, if they do not see it. Of course it must be well grown, and I feel satisfied that those who grow it well will be successful with it; that is from the side of the dealer. From what I have seen of the growing, it is a very free bloomer; therefore it will be profitable to the grower. I say this because I feel that the grower ought to have encouragement if he is worthy of praise."

Club Meeting.

Forty were present at the club meeting October 11. It was the night for the annual nomination of officers, to be formally elected at the November meeting, if one is held, for it falls on the evening selected for the flower show banquet. The following slate was selected: President, H. N. Bruns; vice-president, Leonard Kill; financial secretary, H. E. Klunder; recording secretary, L. H. Winterson; treasurer, Edgar Sanders. The trustees were re-nominated.

The committee on banquet, to be held November 8, is F. F. Benthley, C. A. Samuelson and A. I. Simmons. Resolutions on the death of James Hartshorne, prepared by George Asmus, L. H. Winterson and W. K. Wood, were adopted.

Discussion of flower show plans occupied the rest of the evening.

Various Notes.

Wednesday morning Bassett & Washburn received from the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, a box of fine early mums, novelties which are shortly to be distributed to the trade.

cent to Belmont, a station on the C. B. & Q. Ry., about one mile west of Downers Grove. His plans for building extensive greenhouses there are not fully matured, but will probably take shape early next year. He will grow the same class of stock that J. F. Kidwell & Bro. produce so successfully in their present location. The land purchased has excellent soil. Over 100 acres are now covered with a fine bluegrass sod.

Leopold Koropp has incorporated his business under the monomial title, Koropp. The papers filed at Springfield last Saturday name L. Koropp, G. J. Weir and A. E. Wilson as incorporators. The capital stock authorized is $20,000 and the corporation is permitted to deal as florists and stationers.

George Reinberg's big ice-box is proving to be all that was hoped for it, maintaining an even temperature with small ice consumption. One room of the box, for Beauty, Bride and Maids, is run at about 46 degrees; the room for Richmond, Killarney and Chatenay about 42 degrees. The policy here is to cut the stock tight and always have something in the box.

Sam Pearce has a large stock of fine poinsettias. His other stock looks well. The late cold spell caught some of his exposed geraniums, as it probably did those of other growers. He has 100,000 Dutch bulbs ready for boxing.

The Butler Floral Co. has been having a successful sale of birchbark "jardinieres" filled with selaginellas.

B. Rubel, at Fleischman's Railway Exchange store, reports steadily increasing business and the need of more skilled help. A good trade also is being done at the North State street branch, where L. R. Bohanon presides.

At Eaton's, on Jackson boulevard, they make a feature of unique window displays. A recent one took advantage of the baseball excitement to attract attention to a special sale of dollar boxes. A diamond was laid out in the window, with soil and sand, and figures wearing the regulation uniforms of Chicago's two champion teams.

Now that the world's championship is settled, we again can get down to business. Not all were florists who attended the games, but there always were a few in sight. And those who didn't go every day talked of little else as they scoured the market to find much-needed stock.

For several nights Bassett & Washburn lost Beauties in their cold cellar at Hinsdale, gnawed off just at the top of the pot in which they were standing. As the room was rat-proof except for the drain, this was plugged at the lower end and flooded, when out popped a muskrat. C. L. Washburn says there were lively times in the cellar right away and, as he and Andrew Benson had the job in hand, it requires no stretch of the imagination to believe it.

J. W. Lyons, the florist mayor of Belvidere, was in town Saturday disposing of some fine, emerald-hued bonds of his city. He might have consigned them; the house that sells his carnations also handles green goods.

Gus Frederickson was over from St. Joe, Mich., Saturday enjoying our Indian summer. At his town they had ten inches of snow on Thursday, October 11, and the temperature was down to within 12 degrees of zero.

William Sprague, president of the Sprague, Smith Co., from whom many florists have bought their glass, died October 10, aged 70 years. He had been a resident of Chicago since 1856.

There was a meeting of chairmen of the flower show committees at the Union for supper October 11, before the regular club meeting. Preparations are advancing nicely.

Uncle John Thorpe is feeling quite poorly these days.

Wietor Bros. have cut the last of Chrysanthemum October Frost, but N. J. Wietor says Touset, their second early white, was bringing $5 a dozen the first of this week. He says there never was a chrysanthemum season like this one to date.

Rosiere, another of Nathan Smith & Son's varieties, has succeeded October Frost in the center of the chrysanthemum stage. Mt. Greenwood is sending it in quantity to E. F. Winterson Co. It is a big reflexed pink and sold fast the first of this week at $3 a dozen.

business of Mrs. George W. Gaskill. Many a grower has graduated from the Poehlmann school of up-to-date methods into a successful business of his own.

A. L. Randall says he wishes he had gone into the florists' supply business years ago. He says it is a case of one hand washing the other: The supplies draw customers to the cut flower department, and the cut flowers bring buyers for the supplies.

All the wholesale houses display big blue posters announcing the employees' first annual reception at Columbia hall October 31. The boys feel assured of a large attendance.

Cattleya labiata is in full crop, and McKellar is receiving large daily consignments.

F. Calvert & Son had their annual big farm scene decoration at the Onwentsia, Lake Forest, October 12.

W. E. Lynch, at E. H. Hunt's, says that in all the years he has been in the flower business he does not remember one in which carnations have been in better demand, or scarcer, in the first half of October.

O. J. Friedman paid Bassett & Washburn $5 a dozen for Clementine Tousey chrysanthemums Monday.

August Jurgens says he looks for the demand for valley to fall off after November 1. Commission men say they see no reason why it should.

E. C. Amling says he looks for an early and pronounced fall in prices for chrysanthemums. He finds by his records that prices have been steadily above last year's since September 10, when he received his first dozen Monrovia.

Vaughan & Sperry are handling considerable quantities of Rhinebeck violets and report demand improving every day.

Harry Rowe has a decoration at Lyon & Healy's, occupying two floors, which is to be maintained for a month, the cut flower portion of it renewed daily.

John Zech is never so happy as when he is skirmishing to find stock for some late order. It is a game he likes and he has had company playing it pretty steadily for a whole week.

Mrs. Marshall Field rose is gaining every day at Cub headquarters and callers there will please talk about it instead of what happened on the south side last Sunday.

F. F. Benthay says the sale for Richmond rose has improved materially in the last week. The Benthay-Coatsworth Co. grows but four varieties, Bride, Maid, Killarney and Richmond, depending on consignors for all other items.

H. R. Hughes is making improvements at his place at 690 West Van Buren street and has the old greenhouses torn down.

Schneider, at 105 Dearborn street, does a nice business with no other form of advertising than keeping a lot of good stock in the show window, backed up by Miss Schneider's winning way of handling the trade.

Kennicott Bros. Co. reports wild smilex not only in adequate supply but fine in quality.

Deamud's was "the busiest house in town" last Sunday, all right.

The Chicago Rose Co. is getting a nice cut of tea roses, but the ice-box is always empty at night.

Phil Schupp, at J. A. Budlong's, wears a satisfied smile. They have had comparatively good supplies of carnations the last week.

Kruchten & Johnson still had outdoor stock this week; the grower had protected it from frost.

All the salesmen in the Growers' Market sold out quickly each day the last week.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

At the recent opening of the new store of the Idlewild Greenhouses, the proprietor, Otto Schwill, Jr., added more laurels to his already widely known fame as a decorator. A local paper classes the display with that of Thorley or Fleischman, of New York city, a deserved compliment, no doubt. Mr. Schwill has placed his establishment in the front rank of popularity by his close attention to details, and his ability to secure the services of able assistants. At the opening of this new store, which occurred October 8, he was able to show the first chrysanthemums for the Memphis market this season. A feature of the display was the bride's table. The center of this contained a large shower bouquet of Bride roses and lilies of the valley, streamers of which extended to each plate. The edge was draped with smilex. Over the entire table roses were scattered. Another novel feature were the bouquets of roses and carnations frozen in ice. Twenty-five thousand flowers were given away as souvenirs. W. H. Englehart has been with Mr. Schwill for seven years as designer and decorator.

THE REVIEW has pleased me very much.—C. R. KIDD, Utica, Mich.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Exceedingly cold weather has been prevailing the last week, enlivening business in all lines. Parties, receptions, weddings and of course a big run of funeral work has kept the boys on the jump all week.

With the advent of chrysanthemums the pressure on carnations and roses has been somewhat relieved, but the market is cleaned up every day. It is nothing unusual to have some brother florist call up and ask for a dozen white carnations to help him out. Orchids are in more demand than in former years. A few violets are seen, but too poor to mention. Fine valley is meeting with ready sale. Green is scarce, especially smilax.

Plant business is good. Boston ferns especially are selling like hot waffles.

Club Program.

The following program has been adopted by the Detroit Florists' Club for the coming year:

October 3.—House warming, and a paper, "Why You Should Attend Club Meetings," by J. F. Sullivan.
October 17.—Paper, "The Care of Herbaceous Roots and Shrubs," by Harry Hunter.
November 7.—Chrysanthemum show.
November 21.—Paper, "Chrysanthemums," by H. Knope.
December 5.—Christmas novelties.
December 19.—Paper, "Christmas Twenty Years Ago and To-day," by Robert Flowerday.
January 2.—Christmas trade discussion.
January 16.—Paper, "Trials and Tribulations of Detroit Florists," by E. A. Scribner.
February 6.—Carnation Show.
February 20.—Stag smoker.
March 6.—Paper, "Carnations," by Thos. F. Browne.
March 20.—Spring flower show and a paper on "Easter Plants," by B. Schroeter.

April 3.—Paper, "Plant Bedding and Bedding Stock," by Robert Unger.

April 17.—Paper, "Wholesale and Retail," by George Rackham.

May 1.—Entertainment committee will preside.

May 15.—Cement construction.

June 5.—"Two Score and Ten," by Wm. Dilger.

June 19.—Paper, "The Growth of Floriculture in North Detroit," by Frank Holznagle.

July 3.—Patriotic smoker.

July 17.—Discussion on S. A. F. convention.

August 7.—Election of officers.

August 21.—Installation of officers.

During the season other entertainments for members and their ladies will be provided, notice of which will be given in due time.

Various Notes.

Farmers suffered from a sudden spell of frost which visited this section. Owing to its untimely arrival several florists also were caught. John Dinsler lost a number of Boston ferns. Fred Measel and his men were up all night smoking their houses, as the heating system was not in shape. They just barely saved an elegant lot of cyclamens. J. Taylor's stock received a severe setback. H. S.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business last week was exceptionally good. The horse show helped, and there were weddings, dinner parties, and funerals.

The quality of stock continues to improve. Chrysanthemums have appeared, but only in limited quantities. All varieties seem to be late this season, though we have had enough cool nights to put them in flowering shape. Violets, too, should be of better quality than they are. Few are coming and they generally are bought up at once.

Good carnations are so scarce the market cannot get enough to supply the local trade. Enchantress easily is the best and brings as high as $4 per hundred. In roses it is different. All last week they were overplentiful at all the commission houses, and some good stock sold as low as $10 per thousand. Beauties, also, are quite plentiful, but prices are holding up well.

The heavy frost of last week killed all outdoor stock. Everything in greens is plentiful.

Club Meeting.

The club held its regular meeting Thursday afternoon, October 11. The attendance numbered twenty, and all the newly elected officers were present. Prof. H. C. Irish was in the chair. After disposing of the regular business, President Irish referred to an article in the Review of September 27 regarding Councilman Rolfes' bill to stop crepe pulling. Quite a discussion ensued, but action was deferred until next meeting.

It was decided to send notices to all florists outside of the club, and to the local press, when anything special is going on, as will be the case at the next meeting, at which time the club will hold its annual chrysanthemum show. The club has offered $50 in prizes. The show will be in charge of the trustees, who will send out printed circulars to all the growers.

Henry Braun led a discussion on "Growing Bulbs as It Is Done in Holland." President Irish and F. J. Fillmore joined in the discussion, which made it interesting to all the members.

The club voted to oppose the holding of the S. A. F. meeting in the fall of the year. The consensus of opinion was that August is the best month to hold the meetings.

Three questions from the box brought out a brisk discussion: "Are asters grown for cut flowers around the city?" "Are dahlias grown around the city for cut flowers?" "Does it pay to grow high grade flowers for this market?" All the members took part in answering.

For the next meeting Harry Young is down for a discussion on poinsettias, and A. J. Bentzen will lead a discussion on cyclamens.

James W. Dunford spoke on flower shows. This will be taken up at the next meeting, and the chances are good for the club to hold a big show next fall.

The next meeting will take place Thursday afternoon, November 8, at 2 p. m.

Various Notes.

Frank M. Ellis, who has been in Panama the past eight months, has returned. He reports that he had a good time, and that his plantation is a money-maker.

Charles Kuehn reports American Beauties as plentiful, but sales irregular. One day, heavy demand; the next, hardly any.

Wm. Kalisch & Sons are making a nice display of cut stock and plants in their attractive show house at Delmar and Taylor avenue.

The Ellison Floral Co. is doing a nice business at its new stand, Olive and Taylor streets. It has the big banquet of the bankers' association this week, and is making a model of the U. S. treasury in flowers.

It is said that quite a large delegation of local florists will visit Chicago during the flower show next month.

Hugo Gross, one of our prominent Kirkwood growers, reports that he will build several more houses next spring. He already has a large range of glass, from which he is cutting fine stock for this market.

The force at Berning's reports a steady increase in shipping orders, also good local demand.

F. W. Ude, Jr., of Kirkwood, reports his stock of carnations and violets in fine shape for winter.

George Angermueller handled a fine lot of fancy roses last week.

Schray's new canna, Superior, has done well this year and the demand for it has been quite lively.

Fred Foster showed some of his fine equine stock at the horse show last week and walked off with some of the prize money.

W. C. Smith & Co. have experienced a strong demand for kentias and other palms, also Boston ferns. J. J. B.

GARDNER, MASS.—A. F. Johnson, who recently disposed of his business here, has entered the employ of M. B. Kingman, at Amherst.

RICHMOND, IND.—The new west side plant of the E. G. Hill Co. is complete and fully occupied. Carnations occupy all but one house, devoted to sweet peas. The range contains 100,000 feet of glass.

FORT SMITH, ARK.

The lady managers of Belle Point hospital will hold their fourth annual chrysanthemum flower show November 8 to 10.

Many improvements have been made among our florists. J. F. Johnson & Co. have added one house, giving them now about 9,000 square feet. Cut flowers and plants are grown.

C. J. Brockman has opened a flower store in connection with the Monumental Cut Stone & Tombstone Co. It would seem that they should succeed together.

About October 20 A. A. Pantet & Co. will open an office in town in charge of Will Germann, where the output of their greenhouses will be handled. This firm has added three rose houses 20x125 and has bought material for six more buildings next spring. They are entering the wholesale field.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business last week could be no more than expected, everyone getting a share. Society was out in full blast, and considerable wedding and funeral work was to be had at fair prices. In the country the mercury hovered around the 30-degree mark, and before the sun gained much headway a frail surface of ice formed. The flowers of the less hardy varieties, which were exposed to the chilly air of the early morning, were all nipped and blackened. Lexington market looked its worst Saturday. Very few flowers were to be found. Some of the florists cut their dahlias Wednesday and received good prices, as the demand was more than could be met. The high winds have been against the indoor plants. Some report lots of damage done to the chrysanthemums. Carnations are still coming in and meet the demand.

Club Meeting.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club held its regular meeting October 8, with President W. G. Lehr in the chair. Notices were sent to every member that there would be a smoker, and this drew a large, jolly crowd, and the meeting proved a success.

A large amount of business was considered, as the chrysanthemum show will soon be on hand. It is expected to be the most successful show ever held by the club.

H. Tilton was proposed for membership by C. Wagner, and was elected.

Maryland Horticultural Society invited the club to its annual exhibition and banquet to be held in the Fifth Regiment Armory, December 5 and 6.

It was proposed by Thomas Patterson that the Gardeners' Club hold its annual banquet at the Academy hotel.

The question-box was one of the features of the evening. One of the questions was carried over from the last meeting and was discussed, "Which is the most profitable to grow, roses or carnations?" A keen interest was taken in this. Messrs. Moss, Cook and Anderson gave quite interesting talks on the subject.

Lists of prizes for the chrysanthemum and horticultural exhibition, to be held in the new Baltimore Florists' Exchange building, St. Paul and Franklin streets, were distributed among those present.

Various Notes.

Henry Eberhardt, of Catonsville, still feels the effects of the accident he had some time ago.

John Oler, Arlington, is erecting a violet house 100 feet long.

F. Seidelich, Woodlawn, Md., is erecting some fine new houses, and will finish in a few days, when he will install a gasoline engine for pumping.

G. A. Lotze, Glen Burnie, from present indications will have a tremendous cut of chrysanthemums, and quite a number of new varieties. He also has a fine collection of new seedlings.

E. A. Woodfall has completed a new house for carnations 16x100 feet, and the entire foundation is made of concrete.

The stock of the late Anthony Cook is now offered for sale. It consists of decorative and hardy roses.

Black Bros., Lutherville, have fine specimens of African violets. They claim this is a continuous bloomer. The stems average about three inches long, and it is designed for table decoration.

A. A. Anderson, Govanstown, is cutting some extra fine American Beauty roses.

W. Guerth has purchased the business of Lehr Bros., 733 North Baltimore street, and will continue the business. Messrs. Lehr will confine themselves to growing cut flowers for the wholesale trade at their home in Brooklyn.

John Rider, Brooklyn, is erecting a fine new barn to replace one which was recently destroyed by fire.

Albert Fiedler, formerly of C. E. Smith & Co., one of Baltimore's leading enterprising young florists, has bought the property at 904 South Charles street. He has rebuilt the house, put in new French plate windows, and installed electric lights, which makes the most up-to-date store in his section. Business with him has been steadily gaining, and the improvements had to be made to meet his large trade. Mr. Fiedler was once an errand boy and now is one of Baltimore's pushing florists.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Jack Frost arrived on schedule time, just when the oldest inhabitants say that he ought to come, a thing, by the way, which he rarely does. The result is we have no dahlias this week, and they are sadly missed. Business is active, weddings, teas and a variety of entertainments keeping all branches of the profession busy.

Chrysanthemums are more in evidence than last week, Merry Monarch, white; Premo, yellow, and White Shaw, having reinforced Polly Rose and Pacific, now in its glory. Monrovia is practically over. The increase in quantity has not yet materially affected the market, owing to the brisk demand, but short-stemmed flowers are no longer counted in with the better grades. They now have a grade to themselves, known as "ordinary."

Violets, while more plentiful, have hardly yet become an important factor. Carnations are scarce. We now are told that stem-rot in Chester county, fortunately absent from Lancaster county, will curtail the production to some extent this season, and will materially increase the supply of sweet peas and hot-house tomatoes. Roses are more plentiful, especially Beauties. While not overdone, they, too, are a trifle lower in price. Valley is excellent and selling splendidly.

Harrisii lilies are scarce; the few coming in town find ready sale at good prices. Orchids are in good supply and evidently increasing in popularity. Gardenias, while by no means plentiful, are coming in from a number of growers. The price has advanced and from now on they promise to be a factor among the choicer flowers.

Easter Sunday will fall on March 31, 1907.

George Anderson says that rose growing has developed into a question of soil and location. Don't forget the man behind the gun, George.

The Floral Exchange is sending fine Killarney to Eugene Bernheimer.

David Rust, secretary of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, spent his vacation, a half-day at a time, visiting among the members. Many a worker has been cheered by a call from the genial secretary, accompanied by his better half and their orchid-loving son. The secretary's genial smile, hearty greeting and inexhaustible fund of stories will surely yield a bountiful harvest in choice exhibits when the society gathers to welcome the queen of autumn, November 6 to 10.

Géo. Samtman now is exercising his undoubted abilities as a sorter, said to be second to none, for the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

John Savage is a humorist in a quiet way. His latest bon mot is that the growers need a wholesaler who can sell poor flowers to advantage. The good ones sell themselves, he says.

Charles F. Edgar, John McIntyre and Wm. Thompson successively entered Pennock Bros. store last Friday morning. It was suddenly discovered that the basket carried by the second named was on fire. An alarm was sounded, much smoke arose, and the hose was turned on. Mr. McIntyre, in describing the incident, remarked that he sold every violet in the basket to advantage. There are different theories regarding the cause of the conflagration. Edward Reid propounds one that seems plausible, to the effect that hot air caused spontaneous combustion.

M. Rice & Co. are receiving more duplicate orders so far this season than ever before. Some of their novelties they have had to reorder for the third time. They are expecting three large shipments the coming week on steamers Pallanza, Menomnee and Moltke.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. are keeping nine packers working like beavers, getting out their extensive orders.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving a large assortment of choice orchids. Single violets are becoming a feature. Among their chrysanthemums this week are Merry Monarch, Premo, Pacific and Polly Rose.

Miss F. L. Knapper, of Fifth street and Fairmount avenue, wishes to dispose of her store before going to California.

Mr. and Mrs. McCullough, of Cincinnati, were visitors at the establishment of M. Rice & Co. this week.

MADISON, N. J.

Final arrangements for the coming flower show of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society took up most of the time of the twenty-six members present at the October meeting. The show being on November 1 and 2, all details had to be attended to and they were many. Each member took his quota of tickets to sell and a bundle of posters to put up. We believe we will have "the goods" on hand for a good show and we are determined to have the people there to see them. Two new members were elected and four more proposed. Our judges this time come from Lenox, Mass.

E. R.

WICHITA, KAN.

No, the Kansas is superfluous. There is but one Wichita. She who picturesquely stands at the convergence of the two Arkansas rivers, the Little and the Big. Some twenty years ago the name Wichita was on most men's lips. Her fame had spread far and wide, and the value of her real estate was immense. Men tumbled over one another to secure that corner lot some ten miles out from the postoffice at $200 per front foot, with no improvements within nine miles. But, alas! the prosperity was founded on air; and Wichita, from occupying the highest pinnacle of fame, came tumbling down, and great was the fall thereof. Almost deserted, she was left as a monument to the madness of man. For many years, in company with many other towns throughout the state, she slept a long, sound slumber. The exodus from the country at large was great, and the handful of farmers who remained to till the soil plowed and seeded their land yearly, only to reap a harvest of disappointment. The sturdy, persistent, but ill-rewarded efforts of the husbandman aroused the pity of heaven, and she wept. Yea, she wept often and copiously. The fast-falling tears moistened the sun-parched, wind-swept prairies and they blossomed even as a garden; and the semi-arid wastes of central Kansas yielded their increase one-hundred-fold, and nature smiled.

With the return of agricultural prosperity, Wichita awoke. Now she is a town of about 40,000, with fine, wide streets lined with shade trees and well-kept lawns and residences on either side. Many homes are palatial in size and architecture, the interiors giving evidence of wealth and refinement. Business in all lines has greatly increased in the last few years, that of the florists along with the rest.

There are several floral establishments in the town, and though not large, all have a neat and prosperous appearance and an "I am getting along nicely, thank you," air about them. One place of about 28,000 feet just about completed, has a very finished appearance from the start. The well-kept lawn and flower beds in front of the office, and the tastefully arranged boxes along the veranda give a favorable impression to the visitor and the passerby.

It would be well if some large places of national repute would clean up a little and make the approach to their plants neat and attractive instead of leaving it like a yard to a junk shop.

There is only one flower store in town, and that is run in connection with the above mentioned place. It is not a modern flower shop, but at present it suffices for the needs of the town. There is little doubt that in a short time more commodious and artistic quarters will have to be found to meet the ever-growing demands of the business. With all the present prosperity and many-hued hopes and predictions for the future I am reminded frequently that this is still Kansas. The wind still blows—a little. The dust still rises in clouds—a little—gets into your eyes and ears a great deal, and I can not forget, at least not yet, dear old Missouri.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The Cleveland market never had such conditions to contend with as were met last week and the fore part of this. Everything was swept away by the cold wave, as the thermometer went down to 28 degrees, and in consequence there was a great rush for anything in the shape of a flower. As for carnations, it was almost necessary to stand over them with a double-barreled shotgun to protect them while the regular orders were being partially filled. Valley was another scarce commodity, and we phoned and wired Buffalo, Philadelphia, and Chicago and could not be accommodated.

Pink, white and yellow chrysanthemums are coming in this week, which helps out the shortage. The prices continue high for medium grade stock, but the coming week will see plenty of all grades of mums on the market and then prices will break.

Just a word about galax. There is some excellent new crop green galax being shipped into this market, while the cold storage bronze is getting poorer every day, as so many of the leaves have rotted.

Various Notes.

Of course the weather will be a much discussed subject this week, from Kalamazoo to Chattanooga, but it is too bad to think that just as the dahlias were getting to their prime they should be cut off by the grim reaper; and it is the first time in over a score of years that we have not been able to decorate our windows lavishly with that most beautiful and effective fall flower, the cosmos. Consequently, our store men, ever resourceful, have made some effective window displays of artificial autumn leaves,

The Ohio Cut Flower Co. now is located in its new store about one block south of the old location, and Manager H. P. Knoble is justly proud of the spacious quarters and furnishings of the place; and it is not only a credit to the west side, but ranks with the best stores of the city. This firm furnished all the valley, chrysanthemums and white orchids used for the Mulhern-Fenton wedding, a lavish decoration put up by Welty.

Some excellent boxwood is now coming into the city from Virginia. This useful green is more sought for each succeeding year. Did you ever try an entire wreath of boxwood made up quite heavily on a large frame, and then embellished with a large bunch of chrysanthemums or other effective flowers, and tied with a two-toned ribbon in harmony with the color used? The result is a beautiful piece at a low cost to the florist.

Killing frosts have cut off practically all outdoor flowers, and supplies of asters, dahlias, cosmos, etc., are now at an end. This has stimulated the market for indoor-grown stock, and prices have ruled firm and slightly higher during the past week. Roses, with the cooler weather, continue to improve in quality. American Beauties are in excellent demand, the best selling at $4 to $5 per dozen. Kaiserins still arrive of fine quality, bringing up to $10 for the best. at from $1 to $3 per dozen. We do not think so many are being grown this season, in which case the market will probably not go to pieces so badly while they are in season.

Lilies are not very abundant. Valley remains about the same. Little other stock is now arriving. Some nice, bushy chrysanthemum plants are seen of single and pompon varieties, and the plant trade is beginning to take on a little hope.

Club Meeting.

Owing to the main halls being let for the week, the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club was held in the banquet room in the basement on October 16. There was again a very large attendance, nearly 150 ladies and gentlemen being present. J. B. Velie, the Lord & Burnham Co.'s Boston superintendent, read an excellent paper on "Greenhouse Construction," which gave rise to an animated discussion participated in by Messrs. Montgomery, Iliffe, Patten, Stevens, Finlayson, Anderson, Cameron, Duncan and others. Several amendments to the by-laws relative to dues of members were carried.

The committee appointed to make arrangements for classes in landscape gardening reported that they had a prospectus ready and that classes could be started at an early date. The prizes offered for geranium plants to be grown by assistant gardeners brought out some remarkably well-grown specimens. W. D. Nickerson won first for a plant of S. A. Nutt carrying forty trusses.

Several new members elected brought the membership up well over the 350 mark. President Wheeler appointed a nominating committee to bring in a list of officers at the November meeting, as follows: Cameron, Orpet, and Heurlin.

cellent one, did not break up until a late hour. Exhibits came from several growers in addition to the geranium plants. Duncan Finlayson was awarded a report of merit for splendid plants of Dendrobium Phalaenopsis.

Various Notes.

The directors of the Music hall market report a splendid business since they moved into their new quarters. They have secured several new stallholders recently.

John K. M. L. Farquhar sailed from Europe on October 16, and is expected home October 25. He has traversed much new ground this season and secured some desirable novelties for his firm.

At the exhibition in Horticultural hall on October 10 and 11, Blue Hill Nurseries secured a certificate of merit for Aconitum Fischeri; and J. C. Forbes, a similar award for excellent seedling dahlias.

William Nicholson, during his recent European trip, visited the celebrated Shrewsbury show in England, which he pronounced the most marvelous he had ever seen, also the Royal Caledonian Society's show in Edinburgh. He saw some houses of American carnations grown by A. F. Dutton, which were of as fine quality as grown here. These were planted out in benches, and houses and heaters were of the American pattern. At Paris he saw the finest bedding during his trip.

A. H. Hews & Co. are experiencing a very heavy demand for pots and pans and can hardly ship orders fast enough.

H. A. Jahn's new white seedling carnation is doing well at New Bedford and promises to be heard from during the coming season.

The annual chrysanthemum show at Horticultural hall occurs on November 2, 3 and 4. The decorated dinner tables on the second day promise to be a big feature. While less big blooms and specimen plants may be shown, other miscellaneous classes will make up for any deficiency.

A call on Duncan Finlayson, at the Larz Anderson estate in Brookline the past week, found everything in the greenhouses in excellent condition. Chrysanthemums, carnations and roses were extra good. In the orchid department were some splendid Dendrobium Phalaenopsis, Cattleya labiata, Oncidium Rogersii, etc. A first-class bench of calanthes was also noted. Two late divisions of grapes were fine. Especially good were Lady Hastings, Gros Colmar, Black Alicante, Muscat of Alexandria and Gros Maroc. W. N. CRAIG.

HOLLYHOCKS.

I notice an inquiry about hollyhocks in the REVIEW. Some time ago, in England, these used to be a very popular plant, but the "rust" almost entirely destroyed them for some years, so that hardly any were ever seen; but they appear to be coming into favor again, as the disease is more successfully dealt with than formerly. To be free from disease, it is better to treat the plant as an annual, sowing the seed in heat in January, and when an inch or so high, transplanting singly to small pots and given about three inches of space in boxes or pans. Keep them growing under glass in this way until they are of good size with several large leaves; then plant out in the open, giving plenty of room so that they do not touch each other. If the leaves rub together, rust and mildew are almost certain to result. Give them rich land and if possible mulch with manure in dry weather, or feed with liquid manure. Some grand blooms will be the result, with absolute freedom from disease. The trouble is almost certain to appear the second year, and for this reason they are hardly worth keeping to make a second growth. J. B.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

THE Sioux City Seed and Nursery Co. rapidly is completing its bean and pea warehouse at Millington, Mich.

BURGLARS wrecked the safe of the Shugert & Ouren Seed Co., Council Bluffs, October 13, but found little currency.

ON October 1 the custom authorities affirmed the recent decision that seed of yellow trefoil is to be admitted duty free.

THE hard frost of last week has started the fall trade in bulbs in earnest, all the catalogue houses having heavy mail and counter trade being active.

THE seed trade news in the REVIEW runs through several pages of each issue. Don't think you have it all when you have gone through these short items.

THERE are no signs of a settlement of the lithographers' strike and those who have orders in for catalogue covers and colored plates are beginning to take alarm.

V. H. HALLOCK & SON, Queens, N. Y., have purchased the stock of the new yellow calla, Mrs. Roosevelt, from J. Tailby & Son, Wellesley, Mass., and will disseminate it this season.

CARL SONDEREGGER, who recently added seeds to his nursery business at Beatrice, Neb., already finds himself needing room and will add a story to his big packing shed for the seed department.

THE Kansas newspapers are exploiting clover seed growing as a profitable branch of agriculture. It is stated that H. B. Walters, of Baker, sold $1,000 worth of clover seed off a 60-acre field.

PROF. W. A. WHEELER, of the Brookings Agricultural College, has information of a $30,000 seed concern which is being organized to go into the seed business in South Dakota. A location is being sought.

FREDERICK M. CLARK, secretary of the Everett B. Clark Co., Milford, Conn., October 15 stated that "seed crops seem to be cleaning up very disappointingly, and our onion seed crop in particular. We are not realizing over fifty per cent of our anticipations."

WATKINS & SIMPSON, London, have an unusually large number of novelties this season. Most of the things listed in their annual novelty catalogue are of their own raising. Few European houses are more prolific of novelties, especially in the line of flower seeds.

IN the vicinity of Des Moines the Iowa Seed Co. is growing quite a few of the items of garden seeds which are not readily picked up in the market. Cucumber is not one of the items in the bothersome-to-find class, but it nevertheless is being grown in steadily increas-

TOMATO SEED SHORT.

Robert Livingston, of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., makes the following report under date of October 15:

"Tomato crops for seed purposes we find quite short of an average year in all of the territory affected by the four successive severe frosts in the latter part of May. Many of the early plants were destroyed by these frosts, so that a large percentage of the growers were compelled to set late plants, whereby from two to four weeks' valuable time was lost.

"During the month of July and early August we had showers nearly every day. This interfered with fertilization, so that not much fruit was set on during that period of about six weeks duration, but the eight weeks of fine weather following, without the slightest frost, brought on a fair crop of good fruits. During this time we secured about half an average crop of very good seed. However, the hard frost of October 10 and 11 caught many of the unripened fruits. A severe frost injures immature fruits so that they are not suitable for seed purposes. The effect of blight was not serious this season hereabouts."

LONG ISLAND SEED CROPS.

Francis Brill, Hempstead, L. I., writes under date of October 15: "Asparagus, on account blight, does not make seed in quantity sufficient to pay for harvesting. Long Island Improved Dwarf Brussels sprouts are full crop. Cabbage is a little short of an average crop, but probably enough for all demands. Carrot has done well, but not much is grown, as we cannot compete in price with California and Europe. Siberian kale is a full crop. Of spinach not much is grown—too cheap in Europe, from whence comes the bulk of so-called Long Island spinach seed. Turnip seed is not extensively grown. Our farmers prefer to grow regular farm crops, and cauliflower, which with us does exceedingly well; cabbages, cucumbers, etc., for the pickle packers rather than a line of seeds at starvation prices."

NEBRASKA SEED CROPS.

J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb., makes the following report on vine seeds and seed corn in his territory:

"The muskmelon crop is practically harvested, and some crops have been delivered. The seed is showing good weight, and in some instances is ten to fifteen per cent better in quantity than early estimates. A few cucumber crops are now in the sack, and are showing about the same results as expected early in the season. A few crops have done better than early estimates, but the average is about fifty per cent of a crop. Corn prospects still continue fine. Sweet corn is clear from damage, with every prospect that it will be finely cured, while the field corn promises to be the clearest, brightest and also the driest that we have had in several years."

PEAS AND BEANS.

Speaking of the pea and bean crops, F. J. Ries, of the Bromfield-Colvin-Ries Co., Bay City, Mich., said October 15:

"The crop with us is about three-quarters in and the color of peas is exceptionally good, while the yield in some sections is not up to the field estimate, due largely to the elements that prevailed during the pod-filling period. The season in the immediate vicinity could hardly have been more favorable, as there was an average rainfall. In some sections hail-storms damaged some of the varieties, materially reducing the yield. In the territory north of us and over on 'the Thumb,' the crop suffered from extreme heat and drought. We expect to make a full delivery on nearly all items of peas and will have surpluses of a few varieties.

"On beans we also have secured an average yield on the green-podded sorts, but on the wax varieties the yield is hardly over seventy per cent of an average. The smallest percentage of yield strikes the late varieties of the wax-podded sorts. This was due to the excessive hot weather that prevailed during the first week of August.

"Stocks are nearly all thrashed and the quality and color is unusually good. We have had a force of forty-eight girls at handpicking for the past four weeks and we are now beginning to ship our orders. We have approximately 18,000

ENDORSE SEEDSMEN'S STAND.

Charles N. Page, of Des Moines, representing the American Seed Trade Association, last week attended the National Farmers' Congress at Rock Island, Ill., in the interest of the seedsmen's movement for the discontinuance of the government seed distribution. He reports that the 1,000 delegates put through with a hurrah the following resolution:

Resolved, that we are opposed to the system of seed distribution as now conducted by the Federal government, but believe in the work of exploiting foreign countries for such seeds and plants as may be profitably introduced into this country, and recommend that the money expended for seed distribution as now conducted, be added to the fund for maintaining American seed and plant explorers in other countries, under direction of the United States Department of Agriculture, and the distribution of the same among the Agricultural Experimental Stations of this country for practical test.

Mr. Page is chairman of the Seed Trade Association's committee on parcels post and also secured from the Farmers' Congress an endorsement of the popular demand that our legislators break away from express company domination and give us a parcels post to compare with the facilities afforded in other countries.

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The firms handling Japan lilies are feeling a trifle anxious as to how the Japan bulb trade is intending to finish up. Some of them are only just finding they have rather an unpleasant quantity still left on their hands and Japan exporters have still some stock to offer. Unless the German merchants soon make a few more sales of stock now on hand, prices look like dropping in the near future. It is the opinion of some that the Japanese growers and exporters have been manipulating a little business to themselves which has given the impression that stock and available supplies are much shorter than is an actual fact, consequently causing prices to rapidly advance, as they have done; but still there is no doubt the Japanese may be safely trusted to keep prices up at least to a very profitable level to themselves, while they have any left to export.

The lily of the valley crop of pips, which is now in process of lifting and warehousing, is somewhat disappointing, as, by the appearance of the fields, it was generally thought it would be well above the average, and the report from the growing districts, received by me today, reads as follows: "You will note prices are much higher than last season, but the competition among exporters to secure the finest samples from the growers is keen, causing the small growers, from whom the exporters chiefly get their supplies, to ask much higher prices than they otherwise would. The crop is not nearly so big as anticipated and there will again be a scarcity of really first-class crowns. This state of things is again, in a great measure, due to the continually increasing demand of the United States for the best selected samples. This country is also increasing its general orders of ordinary samples rapidly each year. In addition to these facts, notwithstanding that the weather conditions have been favorable this year, there has been found a great quantity of crowns that have got their proper age and size, but yet contain no flower, nothing but leaves. This is the result of the weather conditions. Two years ago the growing districts had an exceptionally long and strong heat wave, causing these flowerless crowns to suffer when they were, of course, only small planting stuff and had only just been planted out. These flowerless crowns will require another season or two before they can be suitable for export, and even then it is feared they will throw a very coarse spike; but they will probably be fairly suitable for late forcing or retarding. It is feared that in two years' time the same effect will be apparent from the hot weather lately experienced, with the small crowns put out last winter and spring."

fronts and backs, done up with reed mats, in the same way that all the choicest stocks are grown. Their Superbissima strain has enormous flowers, nearly all having yellow throats. It is a really magnificent strain for pot culture; the flowers are really too large for bedding. A very useful strain for bedding and general purposes is Titania, flowers of which are slightly fringed, of varied colors, both striped and selfs.

Then among the rank and file come Primula obconica compacta, which makes neat, little, bushy plants, and shows a considerable variation in color; my guide said that he thought they might in time take the place of the Chinese primula. An interesting plant was the result of a cross between sinningia and gloxinia, the object being to get a stronger leaf than that possessed by the latter plant. The experiment is only yet in the early stages, but promises rather well.

In the greenhouse were a fine lot of gloxinias in different types, and varied colorings. Emperor Frederick is a fine red, with white edge, which comes true from seed.

In the gardens Ageratum Princess Pauline, blue, with white center, was pretty. Then in the fields growing by the acre were noted Lilliput nasturtiums, dwarfer and more floriferous than the Tom Thumb section, and varied in coloring. Phlox Drummondii, brilliant rose, Coccinea, and chamois, rose, were very striking. Delphinium Chinensis, blue, a plant of about eighteen inches in height, gave a bit of richest ultramarine blue. Alyssum procumbens, a dwarf form of sweet alyssum, makes a neat and pretty bordering annual. Stock-flowered larkspur, brilliant carmine, makes a beautifully bright and refined bit of color. The Emperor larkspurs, about eighteen inches high, are the largest flowered of any; azure blue, and black blue were noted as very telling colors in this class of larkspur.

GLADIOLI FROM SEEDS.

After some years spent in crossing early-flowering Gladiolus Gandavensis, Lemoinei and Nancianus varieties, F. Roemer, of Quedlinburg, Germany, has been successful in raising crosses which flower strongly the same year that the seeds are sown. The flowers are large and their colors varied. In order to obtain early bloom, the seed is sown in the month of March, and the corms must be fit for planting out in May, the treatment accorded them being such as is found suitable for ordinary summer-flowering plants. The plants carry from twelve to sixteen large blooms, which begin to appear in July. These new varieties, flowering as they do the first year, are calculated to revolutionize the trade in gladiolus. Flower spikes were shown at the recent exhibition of the German Dahlia Society at Berlin.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

LETTUCE.Pricking Out Young Plants.

The stage at which the plants require to be pricked over from the seed flats will depend a good deal on how thick the seedlings have come up. Unfortunately this cannot always be regulated by the amount of seed sown as the percentage of germination varies; and to insure a good start we are apt to put in more seed than is advisable were the seeds all sure to germinate. If they come up rather thinly, they will not require to be handled so early as in the case where they are so thick that there is danger of becoming drawn through overcrowding. In this latter instance they should be pricked over just as soon as they are large enough to handle. The flats for pricking over should be about three inches deep, and should be filled pretty well up to the top with soil. The soil used should be moderately rich, and chopped up to avoid lumps, but screening is unnecessary, unless in the case of handling very small plants, when a layer of screened soil on the surface will be found advantageous, as the hole made by the dibble will be more clearly defined. The little plants should be lifted carefully, to retain as many of the roots as possible, and inserted well down to the lower leaves. In firming the plants, it is important that the pressure should be made a little away from the plant, that the soil may be firmed around the roots, and not around the necks only. Regarding the distance at which the plants should be set, it is customary to set them one inch apart, but this I consider only about half the distance that should be allowed. One and one-half inches is little enough, and it is much better to give two inches each way. This allows the plants space to develop nicely without becoming drawn; and by the time they begin to crowd one another they are just a nice size for planting in the beds.

Water should be given soon after the planting is finished, but the quantity must be regulated to the moisture already contained in the soil. It is poor policy to soak the soil through and through, as it will be some time before the plants will be sufficiently established to utilize much moisture; and, if made too wet, the soil will be in danger of becoming more or less sour; but no matter how the soil is, more or less water should be applied just after pricking over, to settle the soil around the plants. A fine rose should be used on the watering pot, so as not to wash the soil or break down any of the little plants. Slight shade may be necessary for a day or two, but the plants will soon get hold enough to support them in the full sunlight, and the more they get of it the stronger and more stocky the plants will be. Don't try to rush in a high temperature, but grow them along in the regular lettuce house atmosphere, and results will prove that there is nothing gained by trying to rush them, as some do, in the early stages of their growth.

W. S. CROYDON.

LORRAINE GROWING LATER.

A writer in the Horticultural Advertiser, London, has discovered that each year Begonia Gloire de Lorraine grows later in flowering. This is what he says about it:

"I find that with many growers the Lorraine begonia is much later in coming into flower this season. I should not attribute the cause of this to the weather, but it seems to be a plant that has changed in its character considerably. In several nurseries where I have seen it, the plants have been robust in habit and with large foliage, but late in showing bloom. There may be but little advantage in having it in flower so early, yet some note should be taken of the fact that it is inclined to be later from year to year. About six years ago, I had it in full flower by the October chrysanthemum show. The advantage of having plants for early showing is that it gives an opportunity of reminding customers of its value, and booking orders for delivery before we get severe weather. With all the various sports I have seen, I am still much in favor of the original, the color being of such a pleasing shade. The white is pretty, but all intermediate shades should be carefully abolished. I have not visited all who grow this well, but from the enquiries I have had, I think the lateness of its flowering must be general, for the

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.

J. F. Wilcox has used the Killarney rose in some of his most effective window displays. In a recent window the roses were displayed in artistic baskets suspended from the ceilings with long pink ribbons. Ferns were used at the back and side to enhance the effect, and a large mirror, beautifully draped, the folds of the drapery studded with Killarney buds, alternating with miniature electric lights, reflected the artistic window display and completed the details of a decoration of exceptional beauty and effectiveness.

DAVENPORT, IA.

Theodore Ewoldt and John Temple are at Dubuque this week to attend the state convention of the florists which opened on Wednesday. They represent the tri-city association. Mr. Ewoldt is vice-president of the state association.

The tri-city association met October 10 with Julius Staack, in Moline. Several subjects were discussed. A paper on "The Diseases of Geraniums" was read by Mr. Boehm, superintendent of the Davenport public park system. The paper was followed by refreshments.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE Rising-Duncomb Co., of Los Angeles, Cal., has been incorporated with $25,000 capital authorized and $7,400 subscribed. The directors are H. G. Rising, of Los Angeles, and J. L. Duncomb and G. S. Duncomb, of Prospect Park.

THE Point Pleasant Nursery Co., of Point Pleasant, O., has been incorporated with an authorized capital of $25,000. The nursery of M. Schwartzwalder has been purchased by the new corporation, which will go into the nursery business on a broad scale.

THE Buchanan Nursery Co., of St. Charles, Man., made a large shipment of nursery stock to the Okanagan country, B. C., last week. Stock grown in the dry climate of Manitoba is said to do better in the Okanagan region than that grown in the mild climate of the Pacific coast.

PATRICK KNIGHT, of Geneva, N. Y., died October 4. The cause of death was general debility. Mr. Knight was born in Ireland and came to this country about forty years ago and located in Geneva. He followed the nursery business for a number of years, but retired several years ago. He is survived by nine children.

THE storm that swept over western New York October 11 destroyed many thousands of dollars' worth of fruit trees around Rochester. The peach trees suffered the heaviest, and many peach and quince orchards in Monroe county are ruined. Among the apple trees, the Baldwins, which are yet unpicked, suffered the most damage.

EMBELLISHMENT OF WAYSIDES.

[A paper by J. A. Pettigrew, read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, April 17, 1906, continued from The Review of September 27 and October 4 and 11.]

The Maples.

The hard, or sugar, maple (Acer saccharinum) does not make a good city tree. It is impatient of rough treatment; paved sidewalks and paved streets are fatal to it. It is, however, a good tree for suburban conditions, or for a country wayside tree. It is one of the handsomest of our North American trees. This tree will adapt itself to a thin soil.

The Norway maple (Acer platanoides) is an introduction from central Europe. It forms a rather wide-spreading, handsome top, with a wealth of large leaves, forming a dense shade. It thrives fairly well as a city sidewalk tree; but, on account of its width of spread, it is only suitable for wide streets. As a wayside tree it hardly can be surpassed.

The sycamore maple (Acer pseudo-platanus), also from Europe, is a wide-spreading tree, with large, somewhat leathery leaves. It is a noble tree in its native habitat, but does not take kindly to the United States. It is subject to borers and is not to be recommended.

The American beech (Fagus ferruginea) is one of the most ornamental of American trees, but, on account of its low-branching habit in the open, and its surface-rooting propensity, it is not adapted to city planting. This tree loves too well the soft, leafy mulch of its native woods, to bear transplanting to the heated sidewalks.

The silver poplar (Populus alba), introduced from Europe, is one of the best trees for hard conditions. In smoky, dusty and thickly populated localities, or in poor soil, it will exist and make a brave show. By many it is esteemed an ugly tree. The poplar trees planted (I have been informed by Strauch, the originator of the lawn treatment of cemeteries) in Cincinnati, however, would convince anyone to the contrary. Or, without going further west than Boston, one could have found in Maverick Square two fine specimens until two years ago, when they were removed to make way for the new tunnel entrance. This tree has a disagreeable habit of suckering.

The Lindens.

The American linden (Tilia Americana) also is a tree that will accommodate itself fairly well to street life, provided it is given good soil, and is protected from the tussock moth, to whom it seems to be a favorite food plant. As a wayside tree, it is well adapted, being of quick growth and of handsome proportions.

The European linden (Tilia vulgaris), as its name indicates, is from Europe, and has a well-deserved reputation as a fine shade tree. Planted in good soil, it will grow under very crowded conditions of street life. At South Boston it can be found growing in brick-paved sidewalks, and persistently putting forth leaves each spring, which are as persistently eaten off by the tussock-caterpillar. It forms a tree of stately growth, holding its leaves well into the fall; while, in early summer, with its near relative, the American linden, its flowers charge the air with a delicious perfume.

I have lived on Long Island, where the ailanthus is naturalized, and where some of finest street trees of this kind are, and I have never been able to detect any odor unless I placed the flowers to my nostrils. In rich soils there might be kill-back in winter, from under-ripened wood; but, in poor soils, I feel sure, this trouble would not occur. I am con-

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

James Stewart, a well known and honored old resident of Los Angeles county, passed away at his home, 246 North Soto street, October 5, having been ill for nearly three months. Mr. Stewart was a successful horticulturist, and was regarded as an authority on fig and walnut culture. He introduced the Smyrna fig into southern California. In 1870 he purchased a ranch near Rivera which forms part of his estate, which is valued at about $100,000. He was born in Cleveland, Tenn., in 1827.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We have had a slight change in the weather during the last week. It now is much cooler than it has been for several months, and everyone is glad of the change. Flowers are somewhat easier, and the price remains about the same as the last quotation two weeks ago.

Roses and carnations are both more plentiful than they have been, and of somewhat better color throughout. Chrysanthemums have been rather disappointing thus far, both as to size and color; but we are now having more satisfactory weather, and it is probable that they will improve somewhat. I refer to outside grown stock in this instance. The chrysanthemums grown under glass are up to the standard, and are bringing the wholesalers fair prices.

Business, both in San Francisco and Oakland, has had an upward tendency during the past week. A majority of the town residents are back in the city again, and the country orders keep the dealers busy as well. The outlook for plenty of stock for the coming season is good, as far as I am able to judge, and with plenty of roses, carnations, valley and lilies in sight, we should have a healthy autumn trade.

Various Notes.

Julius Seulberger, of Oakland, has returned from an outing at Lake Tahoe.

Kien & Co., of Elmhurst, are cutting a fine crop of Enchantress at this time.

L. M. Barrett, of Berkeley, Cal., has devoted one house to the culture of Adiantum Croweanum. He has good success with this variety.

Domoto Bros. have two large houses filled with early chrysanthemums. They report a heavy shipping trade for September and October.

William J. Dingee has written a letter to the public complaining against the housing of refugees in the city parks.

R. L. Rivers will make a short tour of Southern California and return about the first of November.

Thomas O'Neill has again resumed the management of the Myrobolan Nurseries, Haywards.

A general complaint has been made by growers that it has been almost impossible for the last few months to hire requisite help to keep the various nurseries in running order. The high prices paid in other lines of work seem to be to blame in this matter, as even ordinary laborers are being paid as much as experienced gardeners; and, if a man can do a little carpentering and assist in plumbing, he has no difficulty in getting $3.50 or $4 per day. G.

PARASITE FROM CHINA.

George Compere, who is in China in search of parasites to combat the destructive scales that prey on fruits and trees in California, has communicated with the state horticultural commission, stating that his efforts along that line are meeting with great success. His most notable discovery is a scale-infested palm that he secured in the interior. The plant was carried on the backs of coolies for many miles and then shipped to the coast on a junk boat. It is now in San Francisco and will be forwarded to the horticultural commission.

The plant contains the purple scale and the parasite. The parasites, like those recently received, will be bred and kept for experimental purposes.

Mr. Compere will soon leave China for India, where he will continue his search for parasites. The work undertaken by the horticultural commission is of great scope, and will be of inestimable value to the California fruitgrowers if the attempts to kill the fruit and tree scale are successful.

THE EUCALYPTUS.

A Useful Tree.

The fact that several of our western railroads have planted large tracts of land with red and iron-bark gum trees, to cut down and use as railroad ties, has drawn some attention to this valuable tree. Considerable experimenting has been done along these lines and various kinds of trees have been used for that kind of work. It has been found that the ordinary blue gum, Eucalyptus globulus, is not suited where it is necessary to lay the ties on the surface of the ground, as it will not last, ordinarily, longer than two seasons. It also has been tried for driving into the water, in the shape of piles for bridge construction; and, although it is not affected as much by the teredo as is redwood (Sequoia sempervirens), it is not long lived on account of the excess of moisture. It is claimed that the red gum, however, will last for from five to eight years when driven into the water, and when used as a railroad tie its life is double that time.

Owing to the growing scarcity of redwood on this coast, this fact is of great value to railroad builders, and others, as its lasting qualities have been fully demonstrated. As there is bound to be a great scarcity of redwood in the near future, and as railroad building is only in its incipency on this coast, there will be an enormous demand for timber in the near future.

The red gum is of easy growth, and, although it does not attain large size as quickly as does the common blue gum, it can be classed with the quick-growing trees. It seeds freely, and is perfectly hardy in central and southern California. The seeds should be secured from the older growths on the trees early in the spring. They shell very easily if thrown in the sun for a week or ten days, when the seed will all drop out by vigorously shaking the pods.

Raising Seedlings.

I have had the best success with them in planting the seed outside in a lattice frame, with an extra amount of shade in the middle of the day should the sun be warm. The seed should not be sown too thickly. An ounce of clean seed will easily cover fifty square feet of surface. This may seem like wasting space, but I have had uniform success when planting seed at about that spacing. Care should be taken in not giving too much water and having the seed covered not over an eighth of an inch deep.

From 3,000 to 4,000 seedlings easily can be handled in the above space, and will be ready for transplanting about the first of August. It is best to plant in flats, about 120 plants to each. They grow very quickly in a partially shaded location, and by the first of December will average from eight inches to one foot in height. They are then large enough to transplant in a permanent location, and if watched carefully for a season will need no further attention. If they are planted in a suitable location and soil they will attain a height of fifty feet in five years.

The trees should never be planted farther apart than five feet each way, as the tendency to make lateral branches spoils the trees for first quality lumber. If the trees are grown about that distance apart there will be practically no knots in the wood, and the trees will grow absolutely straight.

The eucalyptus is not usually subject to diseases of any kind in this latitude. It grows best when planted on well drained ground, when there is a fair amount of moisture, and within reach of the coast breezes. It will thrive on poor soil and make a wonderful growth, if there is sufficient moisture.

The blue gum grows somewhat faster than the red variety, but the lumber has not proven to be of any value wherever it comes in contact with moisture of the soil. It makes a good tree for firewood, as it will grow immediately from the stumps when cut off, and in a space of five years it is again ready for cutting. This is also true of the red gum, so the forests are practically inexhaustible when once established. G.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

The don't-care-if-I-die air which pervaded the stores during the sultry days of summer has departed, and on all sides there is evidence of active prosperity. The chrysanthemums are coming in appreciable quantities, and will soon bid other stocks go away back and sit down. Heavy frosts during the past week killed all the outdoor flowers, and greenhouse goods now have the whole field. There has been a number of weddings and more are slated for the remaining October days.

The commission house project has not yet passed the talking stage, though there are good prospects that such an enterprise will soon be launched. There are several stories in circulation as to the probable outcome of the agitation of the matter. One is that a well known government employe has secured the necessary backing and will soon open up in the commission line. Another report says that a prominent retailer will go into the commission business. As for the stock company, previously mentioned in these columns, it seems to have had an attack of cold feet. In the meantime, by "neighboring," peddling, and other means, the growers and retailers, as of old, are worrying along.

Various Notes.

C. Schellhorn is putting up a new and commodious house for roses.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

This is a season of weather surprises. We have had our first freeze and our first snow, but what was unusual about it was that we had a hard freeze before we had a frost. We were sorry to see the outdoor stock destroyed, as it was selling first-class, owing to the scarcity of all indoor-grown blooms. There is a fair quantity of everything in season coming in, but the demand is so large that it is sold out as fast as it arrives. Business is all that can be desired. All grades of stock go out at good prices, which are now about equal to those of midwinter. The retailers are busy with funeral work and there are many wedding decorations.

Roses are in fairly good crop and the quality has been improved by the colder weather. White and red sell best, but pink is not far behind. Beauties are meeting an active demand, and sell out clean at top prices. As to carnations, there does not seem to be much chance for a good supply for a month at least. They are late this year, and as a consequence there are not enough to fill orders. The prices are high. Some fine carnations are being shipped from the Richmond growers. This stock is sold at sight. Mums are selling well, and prospects point to a successful season for them. Many growers have already sold out their early varieties and soon will be in with the midseason ones. The local growers are late this year, and few of them are in with even the earliest varieties, but the market has been pretty well supplied by out of town growers for the wholesale trade. Lily of the valley is selling well and some good stock is coming in. What few violets come in find a ready sale. Green goods are plentiful, with the exception of smilax.

Various Notes.

On Saturday evening the regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Society will be held, it having been postponed one week, as stated in last week's notes. It is to be hoped that the retail florists will avail themselves of the invitation to meet with the society, and that plans pointing towards an improvement in the flower shows given by the society will be the result.

WARREN, O.—Mrs. Geo. W. Gaskill sold her greenhouse to D. P. Nelson, of Chicago.

CLARINDA, IA.—The greenhouses formerly owned by Pfander & Peirce have been torn down and replaced by modern ones in a better location. J. V. Pfander has bought the interest of Mr. Peirce, who retires from the firm. The new buildings consist of two houses, one devoted to carnations and the other to potted plants. The walls are made of cement blocks.

Last Winter a local grower visited our place for the purpose of buying a stock of some good crimson carnation. We showed him a good bed of Harlowarden and took his order for a quantity. A few minutes later we showed him whereupon he decided that he did not want Harlowarden, but would wait a year and get Pocahontas. Now that's the kind of argument that talks. You would do the same as he did, that's why we want you to come and see it growing. Will promise to show it to you just as it grows. No dressing-up for company every morning; Pocahontas does not need it.

MABELLE

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. Delivery January 5 to 10 and later. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

LYNCHBURG, VA.

Your correspondent visited Lynchburg, Va., during the week the interstate fair was being held there. This name, Lynchburg, gives one a kind of creepy feeling under the collar. It was in this vicinity, on the banks of the James river, that Judge Lynch first held court.

This is certainly the city of the hills, which are many and abrupt, and present a unique landscape.

The floral exhibits at the fair were tastily arranged, and aided considerably in lending an artistic appearance to the show. Harry Brown carried off the majority of the awards.

The fruit display was fine. It has seldom been my fortune to see such a complete selection of such really good quality as was on exhibition there.

Harry Brown has a nice little range of glass, almost new, which he devotes to roses and carnations and a general assortment of stock suitable for a retail trade. His roses look exceptionally fine.

A. Brosch also has a nice little range, and reports trade, with the exception of funeral work, rather dull.

J. Frommelt has a tidy place up among the hills, opposite Rivermont park. He does a good business in design work, and the raising and selling of bedding stock.

I also made a visit on Miss A. F. McCarron, who has a tidy little retail store on Main street, doing a good business in design work, and the sale of decorative plants.

October 10 an unprecedented frost visited this valley, entirely destroying all outside stock, and of course giving the florists the smile that wears. The thermometer in some localities fell as low as 26 degrees. Trade since then has taken a boom, and we may say has come to stay for the season. R.

FULTON, ILL.—John Aggen will build a greenhouse 21x100 to be used for starting early vegetables.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

Shortage of Rose Plants.

During the months of July and August long continued wet and cloudy weather prevailed, to which reference was then made in this correspondence. This proved a prolific cause of fungus in the propagating frames of many rose growers in this section, all of whom depend upon favorable summer weather for the success of their crops, and the inevitable consequences now are apparent. While going the rounds in course of regular business, incidentally noticing the benches on which the bulk of the season's crop of young roses is in pots, and conversing with the growers in charge, it is found that the percentage of losses has been exceptionally heavy. A number of the catalogue firms which offered surplus stocks last season already are in the market as buyers, and will undoubtedly continue purchasing until next summer. In order to obtain an approximate idea as to the extent of the shortage, the subject having naturally come up for discussion, an informal poll was taken at the October meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club. As compared with last season, reports from growers present, representing practically all concerns in the Springfield-Urbana district, show an average shortage of about thirty-five per cent. Since this district produces seventy-five per cent or more of the shipping size of rose plants grown in this country, this shortage is sure to be felt before the approach of spring. Far-seeing buyers already have placed heavy orders, and others are making up their want lists considerably ahead of the usual time, while the fellow who habitually waits for bargain counter prices at surplus stock sales in the spring certainly will experience difficulty in covering his wants, even at full list prices.

Current Comment.

A slight fall of snow on October 10, coming before frost had appeared, was a phenomenon not heretofore observed by pioneers in this locality.

At the farm of the National Peony Co., a splendid stock of plants has been grown, including a large variety of desirable sorts. Ward Welch is in charge and the product is being marketed extensively by The Good & Reese Co.

At the fall meetings of the club several members have made mention of that thirsty feeling, which has seemingly prevailed since the summer picnic, and suggested that the entertainment committee should get into action. However, in gentlemanly deference to the respectable minority of drys, it was decided that

ARAUCARIAS, the best decorative plants Nature produces, our specialty.

Every man in business and life, to be successful, must adopt one thing as his specialty and that specialty, of whatever nature it may be, he must guard, study and push to such an extent that it not only benefits himself but he must continue it so every one who seeks his aid, services or his article, which he advertises or practices, will share a slice of his activity and prosperity. I made the importation and cultivation of araucarias a special study in my life. The figures below will show my success in business from the first year: by commencing with an importation of 250 and now, the eleventh year, my importation has grown up to 6,000 (come and see it), the reason being that the araucaria grows yearly more in favor with the plant consuming people all over the country. As a most admired decorative plant for the parlor, bed-room, dining and sitting-rooms, stores and hotels, lawns and porches. The outlook will be of an importation of at least 8,000 to 10,000 in spring of 1907. To secure this vast amount for 1907, I left Hoboken Aug. 15, striking for Belgium, to make contracts for next year. I shall also bring over with me at the same time a large lot of choice Azalea Indica and Palms, etc., for Christmas and Easter forcing. No money will be spared to secure for my customers the cream of the Belgium greenhouses only.

Araucaria Excelsa, 12 to 14 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 50c. 14 to 16 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, 2 yrs. old, 60c. 16 to 18 inches high, 5½-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 yrs. old, 75c. 18 to 20 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.00. 20 to 24 inches high, 6-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 yrs. old, $1.25. 26 to 30 inches high, specimens, 7-in. pots, 6 yrs. old, $2.50 to $3.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta, have 1000 of them. Never were they as nice as this year. Plants are as broad as long, from 12 to 20 inches in height, 3 to 4 perfect tiers, 20 to 30 inches across from tip of one tier to the other, 3, 4 and 5 yrs. old, 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00, up to $3.00 each.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca, perfect jewels in shape and size, their beautiful greenish blue tiers give them such a striking appearance, that anyone seeing them must fall in love with them on sight. Plants, 6 to 7-in. pots, 3, 4, 5 perfect tiers, 15 to 25 inches in height, from 15 to 30 inches across, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00 to $2.50 each. Please bear in mind that the above mentioned varieties are the cream of Belgium's productions. We have thousands of them and can meet all demands.

Kentia Belmoreana, 6-in. pots, 4-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, bushy, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.25; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 3-year-old, 5 to 6 leaves, 75c to $1.00 each. These are the sizes entered in the customs house.

Current Comment.

Our long and beautiful summer came to a sudden and disastrous end on Wednesday, October 10. We had several days of rain, but about 4 p. m. that day heavy flakes of snow took the place of rain. If ever that hackneyed phrase of a "sickening thud" was excusable, it is in reference to that snowstorm. It fell down wet, soggy and slushy. It lodged on the foliage of trees, and bent their branches to the ground. Darkness made us oblivious to the destruction that was going on, yet the crack and swish of the branches as they fell to the ground told us of the destruction of our shade trees. The local weather man says a little more than fourteen inches of snow fell that night, unprecedented in the record of the weather bureau for October.

Daylight disclosed an awful destruction of our trees. The residence streets were almost impassable. Branches, and in many cases trees, had fallen to the ground. In many of our residence streets the shade trees are too close and their branches are so thick that a pruning would do good, but unfortunately this storm pruned with no artist's eye. It broke down the leading young branches. The chief industry of the bureau of streets at present is to cart off to the nearest vacant lot the fallen boughs and trees, preparatory to innumerable bonfires to blaze on the evening of November 6, to glorify the election of Mr. Hearst to the governorship of New York state.

The great destruction of our shade trees will soon be forgotten, but the loss to the fruit growers of western New York is much more serious. Many thousands of fine trees laden with Baldwin and Northern Spy apples have been crushed to the ground, but the most serious loss is with the peach growers of Niagara, Orleans and Monroe counties. Peach trees have been stripped of their branches and ruined.

Among shade trees, in our residence streets, the American elm and hard maple fared the best, and the Norway maple and Carolina poplar the worst. Of course, this snowstorm settled all outdoor flowers. Dahlias, salvias and all other plants were beaten to the ground, and a bed of begonias looked next morning more like a bed of saur kraut than anything you could think of, and so we are dependent entirely on the product of the greenhouse. Never did we sigh more fervently for the advent of the queen of autumn. A few good Monrovia have been in town, but they don't fill the bill. Since asters are gone, we have only carnations and they are scarce. Roses are plentiful, but the great public doesn't want roses. In a few days we will have Polly Rose and Kalb chrysan-

Since the frost of October 10 trade has assumed a brighter aspect, and roses, carnations and violets find a ready sale at fair prices. Mums are just beginning, and there is promise of a heavy cut.

James J. Curran reports trade as good. He is having an excellent cut of roses, carnations and violets, and can easily clear off each day's cut at prices which are ruled by the Washington market. He has a large house full of fine mums, which will be in full flush by Thanksgiving. R.

DERBY, N. Y.—W. L. Smith, for many years in business at Aurora, Ill., and recently located here, now is at White Plains.

ALPENA, MICH.—C. E. Sans has installed a new Ideal hot water boiler in his greenhouses. Mr. Sans expects to add a house 30x34 feet next year. Although 78 years old, and thirty-five years in business here, he still is active.

Greenhouse Heating.

A COIL HEATER.

I am building a coil heater out of 1½-inch pipe, using 480 feet. Each coil will be thirty inches wide and ten feet six inches long. There will be four of them. What size should the firebox be in height, width and length to successfully heat it? I am putting the coils in the furnace double deck; i. e., two coils below a partition of boiler iron and two coils above. What size and height should the smokestack be? I have considerable 6-inch sheet-iron pipe. Would three lengths be enough? A. L. H.

The heater in question should have a firebox two and one-half feet wide, this being the width of the coils, and three feet in length. This gives a little more grate area than is absolutely necessary to heat the amount of exposed surface, but the large area will permit the use of a less intense fire. A smokestack twelve inches in diameter should be large enough for this furnace. How successfully you can adapt the pipe you have to it I can not say, but if it is used, three pipes connected to the heater should be sufficient. L. C. C.

RESIDENCE AND GREENHOUSE.

We want to heat our residence from the furnace in the greenhouse. The distance is forty-five feet. We have a rise of one inch in six feet. Can we put the expansion tank at the highest point in the residence, with aircocks at the highest point in the greenhouse? It will require a rise of twelve feet above the flow pipe in the greenhouse. Can we make it work? We have been using a No. 186 Ideal hot water boiler in the residence and the same kind in the greenhouse. We are now putting in a No. 3 Kroeschell hot water boiler of 9,000 feet rated capacity. Our residence has nine rooms, and we have 2,500 feet of glass in the greenhouse. How large will the expansion tank need to be?

There should be no difficulty in heating the residence and the greenhouses from the same boiler. It is advisable, however, to carry an independent flow and return pipe from the boiler for each system; i. e., make the house-heating system entirely separate from the greenhouse plant, except that a common boiler is used for both. The expansion tank can be located on the main return from the dwelling and placed in the attic or any other convenient place where an overflow can be provided. A 50-gallon tank should be ample. Provide aircocks on every register and at all high points in the greenhouse system. L. C. C.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

Our first frost was October 10 and with the freeze we had our first snow. Trade is increasing, and the craft agree that it is much ahead of a year ago at this time. The colder weather has helped the first sales of chrysanthemums, there being quite a good demand for Monrovia, Polly Rose, and Glory of Pacific. As soon as we obtain a better grade of carnations from the growers it president, was chosen to award the sweepstake prizes of $5 and $3 for the children's school gardens. Our club takes enthusiastic interest in the garden work of our public schools, and $20 was appropriated for the purchase of Holland bulbs, to be distributed to the children. Messrs. McKellar, Stephens, and Faxon, as a committee on new quarters for the club, have chosen rooms in the Brent building. While there will be no public show of chrysanthemums this fall, our club will hold an informal display at its rooms, at one of its November meetings. An appropriation for prizes was made and a committee consisting of Messrs. Hills, Williams, and Helfrick, chosen to take charge of the matter. October 16 the annual election of officers will take place.

Superintendent Underwood declares himself powerless to prevent the vandalism and plant stealing of Sunday frequenters of the park. Last Sunday whole beds of geraniums, begonias, coleus, and cannas, were demolished and carried away. Even rose bushes were not exempt. A few children started the trouble by helping themselves; then one by one the crowd took a hand, until some 200 people were furiously tearing up by the roots everything in sight.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co., at its stand on the Central market, has been disposing of a lot of potted stock this week.

Graff Bros. furnished large quantities of stock for the opening of the Northern hotel, and the exhibit of the railway association last week.

W. L. Clark, of Leamington, Ont., was a visitor this week, and reports business in his region in a prosperous condition.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Current Comment.

The freeze of last week put all outdoor stuff out of business. As a consequence, there is a great shortage of flowers, everything in the shape of a bloom being in demand. Mums coming in will make up the deficiency in a few days, and they are much needed, as funerals and weddings demand a quantity of flowers.

John Hartje has Candace and Moonlight in fine shape, the reason being that he grows Candace by moonlight.

The writer took a flying trip to New Castle last week, and as time was short was unable to visit the craft generally, stopped in at Heller Bros. and found everything in good shape, with promise of a fine cut, both of roses and carnations, in the near future. The Beauties looked as good as ever, and everyone knows what they are generally like. Dittmann's, across the way, looked in good shape. Both places seem to be on to their job.

J. S. Haugh, of Anderson, was taking in the greenhouses around the city last Thursday. He reports business good in his town, and anticipates a very busy season. S.

MANISTIQUE, Mich.—Rollo Leidy, of Tiffin, O., has taken the position of superintendent for the Lewis E. Morris Co.

UNION CITY, TENN.—J. K. Postma is preparing to erect another new house and contemplates the thorough remodeling of his plant next spring.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Three nights' hard freezing has put dahlias, cosmos, and all other outside flowers down and out, and the result was an advance in prices all along the line. Chrysanthemums are coming in more plentifully, and it is more than likely that before the end of the week they will commence piling up. Carnations are short and scarce, not half enough coming in to supply the demand. Beauties are more plentiful and cheaper. All other stock is about equal to the demand.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburg Rose & Carnation Co. has been cutting some fine Bergmann, Willowbrook, and Lady Harriet mums on which they have realized good prices.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. has been receiving consignments of good violets, the best they ever received at this early date. They supplied one order of 12,000 one day last week.

H. L. Blind & Bros. had several large decorations last week, several of them quite elaborate for this early season.

Rumor says that Randolph & McClements have purchased the entire Siebert plant, including land, greenhouses, store, and everything pertaining thereto.

L. I. Neff opened his amusement place to the public last Tuesday evening. Many of his friends in the trade were there for the first night and all declare it first-class in every department, from the bowling alley to the theaterium, and wish him all success in his new venture. Up to this time they have all the people they can handle and it has the ear-marks of success.

P. J. Demas, proprietor of the Pittsburg Florists' Exchange, is in the east, visiting the trade.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. are receiving some fine mums and Beauties.

Walter Breitenstein has just returned from the east. Hoo-Hoo.

DAVENPORT, IA.—The iron frame for the new greenhouse at Fejervary park is up. The house is to be 40x75.

BARABOO, WIS.—William Peck is putting in an entire new heating system in his greenhouse. The new boiler room, 20x34, is nearly finished.

LEWISTON, PA.—Roland Bowersox has been to Harrisburg to take in the sights and from there to Carlisle to see his sister, who is connected with the Indian school there.

CALDWELL CYPRESS TANKS

the more you will be convinced they are the safest, strongest and longest lived tanks made. Red Gulf Cypress is the wood we use, and there is no other wood in the wide world comparable to it in wearing and lasting qualities. Every hoop on the Caldwell tank not only bears its exact proportion of the pressure, no more, no less; but it has just four times the strength required to sustain the strain upon it. Now you know the reason why our tanks don't leak, burst or collapse. This superiority of material and construction makes our cypress tanks for all practical purposes as strong and lasting as steel. Thousands in use from 1 to 25 years, many

The Test of Construction

Of what use is first-class workmanship and the best material if the construction of your house is antiquated and out-of-date? There is as much in the style of house as in the material of which it is built, and too much stress cannot be laid on the "right kind of construction."

There is a special house for each special condition and the ordinary planing-mill knows nothing of construction details. The first step toward "right construction" is to get our catalogue and estimate. Write now and start right—erect houses that will enable you to compete with the other fellow.

These are the exact words of Mr. Burnham in a recent talk with the Ad. man—words that carry a tremendous force coming as they do from the oldest and most experienced man in greenhouse heating.

THE "BURNHAM'S" MADE WITH

- An extra deep fire pot.
- Fire travel three times the boiler's length.
- All fire surface entirely water surrounded.
- All water ways tend upward.

AS A RESULT

- The fire burns steadier, consumes more gases and requires less attention.
- Every available bit of heat is absorbed before gases reach smoke pipe.
- No fire surfaces can burn out.
- Circulation is unimpeded, rapid.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Crimson Rambler.

I have mentioned several times this summer the importance of having the canes of Crimson Rambler roses well ripened in the fall. This applies to plants grown in the open ground.

As we are having frequent heavy rains, plants in pots should be laid on their sides to prevent their roots getting too much moisture, for it is time now that growth ceased and the wood became ripe. Plants in the field, which are sure to have made a strong growth, also can be helped to ripen the strong canes which you expect to give you the fine trusses of flowers next spring.

The accompanying illustration is prepared from a photograph of a Crimson Rambler grown by Thomas Roland, Nahant, Mass. Mr. Roland has the greatest success with these rambles lifted from the ground in the fall. Of seven plants lifted last year, six were exhibited at the American Rose Society's convention at Boston last spring, and this one gained the prize for the best plant at the show. It most assuredly is a beauty. Notice its grand trusses of bloom down to the very edge of the pot. I have no means of giving you the dimensions of this superb plant, but, large or small, it is a beauty, and appears, in proportion to its size, to be grown in a small pot.

Now, I am informed that Mr. Roland does not let the strong growths of his rambler roses wander along the ground, but trains the canes to a trellis, where the light, air and sun will ripen the wood. This is the foundation of his great success, followed by expert gardening. If you have any rambles in the field that you expect to lift about the middle of November, get their heavy, strong growths off the ground so that they can get the full light and sun.

Azaleas for Christmas.

There is no better selling plant at the holiday time than a well-flowered azalea, but only a few varieties can be forced into flower for Christmas. The four well-known varieties that can be easily gotten into full flower by that time are Deutsche Perle, pure white; Simon Mardner, deep rose; Vervæneana, mottled white and pink; Hexe, dark wine color.

These varieties all have semi-double flowers. Hexe is not yet common and agents last spring would not take orders for large quantities unless you also ordered other varieties in quantity. It is fine in color and habit and the great demand will keep it scarce for years.

You would naturally suppose that the azaleas that you had summered over on your own grounds would be the plants to force, but it is not so. The newly imported plants force much more easily. It is well to give these imported plants a few days in a cool house, but no time should now be lost in getting plants of the varieties mentioned into a warm house. Some plants may need a little more heat than others and some varieties are earlier than others, but that you can regulate a month hence.

Start now with 60 degrees at night. Keep the roots moist all the time and spray them, or to use a more correct gardening phrase, syringe them twice a day. The syringing has the same effect a shower has on our shade trees in the month of May. It keeps the buds loosened. Syringing must cease as soon as the buds show color.

In all imported azaleas you will notice

The great majority of azaleas, that are principally wanted for Easter, should be kept in a cool house. Remember that the Indian azalea will endure a low temperature; anything above a frost.

Chinch-Bug on Mums.

Cruel frosts have descended upon us and destroyed all our summer-flowering plants and we have to rely entirely on the product of the greenhouse. Supremely reigns at this day the flower that has been properly dubbed the queen of autumn. Many of us would be thankful if our friend and correspondent, Mr. Totty, would tell us how to evade or exterminate the chinch-bug. We never were troubled with it before, but this year it is a most decided nuisance and causes great loss. It is too late to do much towards its extermination, but let's have a preventive for next year. It does not make itself prominent until the buds a few extra strong growths that have outgrown the growths which have terminated with a bud. The very fact of their not setting a flower bud is the cause of this vigorous growth and they should be cut back to conform to the symmetry of the plant.

show color and from a rather superficial inspection appears to be a sucking and not a chewing insect, which makes it all the more formidable to combat. It has ruined hundreds of flowers of such good commercial sorts as Robert Halliday and Polly Rose, and as soon as they are cut it goes for Ivory. We suspect that Mr. Totty imported this pest with Nellie Pockett and is a little ashamed of it. It's a chinch, but not the kind of chinch we wish to acquire. Mr. Totty, if you please, let us have immediate and future relief.

Sweet Peas.

These are likely to be as profitable as any crop you can grow this winter and deserve the best of care. They will be now more than two feet above the ground and soon will be showing buds. Sunlight is the great factor toward producing bloom, as it is in all the vegetable kingdom, and next to that is fresh air. The rays of Old Sol we will get in daily diminishing quantities, but fresh air we can have and, therefore, it is better in dull weather (although not cold) to keep some heat in the pipes and give ventilation. Keep them tied up to the strings and free of aphids or fly.

With all due respect to the specialist on sweet peas (and there is one, a Scotchman pre-eminently above the rest) fumigation by tobacco stems or tobacco dust is dangerous and I much prefer a spraying with one of the liquid nicotine. There are so many of the decoctions now-a-days one hardly knows which one to choose and I am not desirous of advertising any particular one. Some believe in To-bak-ine, some in Nikotene, some in Nicotidine, and others in Nicofume. All are good as long as the manufacturers maintain the strength.

As your humble servant remarked a few weeks ago, it has become the chief end of gardeners to fight the innumerable insect and fungus pests that prey on our plants. Tobacco has been the great antidote but there are many situations where the fumes of tobacco are not only objectionable but actually not permissible.

Fumigating.

A successful florist of Buffalo said to me this morning: "There is not a green-fly in our houses. We do not wait to see them, but every Monday we go over the whole place (some 2,500 square feet of bench room) with the knapsack automatic sprayer and a solution of nicotine. This is the simple formula: Fill the can or cylinder with water up to six inches of its capacity, then add one-half of a 2-inch pot of the nicotine. Pump in air pressure and any greenhorn can be trusted to apply it to the plants."

Contrary to fumigation with the fumes of tobacco, which is always best done on dull, rainy nights, the application of the liquid nicotine should be done in early afternoon or when you are pretty strong, because this weak solution will not color the purest flower if it quickly evaporates. It will leave its mark if it remains all night.

This application is of particular value, but not in the case of our early lilies. If you expect lilies to be in flower by Thanksgiving give them 70 degrees at night and keep the aphids away from them.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

so that they will be soaked up and will carry through without wilting.

More Novelties.

Mrs. A. T. Miller, exhibited before the committee last week, is a very pure white, and would seem to be very promising as an early white. It is a European importation.

Buttercup is well named and needs no color description. Stock, with me, is limited this year, but other importers have it in larger quantity. At this date, October 20, it is fully developed, and may be aptly classed as an early Appleton, though not as large or having such heavy foliage, and a shade deeper in color.

Rose Lawrence is an immense yellow, that will be fine in the short vase class, but rather necky for long stems. It is easily the largest flower I have opened to date.

Mrs. Edwin Currie is a sweetly, pretty thing, but small for exhibition. Ideal in growth, dwarf, with large, handsome leaves, it will make a splendid variety for 6-inch pot work. The color is a lovely pink. Mrs. Henry Barnes looks as though it would be the best of the Wells-Pockett set for the year. Stem and foliage are great, and the flower will build up into a massive bloom. Later we will be able to report more fully. Mrs. G. Hunt is another of the Wells set that is splendid in foliage and stem, but, in common with all the varieties here, is late and only now showing color. All kinds are two weeks later than usual in this vicinity, and the Pacific and Polly Rose glut is only now with us, when usually it is in full blast by October 7.

I noted from the E. G. Hill Co. an immense variety called President Loubet before the New York committee on Saturday. It is a creamy white Japanese, and doubtless we shall hear more of it later from that enterprising firm.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

PACKING CUT BLOOMS.

Care of Exhibition Stock.

It is an easy matter for the labor of months to be destroyed by the carelessness of the expressman. I would not insinuate that he does it intentionally, but all boxes look alike to him, although they may be marked "this side up" or "handle carefully," and the only way one can be sure of his flowers is to pack them so securely that they cannot be injured by average handling. One sees many styles of packing at a big show, some of which, while they get the flowers there in good shape, are too expensive for general use. Such a system is the method of packing the flowers by standing them upright in the box. It takes a monster box to hold two dozen flowers, and the results hardly warrant it. I have had flowers travel perfectly, shipped flat, and a box about six feet long, eighteen inches high, and two feet wide is as large as should be used. Such a box will hold from eighteen to thirty flowers, according to the size.

Before putting in the box the flowers should be tied up in tissue paper, to keep them from rubbing against each other. Get the paper tied to the stem under the flower, and then bring it up over the flower and tie it on top. Japanese varieties pack nicely because the petals will pull up to the center and reduce the bulk of the flower one-half. When the paper is taken off the petals fall back naturally into place. The incurving forms pack well, because they are naturally falling to the center, and, in many cases like Appleton, the foliage is so heavy that the flowers cannot be crushed, because the foliage protects them.

The Japanese incurved are harder to pack because they are more or less globular in form, and will not stand to be tightly papered, or the side petals will be bruised. After the flowers are papered, line the box, first with newspaper, then tissue, and make a roll of paper to go under the neck of the flowers. Have the roll large enough so that the bottom layer of flowers is free from the box.

In the case of long journey shipments, wet paper should be laid between the layers, to keep the foliage from wilting. After the box is full, two or more slats nailed over the stems will keep them from moving around. Then if a rope is put round, so that the box can be easily handled by the expressman, no serious harm should come to the flowers.

Lots of time and lots of tissue paper should be used. Then it's a matter of luck to a large extent.

Flowers, before being shipped long distances, should be standing with the stems in water for twenty-four hours,

TREATING LEAF-SPOT.

We are sending some tips from our carnation plants. They show some small spots. These plants were planted in a bench, in new soil, and in a new house. They are growing well. We watered them overhead October 14, and that night the temperature fell to 35 degrees. Would this account for the spots?

A. R. & S.

The shoots you send show plainly a case of leaf-spot in its early stages, and you want to get to work on it at once. No doubt the heavy drop in temperature when the plants were wet had much to do with it, and cool nights without fire heat will make it worse. In the October 11 issue of the REVIEW I gave full instructions for eradicating this disease. If, however, you have not that issue at hand, then dust them thoroughly with lime and sulphur in equal portions and write for further instructions.

I don't know how many subscribers to the REVIEW save their copies for future reference, but I am sure it will pay anyone to do so. Almost every issue contains some useful information, even for the experienced grower, to say nothing of the beginner, who gets his daily guidance from its pages. It is not enough to simply read the paper through, even if it is done ever so carefully. You can remember but a small fraction of what you read, except what you are able to put in practice shortly after reading it. Even then you are much safer if you can look it up, and make sure you remember it correctly.

The articles appearing in the columns of the REVIEW are written by men who are experienced in the lines along which they write, and are founded on experience and not on theory. You will find treated in the numbers of a year almost every important subject in the cultural end of the business; and if you meet with some trouble, you can usually find a remedy in one of the back numbers. Diseases among plants are pretty much the same today as they were years ago, and the treatment required is the same. Of course we meet a new form of disease now and again, and we discover new remedies for old diseases; but it takes a great many years to change these things so much that experiences of five years ago would not stand you in good stead now in case of trouble.

Think how much it will save you to be able to look up a remedy in your old number, inside of an hour after you discover the need of it; whereas, to write for information, will require at least a week before you have your answer. In many cases it may mean the saving or losing of an entire crop.

If you will look over the pages of the REVIEW during the past two months, you will see that my answers to inquiries are in a large majority answers to leaf-spot cases. One article would have answered all of them, if each grower recognized the disease when it appeared, and it has been the same thing over each year. You will find the same remedies suggested for the same disease in last year's numbers.

I consider my old numbers of the REVIEW as the most valuable reference book, in so far as practical cultural knowledge is concerned, that I have in my possession. So begin now to save them, it will pay you well in the future.

TO STRENGTHEN CARNATIONS.

Can you tell me what to give my carnations to increase the size of bloom and stiffen the stems? They are growing lots of leaf.

R. H. E.

You do not give enough data for me to give you much information. I do not know what you have already done for your carnations, nor the conditions under which they are growing.

You say they are growing lots of leaf, which I understand to mean that they are growing strong. In that case, the blooms ought to be of fair size at least. A top dressing of bone-meal about thirty pounds to a bench 5x100 feet, or a mulch of half-rotted cow manure, may be found quite beneficial.

To stiffen the stems use either wood-ashes or air-slaked lime. Of the ashes use about half a bushel on a bench 5x100, of the lime half that amount. Sprinkle it on the soil and stir into the soil. Then give a good watering. Repeat in four weeks, if needed. Much will depend on the texture of your soil as to the stiffness of the stems. A fairly heavy soil will not need much in that line with most of the leading varieties of today. Liberal ventilation will help the stem.

A. F. J. B.

SHORT-STEMMED CARNATIONS.

My carnations are inclined to be short-stemmed. I moved them into the house about a month ago. Can I give them anything to make the stems grow longer? I never put any bone-meal in my soil. Would that make it?

C. F. R.

If you planted your carnations as late as the middle of September, which would be a month before your letter was written, then you can hardly expect to cut long-stemmed blooms by this time, and I can not suggest anything that will lengthen them, except good culture in general. The better the culture, the stronger will be the growth, and, naturally, longer stems will be the result as the season advances. Bone-meal is not an absolute necessity, and it will not lengthen the stem, except in so far as it may improve the general condition of the growth.

To get good long stems by this time, you must plant early, so that the blooming shoot is grown entirely indoors. The joints come longer than they will outdoors, and a longer stem is the natural result. Then, too, when you transplant with a crop of blooming shoots well started, it will check their growth, and throw them into bud sooner than was intended. You will notice this by comparing your stems indoors with those on the plants you left in the field. As the days grow shorter you will find these stems lengthening rapidly.

A. F. J. B.

VENTILATION.

As we approach the short, dark days of winter, when steady firing will be necessary, the real importance of thorough knowledge of the art of ventilation will become apparent. Where ventilation has been practiced in an intelligent manner during the summer and fall, the stock will be robust and the foliage of a texture fitted to undergo all the vicissitudes of winter culture. Even such stock soon can be spoiled by careless or imprudent ventilation, and where the stock has been neglected in this respect during the last month, the utmost care and skill is required to keep the stock even alive.

The art of ventilation as practiced by the most successful growers is, first, uniformity of temperature; that is, that no sudden fluctuations of temperature must occur either during the day or night.

If the night temperature wanted is 56 degrees this should be kept up at all hazards, but the circulation of the air must also be kept up, and this can only be done by keeping a small crack of air on and keeping up sufficient movement in the pipes to keep the temperature up to the mark.

During cloudy weather, when the temperature outside does not reach the freezing point, many inexperienced growers, in order to save fuel, have a habit of closing the houses tightly.

Now, good roses cannot be produced by this method, nor yet can the stock be kept in a healthy condition. The foliage and growth will soon become soft and spongy and leave them susceptible to mildew and all the other troubles the rose is heir to.

When the ventilators have to be raised they should never be raised so far that the house will cool perceptibly. They should be raised a little bit at a time, as necessity requires, and should be lowered with the same precision and care when reduction is needed.

By a careful study of conditions and a sensible manipulation of valves and ventilators the proper temperature can be maintained and a circulation of air among the leaves which is absolutely essential to the wellbeing of the stock.

Our Convention From English Eyes.

In comparing the meeting of the British Horticultural Trades Association with the convention of the S. A. F., as judged from the published reports, the editor of the Horticultural Advertiser says:

The Ladies.

"The most prominent point of difference in our judgment is the admission of the fair sex. So far, the ladies have not been invited to our gatherings, while at the S. A. F. they appear to form a very considerable proportion of those attending the annual meetings. There is much to be said for the wisdom of either course, and the subject having been mooted by several members this season, will likely come up for discussion and possible revision in the near future. No one will dispute that the admission of 'friends, wives, and sweethearts' would brighten our meetings, and that some members who now stay at home would be with us, if they could bring the lady members of the family with them and make an annual holiday of it. On the other hand it is equally clear that the presence of the ladies would alter the tone and character of everything, excepting the formal business meetings in the evenings. Many members feel that the most valuable side of a trade gathering is the opportunities for quiet business chats which occur while walking around the nurseries or driving from place to place. At these times, not only are fresh acquaintances made, but notes are compared as to abundance or poverty of various stocks, probable values, etc., etc. They say that the entrance of the ladies would mean the exit of business, and that instead of 'two-year, one year' and similar subjects, the conversation would range on frocks, art, games, the weather, or anything but business.

The Sports.

"Then there is the question of sports, bowling, shooting, and so on, which seem to claim a largish share of convention time and interest with our American cousins. Here we feel on more solid ground and have no hesitation in registering an emphatic negative against their introduction. The average American man of business seems bent on solving the problem of how many hours' work a day he can put in, without actually killing himself, and with many in the florist section, Sunday is not much more of a rest day than the other six; under which circumstances we can easily understand the protest against all work and no play, when away from home on convention. With us, however, sport enters pretty fairly into the general routine—at any rate with the younger members—and so far from relaxation of this kind being a welcome introduction to our programme, we believe it would be repudiated by a large majority as an absolute waste of time.

The Exhibition.

"The subject of an annual exhibition of sundries, novelties, etc., such as forms a regular and important feature at the American gatherings, has not yet even been mooted with us, but we think it is worthy of the most careful consideration. Keen business men on an outing of this kind are more than ever on the watch for novelties suited to their trade, and only need to have a good thing put before them, to begin to feel for their pocketbooks. We would suggest that before any steps are taken to organize a regular show, a small test should be made by placing a table in the meeting room, so that any member having a good novelty in plant, fruit, or flower, could place a vase, dish, or plant upon it for the inspection of members present. We fancy this would prove a good means of making a novelty known to the leading members of the trade, and that once started, the thing would grow and become a feature of great interest in our annual gatherings."

IOWA FLORISTS' MEET.

At Dubuque, October 17, the Iowa State Florists' Association held its fourth annual meeting and, after discussing trade topics, elected the following officers:

President, Theodore Ewoldt, Davenport; vice-president, Judson Kramer, Cedar Rapids; secretary, Wesley Greene, Des Moines; treasurer, Wm. Harkett, Dubuque; directors, W. E. Kemble, Oskaloosa; J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs; Benj. Adams, Manchester.

The sessions were held in Columbia hall and among those present were Peter Lambert, Des Moines; John T. Temple, Des Moines; Joseph Bancroft, Cedar Falls; W. S. Harkett, A. L. Glaser, G. A. Heine, W. H. Gilford and S. Muntz, Dubuque.

The program was as follows:

Address by president and reports of officers.

"Greenhouse Heating and Care of Boilers," John T. Temple, Davenport.

"Greenhouse Gutters and Posts," Judson Kramer, Cedar Rapids.

"Best Special Quick Crop for Cut Flowers," W. E. Kemble, Oskaloosa.

"Best Shrubs to Force for Retail Trade," J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs.

"Best Shrubs for Park and Lawn," Peter Lambert, Des Moines.

At the conclusion of the business session the party enjoyed a pleasant launch ride upon the Mississippi.

Des Moines was chosen as the meeting place for 1907, the gathering to be held during the time the state fair is in progress.

MR. PAPWORTH'S PLANT.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co.

Like carrying coals to Newcastle has seemed the business of shipping florists' products to the cities of the Gulf, and those outside our trade always have been surprised, and a bit incredulous, when told that the shipping of plants and especially cut flowers to southern cities is an important part of the business of many northern growers. New Orleans has been a particularly good customer, for most stock used there was purchased north. As P. A. Chopin says in his report as state vice-president of the S. A. F.:

"For many years the profession in Louisiana has been conducted in a rather modest way, when we consider the natural advantages we possess and the adaptability of our soil and climate to the growth of many trees, plants, flowers, etc., we formerly purchased from northern firms.

"Within the past year or so the craft appear to have awakened considerably, and to be making greater efforts to secure business from a larger area, and to be doing things on a much larger scale than heretofore. Where it was the custom to send to our northern brethren for such stock as bay trees, azaleas, araucarias, etc., in dozen and half-hundred lots, we now import direct from Belgium in 500 and 1,000 lots. Arecas and kentias are grown in 10,000 lots, from seed imported direct from the tropics, and often grown to salable sizes without spending a cent for coal, being wintered over in coldframes and summered outdoors with a slight lath protection against the rays of the sun.

"It is not so very long ago that the bulk of the plant business of our state was done by northern firms, and our local firms catered strictly to the trade in the immediate vicinity of their establishments, but at present we have several firms that spend thousands of dollars on their own catalogues, and ship to nearly every state in the south and to Central America; also.

"It long has been the custom for our retail florists to send to northern cut flower centers for their supply of choice cut flowers, but within the past year there has been constructed by the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., in the suburbs of New Orleans, a magnificent range of glass for the growth of fancy cut flowers. Notwithstanding the lateness of the season when the houses were completed, the firm supplied roses during the past winter and spring that were very fine, and cut flowers after that would compare favorably with those grown anywhere. As to carnations they will have to be given another and fairer trial."

The president of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. is the widely known Harry Papworth. The other officers are: Vice-president, A. R. Blakely; treasurer, Dr. Isadore Dyer; secretary, Chas. L. Sieber; directors, W. J. Gilbert, Robert B. Parker, R. W. Wilmot and Hudson S. Wolfe, all friends of Mr. Papworth and with him able to carry their undertaking to success. It may be considered that they have the best equipped and most up-to-date establishment in the south. The six new greenhouses, the framework of which was furnished by the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago, are 27x225 feet, built of Louisiana cypress, and the roof is supported by 1-inch and 2-inch iron pipe purlin posts. The entire range of new houses, as well as the older ones on the place, are heated by steam, for which purpose a 100 horse-power Stirling water tube boiler has been put up. The piping is under the benches and was done according to plans furnished by the American Engineering Specialty Co., Chicago, using the Webster vacuum system.

To insure a plentiful supply of water, a tower forty feet in height with a tank of 12,500 gallons capacity was built and the water is pumped by means of a six horse-power gasoline engine and pump from the Bayou Metairie, which runs through the place. Attached to the houses is a potting and packing house 30x165 feet, which communicates with all the houses. The office is situated in this building.

As evidencing the care with which the manufacturers of greenhouse material conduct their business, Mr. Papworth says that when the several cars of material arrived, a thousand miles from the place of manufacture but only a score of miles from where the lumber was obtained, there was nothing missing, not even a screw, and nothing was left over when the houses were completed; everything fitted nicely in its place and no saw was used in putting up the framework.

Speaking of the heating plant Mr. Papworth says: "We find the Webster vacuum system the most economical heating system and a great saver of fuel. The main and return pipes are all underground and therefore there is no obstruction in the walks of the houses. We consider the Stirling water tube boiler the best steaming boiler in the market. It has given us entire satisfaction and for heating a large range of houses there is nothing like it. The six horse-power gasoline engine and pump, direct connected, has been running almost a year and a half, day by day, and has during that time never missed and no breakdown occurred during that time. The running expenses are next to nothing and beat electricity all hollow. Running expenses are 1½ cents per hour and no attention necessary."

As during the summer months palms, ferns, etc., are grown outdoors, and as they require some protection against the sun, a palm shed 60x75 feet had to be put up. Some of the views show the interior of the houses planted in roses, mums and asparagus, which look well at this time and are exceptionally promising.

The nursery proper consists of 200 acres of the richest alluvial soil, thirty of which are at present under cultivation in palms, roses, shrubbery and shade trees of all kinds suitable for the south. Noteworthy are several thousands of Areca lutescens growing in the full sun which are remarkably thrifty and of fine color.

October 6 a finely appointed downtown store was opened at 141 Carondelet, where the high class retail trade will be catered to.

SHRUBS FOR FORCING.

[Remarks by J. F. Wilcox, Council Bluffs, at the recent meeting of the Iowa State Florists' Association.]

The term shrubbery is applied to groups of woody plants of comparatively small size. The line between shrubs and trees is not very definite. A shrub generally has a number of stems, springing from the ground, and a tree usually has a single trunk, but this is not uniformly true in either case.

The chief value of shrubbery comes from its use in an artistic way, although some shrubs have edible fruits, but as I understand it, I am to give you what information I can as to the best flowering shrubs to force for retail trade.

The choice of varieties depends primarily upon the locality. Without knowing this it is impossible for any person to give satisfactory advice as to varieties, as we often find that there is a certain variety which will sell well in one locality but does not find any demand in another, although the distance between the two might be but a few miles.

In our locality we find but a few varieties outside of roses that we consider profitable to force. There are, however, a great variety that can be forced at a good profit, especially in the large eastern cities, where there is a good demand for them, which means, of course, good prices.

With us, and I think everyone else, either east, west, north or south, the rose is at the head of the list, and in my opinion always will be. As to the best varieties, I think they are too well known for me to mention a long list of them.

Among other flowering shrubs those that prove the most satisfactory and profitable to us are hydrangeas, which we force in large numbers for Easter trade, and azaleas, one of the most popular and showy plants for Christmas and Easter trade.

Genista and syringa, commonly called lilac, both are good for cut flower purposes, and decorative as pot plants. Rhododendrons are beautiful and usually in good demand. Metrosideros, or bottle brush, is a showy Easter plant. Among the spiræas there are many varieties which are very showy and easily forced for Easter.

There are, however, a number of other varieties that are grown in large numbers where there is a demand for them,

FERTILIZERS AND THEIR USE.

[Continuation of a paper by Prof. R. Harcourt, of the Ontario Agricultural College, delivered before the Canadian Horticultural Association, at Guelph, Ont., August 29, 1906.]

Knowledge of Soil Necessary.

As a rule, fertilizers should be looked upon as adjuncts of farmyard and green manures, and should be applied to make up some deficiency in the soil, or to supply some constituent especially needed by the crop grown. Consequently, it is essential that the grower know something of the nature of the soil he is handling, the needs of the plant, and the functions of the various constituents in fertilizers, before he can intelligently and economically use these substances. In addition to this, he must know something of the composition and the source of the various constituents which go to make up the fertilizer before he can judge of its value and availability.

Sources of Nitrogen.

Nitrogen is the most expensive constituent of fertilizers, and possibly, all things considered, it is one of the most useful. Dried blood, dried meat, dried and ground fish, tankage, leather meal, wool, hair, waste cotton-seed meal, etc., are examples of substances which contain nitrogen in an organic form. Some of these, as dried blood and meat, readily decompose in the soil; others, as leather meal and cotton-seed meal, detificial manures. The phosphoric acid combined with organic substances, either animal or vegetable, is as a rule more quickly brought into an available condition than that derived from rocks. The organic matter also contains some nitrogen.

The phosphate of lime in bone and rocks is not in an immediately available form. To increase its solubility, the various materials containing it have been reduced to fine powder and are sold as ground bone and ground rock phosphate. The fineness of the state of division affects quite appreciably the solubility; consequently, the value of this form of phosphatic manures will vary considerably.

Sources of Potash.

Until the discovery of the mines of crude potash salts in Germany, the chief source of potash, other than that found in farmyard manure, was wood ashes. At present the supply of this important constituent seems to be practically inexhaustible. It is particularly valuable on light, sandy soils, and for fleshy-leaved plants.

Commercial Fertilizers.

In addition to the purely nitrogenous, phosphatic and potassic fertilizers, there is a great variety of materials used as manures which contain two or more of these constituents. These substances are subject to wide variations in composition and in the solubility of the various fertilizing constituents.

The various brands of fertilizers found on the market are made up of varying proportions of one or more products from each class of fertilizing material described. The manufacturer is obliged to go to these sources of supply. He may use dried blood or cotton-seed meal as the source of nitrogen; the phosphoric acid may be obtained from ground bone, ground rock phosphates or superphosphates, and the potash from tobacco stems or from some of the many forms of potash salts. All of these materials differ in the rate of decomposition; hence it is important that the purchaser not only know the percentage amount of the various manurial constituents in the fertilizer he buys, but he should also have very definite information regarding their solubility or availability to the plant.

Different Grades on the Market.

Generally speaking, it will pay the intelligent user of fertilizers to buy the materials and prepare his own fertilizer. He will find it cheaper, and he is absolutely sure of what it contains. Crops and soils differ in their requirements, consequently it is impossible for any one mixture to suit a variety of crops on different soils.

Space will not allow of a full discussion of the meaning of high grade and low grade fertilizers, and high grade and low grade mixtures; but it may be briefly stated that any material containing a high percentage of one or more of the essential fertilizing constituents, in a form available to plants, is termed high grade.

Protective Laws.

The government of Canada has done what it can to protect the users of fertilizers against a dishonest manufacturer or agent, for years ago it enacted a law whereby every manufacturer or importer of fertilizers shall, before such as Ardisia crenulata, with its bright red berries; the orange plant, Laurus tinus, and erica in various varieties.

The shrubby calceolaria, though not so much grown as in former years, is a showy plant. Gardenias or cape jasmine, though shipped from the south as cut flowers, are decorative if grown in pots.

There are a number of other varieties which might be mentioned, but as I have had to prepare this list at brief notice I fully realize it is not as complete as it should be.

compose very slowly. As they are of no service to the plant until they do decompose or rot, it will be readily seen that the nitrogen in dried blood is worth more per pound than that in leather meal or any other substance which decomposes slowly. Nitrate of soda and ammonium sulphate are chemical compounds containing nitrogen in a definite and soluble form, and when pure they always have the same composition.

Forms of Phosphorus.

The phosphoric acid in artificial manures is derived from compounds known as phosphates. Although phosphorus combines with lime, iron and alumina, forming phosphates, the phosphate of lime is the one generally used as the source of phosphoric acid in ar-offering them for sale, transmit to the minister of inland revenue a sample of the fertilizer, together with a statement setting forth the nature of the materials which enter into its composition and the manufacturer's certificate of analysis of such fertilizer. This sample is submitted to the chief analyst for analysis, and shall be preserved by the department for the purpose of comparison with any samples of the fertilizers of that brand which may be collected during the next twelve months.

If the fertilizer is put up in packages every package shall have the certificate of analysis placed upon or attached to it; if it is sold in bulk, such certificate shall be produced and a copy given to every purchaser. Every certificate shall also contain a statement of the nature of the materials entering into the composition of the fertilizer. In this way the government obliges the seller to stamp the percentage composition on his goods, and seeks to see to it that the goods are kept up to the standard.

Home Mixtures Sometimes Best.

It may often occur that home mixtures of fertilizers can be made which will better meet the requirement of the particular soils and crops under cultivation than any mixture that can be procured on the market. Reliable authorities have estimated that the charges of the manufacturers and dealers are, on the average, $8.50 per ton. It is evident that this, together with the extra freight on and cost of handling the make-weight substances commonly added, would leave a fair margin to pay for labor involved in making the mixture at home. The offal from our pork-packing houses, if properly ground, could well be used as the basis of many of such mixtures. As it is, practically all of this valuable fertilizer is shipped out of the country, where it is ground, mixed with other substances, rebagged, and much of it finds its way back into this country under the name of many special brands of fertilizers.

From the few points mentioned in connection with the subject of fertilizers, it is evident that a man must have an intimate knowledge of the requirements of his soil and crops and the various kinds of fertilizers on the markets before he can hope to use commercial fertilizers economically. They have a place with the florist and in agriculture in general; but it is as an adjunct, and they should be used only after every care has been taken to get the best results from the farmyard manure, and in conjunction with most thorough cultivation.

AIR-PLANTS AND AQUATICS.

Will you tell me something about air-plants and vines: their names, habits, etc.; also something of the water-vines?
J. C. B.

So-called air-plants are plants which live upon other plant tissues, though deriving their moisture and a large part of their nourishment from the air. They are truly orchids, and belong to the class known as epiphytal orchids. There are many species of plants belonging to this group with varied habits, some with almost no foliage, others with broad, fleshy leaves and with blossoms varying quite as markedly as do the leaves.

The so-called resurrection plants are very curious, because, seemingly dry and dead, they can be brought to life. Of these, the rose of Jericho, Anastatica Hierochuntica, which means resurrection plant, is one of the most interesting. The dried stems and fruits are the parts of this annual which are of special interest. As the plant matures, the leaves fall off, the stems dry and roll up, forming, as it were, a ball, inside of which the seeds are held. These balls become loosened from the ground in their native country, are blown about by the wind much as are tumble weeds in the western states. They are very hygroscopic, and when put in a moist place take up enough moisture to cause them to unroll and assume a normal plantlike form. The bird's-nest moss, of Mexico, is attractive because it does much the same thing, but when given proper treatment and suitable conditions, growth may actually be revived. This plant is known as Selaginella lepidophylla. Another plant, sometimes also called rose of Jericho, is Asteriscus pygmaeus.

The one aquatic that will probably be worth attention is the parrot's feather, Myciophyllum proserpinacoides, a half-hardy plant from Chile, frequently used in drinking fountains, aquaria, globes, etc. It can also be used in hanging baskets, if a little mud is placed in the bottom and the surface continually kept covered with water. The plumelike foliage will grow up and fall gracefully over the edge of the basket. L. C. C.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

LUNCHEON DECORATIONS.

Please give us some ideas as to how to decorate small card-tables with flowers for luncheon.

What percentage should be added to the wholesale prices of cut flowers for retailing? D. B.

Because of the fact that the tables are small, the luncheon decorations must of necessity be not large. Probably the most frequent style of decoration for the purpose is a small, low bowl filled with small flowers like violets, valley, sweet peas or pansies, loosely arranged. This might be elaborated by scattering flowers on the cloth, or by streamers of smilax leading out to points between the plates; or instead of bowls, fancy baskets, etc., might be used, as an automobile filled with daisies. We have used, on very small tables, thin-necked vases, each containing one perfect rose, with not too long a stem, sometimes a different rose in each vase. A little thought will suggest a great variety of ways to decorate small tables.

It is less easy to say what price should be charged in the retailing of cut flowers. Charge enough to make a satisfactory profit. Some retailers are able to do this on prices lower than others charge, depending upon volume of business done, quality of service given, and other factors. Roughly speaking, retail prices should be, on the average, double the wholesale price. H. O.

RETAILER'S ADVERTISING.

An Ad-dition.

"A man who owns a great big store
With stocks of goods on every floor,
May, to his keenest sorrow, find
The public to his wares is blind.
And though he add all he may guess
Would likely add to his success,
His bank account may never rise
Till he concludes to add—vertise."

Comparatively few retail florists do as much advertising as they should, or the right kind. While it may be said with truth that an attractive show window is a florist's best advertisement, still there are many things a window cannot do in the way of reaching people who should be buyers. For creating trade there is nothing compares with the newspaper; for holding trade brought by advertising there is nothing but to give good stock and good service—in a word, satisfaction. If not properly backed up, advertising is a waste of money. If you don't treat people so they will come back when occasion again arises, you might as well go out of business at once and save the sheriff trouble.

"Keeping everlastingly at it brings success" never was more truly spoken than of advertising. Pick out the best paper, and then stick to it. If it doesn't pay right away it is because you haven't the right copy in your space. Change it; try a different offer; pretty soon you will hit the idea that will bring in the business.

The best paper for a retail florist is the one that enters the home. In all except the large cities, probably all papers are read by the whole family, and it narrows down to the one which reaches the most of your class of families. It is a safe rule that the paper that carries the most advertising has the most readers; if it hasn't, it won't have the most advertising long.

The accompanying illustrations show what Baker, of Utica, does in a small space. They show that he gives their preparation some thought, and of course they pay him. Frequent changes of copy are made and the advertisement never is permitted to become old, to say nothing of being unseasonable, as we often see them. It is the general view among advertising men that no advertisement is as strong as it might be unless it quotes a price. But quoting prices is frowned upon by many proprietors of high-class stores, as detracting from the "tone" of the establishment. It isn't wholly necessary to quote prices in an advertisement, but it will bring quicker response if you do.

BALTIMORE.

Petition Park Board.

The object of the northeast Baltimoreans to petition the park board is to hold Noah F. Flitton superintendent of Clifton park, which position he has held for eight years. The record made has so endeared him to the northeast Baltimoreans that they are loth to see him leave them.

Mr. Flitton was to go to Patterson park, November 1, and C. L. Seybold was to go to Carroll park. The park board announced a general shakeup of superintendents November 1. A mass-meeting of the residents of northeast Baltimore was called to draft resolutions protesting against the removal of Mr. Flitton, under whose management the park has almost doubled its size, and now is one of the best kept parks in the city. Broad roadways have been constructed, where formerly bridle paths existed, and many acres of rough farm land to the northward of the old park limits have been changed into beautifully kept lawns. The greenhouses have been enlarged, and the entire park has been improved so skilfully that none of its natural beauty has been sacrificed.

In addition to having charge of the Clifton park, Mr. Flitton also is responsible for the care of Mount Vernon place, and the so-called sunken gardens of Mount Royal terrace, besides the upper end of Broadway from Gay street to North avenue. The splendid manner in which these parks have been kept is one of the arguments being used by the residents of the northeast, and other sections of the city, for the retention of Mr. Flitton as the superintendent of Clifton park.

business somewhat, however a considerable amount of cut flowers were sold.

Last week was opening week for the millinery and the department stores.
Fall leaves and chrysanthemums were used principally, both in natural and imitation.

Chrysanthemums are more plentiful, bringing good prices. Polly Rose, Halliday, and Willowbrook are our main early stock. Roses are still plentiful.
The street boys are on the curbstones offering roses at any price.

Thousands more carnations could be used. Some of the growers have not filled their houses and are unable to get the plants. It is feared this will make a difference in the average amount cut this year.

Violets are doing fine enough to meet the present demand. Harrisii lilies are coming in a little more steadily and bringing fair prices. Cosmos is now on the market in great quantities, and generally the market florists reap a harvest out of it.

Various Notes.

Geo. Cook, of Arlington, has completed his new houses and he has 10,500 square feet of glass, and will grow chrysanthemums and carnations. He has installed a gasoline engine to supply water. His houses are of the most up-to-date pattern, one 14½x100 feet and three each 23x100 feet.

William Terry, Owing's Mills, is somewhat troubled over the effects of his carnation shortage, and was in town trying to buy plants.

Stevenson Brothers, Govanstown, Md., are cutting the finest roses in the state.

James Glass, Erdman avenue, is doing a rushing business in the fern line.

E. A. Seidewitz will move from 36 W. Lexington street to 323 N. Charles street November 1.

Secretary L. R. Meekins, of the Jamestown fair commission, announced that it has been decided to allot $5,000 for the horticultural and floricultural division of the state's exhibit at Jamestown next year.

It is claimed by the Maryland State Horticultural Society and the Maryland Experiment Station that the horticultural products of the state bring in an income of $15,000,000 a year.

A NEW YORK STORE.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of the store occupied by Traendly & Schenck, at 44 West Twenty-eighth street, New York. This firm was founded in 1894. For ten years the business was conducted at 38 West Twenty-eighth street, but more commodious quarters became a necessity. Now they lease the whole building, using a large part of it in their wholesale work. Their business has grown steadily from its inception. They have many consignments daily from the largest growers, some of them having shipped constantly since the firm began its work. They handle Chatenay, Uncle John and Golden Gate in large quantities. One of their favorite roses is a novelty, still unnamed, resembling Test-out. Both members of the firm are young men and are on deck every day, and with their big force of employees, the activity displayed tells the whole story.

Both members of the firm are connected with many horticultural and fraternal societies. Mr. Schenck is a Mason in high standing, master of his lodge. Soon he will join the ranks of the benedicts. Mr. Traendly has been president of the New York Florists' Club two years and made a great record. He is a member of the executive committee of the S. A. F.

ELBERON, N. J.

A meeting of the Elberon Horticultural Society was held October 15, when two new members were elected, and the following officers were selected for the ensuing year: President, W. D. Robertson; vice-president, Henry Wood; treasurer, James Kennedy; secretary, Store of Traendly & Schenck, New York City.

George Masson; assistant secretary, Fred. Dettlinger.

An interesting discussion took place on the advisability of leaving the foliage of asparagus on the plant until spring. The majority of the members were in favor of cutting it down in November or December. It was decided to experiment on the question.

Among the exhibits was a fine vase of Richmond roses, shown by Peter Murray. A vase of carnations which were good for the season was shown by A. Bauer. W. D. Robertson exhibited a dish of sweet potatoes, variety Yellow Yam, and A. Greib a vase of nice cosmos.

The next meeting of the society will be held November 5, when the newly elected officers will be installed.

Vegetable Forcing.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—October 20 the Gardeners' Association held its first anniversary celebration in Bushnell hall. The chairman of the committee of arrangements was R. S. Green, who with the other members prepared a fine program. The meeting was called to order at 6:30, and during the evening there was a fine banquet. The organization now comprises fifty-four members. The anniversary celebration that evening was a private affair, being for the members only and a few invited guests.

FORCING CUCUMBERS.

Planting on the Benches.

As soon as the plants show well-developed runners and are ten to twelve inches long they should be placed in their permanent position upon the greenhouse benches. Plants grown in pots must be carefully removed from these receptacles to the bench, but those grown in wooden cups can be planted cup and all, in the soil of the bench, says L. C.

Corbett, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, in his recent bulletin.

The utmost care should be exercised to keep the plants of cucumber growing rapidly at all times. If cucumbers receive a severe check, or are placed under conditions which are not entirely congenial to them, they are liable to become dwarfed and stunted, and as soon as vigorous growth ceases they become the prey of the melon aphid, mildew, and other pests and diseases which are so annoying to growers of cucumbers under artificial conditions.

After the plants have attained a height of ten or twelve inches and are in a vigorous growing condition they should be placed about fifteen or eighteen inches apart in single rows upon the side benches of the greenhouse, which are normally three and one-half feet wide, or if planted on 8-foot benches they should be planted about ten or twelve inches from the edge of the bench and fifteen to eighteen inches apart and parallel with the edge of the bench. In the broad benches, where more than a double row can be carried, plants can be set about eighteen inches apart and in rows about two feet apart. A satisfactory plan for an 8-foot bench will be a row parallel with and ten inches from each edge of the bench and a double row eighteen inches apart through the middle of the bench. This style of planting will allow the use of a double-A trellis. It is well, however, to allow as much space as possible. The cucumber is a rank-growing plant and many side branches will develop if sufficient space is allowed.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

BOSTON, Oct. 23.—Cucumbers, $2 to $5.50 per box; lettuce, 50c to 60c per box; mushrooms, 75c per lb.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Cucumbers, 65c to $1.25 per dozen; lettuce, $1 to $2.50 per basket; Boston lettuce, per strap, $1 to $1.75; mushrooms, per lb, 50c to $1.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Cucumbers, per dozen, 75c to $1.

COLD WEATHER WEST.

Shippers of stock west should note that October 22 the whole territory between the Rocky Mountains and the Missouri was visited by genuine winter weather. Twenty inches of snow fell in Denver. It is warmer now, but shippers must guard against frost. In western Kansas the snow was the heaviest known so early in many years. At the head of Lake Superior and west there was heavy snow Monday.

ARE WHOLESALERS NOW.

We know of several greenhouse owners in small towns who have graduated into the ranks of wholesale plantmen because of the schooling obtained by the use of the REVIEW's classified advertisements to move small lots of surplus stock.

"I had quite a little stuff more than my home trade would take last spring," remarked a Michigan grower when he visited the REVIEW office a few days ago. "I sold about $500 worth by advertising in the REVIEW's classified department," he continued, "and this season I am going in heavier; it paid me better than small local trade."

Reference to that grower's account showed that his bill for advertising to sell "about $500 worth" was just $23.60.

DUTY ON GRASS-GROWING HEADS.

A. Herrmann, New York, protested at the rate of duty assessed by the collector of customs at New York. October 15 the board of general appraisers decided that "certain hollow heads and figures made of terra cotta and used for growing grass seed, which is sprinkled on the outside while the inside is kept filled with water, are dutiable as common brown earthenware under paragraph 94, tariff act of 1897, following G. A. 6229 (T. D. 26915)."

ASK THE EDITOR.

If there is anything about the practical, every-day affairs of the business you do not understand, if you are in doubt just how to handle a certain lot of stock, or how to build, or pipe a house, or if there is anything connected with the trade you would like to know and do not find in the REVIEW, ask the editor. State the case as completely as possible, so as to afford a basis for intelligent reply. Each question will be submitted to an authority on that particular subject and replied to in an early issue. Be sure you sign your name and address, but not for publication.

OBITUARY.

W. H. Townsend.

William H. Townsend, one of the best known men along the Hudson river, died at his home in Milton, N. Y., October 14. Apoplexy was the cause of his death. He was 65 years of age and had lived in Milton all his life. He is survived by a widow and one son, William H., Jr., and one daughter, Mrs. William Velie, who lives at Cedar Cliff. Mr. Townsend was also the owner of a large farm and greenhouse and with his brother-in-law as partner, conducted the Hudson Valley Fruit Package and Supply Co.

John Nelson.

John Nelson, florist at the reformatory at St. Cloud, Minn., died while he was about to be put on the train at St. Paul on the night of October 16. Death was caused by cancer of the stomach. The remains were brought to this city. The deceased was 50 years old. He came to St. Cloud from St. Paul six years ago and has since been the florist at the reformatory. About a year ago he became ill. October 12 his condition became serious and he was taken to St. Raphael's hospital, later to Rochester, Minn., to be under the care of the specialists. The physicians said that there was no hope for his recovery and refused to operate upon him. He was then being taken back to St. Cloud when he died.

SPECIAL PLANT RATE.

Equality Law Works Injustice.

"If your express agent refuses you the special rate on plants properly boxed or crated, ask him if your town has a general special rate; if he says no, have him forward your application that it be given a general special rate." It was the advice of a high traffic official of the American Express Co.

Traffic affairs are in a chaotic state because of the recent rate legislation. This law brought the express companies under the control of the Interstate Commerce Commission, with which they are required to file all tariffs.

Now, there are many commodities which get the same rate as plants—fish, oysters, butter, eggs, etc.—the florists are not especially favored. The rate is known as "general special" (approximately twenty per cent less than merchandise rate) and is a part of all published tariffs. But a few towns are without a general special rate and in the classification, which is adopted by all companies, the following was inserted after nearly all if not all commodities named as entitled to the general special rate: "Between points where merchandise rates are 50 cents or more per hundredweight and no general special is in force, twenty per cent less than merchandise rate, pound rate, unless the graduate is less." This was construed to be a tariff not published as within the meaning of the law and all companies have canceled this clause in the classification.

Some companies have published scales of charges (approximately twenty per cent less than merchandise rate) which may be applied to commodities entitled to the general special rate when going to or from towns where there is no general special in force. Where such is not the case shippers in towns having no general special rate find themselves obliged to pay full merchandise rates, whether they ship plants, butter, eggs, or any of the other things which have had the special rate.

There are not many places which have not a general special rate, but a few florists have reported to the REVIEW that they are denied the plant rate. The express official quoted above further stated that he believes a general special rate, where one is not in force, will be readily granted upon application and matters soon will be adjusted satisfactorily to all. He says he believes it to be the policy of all the companies to fully comply with the law and it is an apparent injustice to grant a general special rate to one town and not another.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

On Friday, October 19, the market began to weaken. With delightful Indian summer days, the increase in production was noticeable, and it takes frosty weather to stimulate demand. For the next two or three days there was a weakening tendency in several items, but large quantities of stock were handled and in the aggregate sales probably reached a greater total than they had when the market was stiffer but supplies shorter. The shipping business is heavy.

Chrysanthemums are coming in heavily. There are abundant supplies in all grades, from the strictly fancy down to the small stock, which sells in quantity. Quality is good in all sizes. Prices, while they have weakened since last report, continue excellent as compared with those of previous seasons. The increase in supplies of chrysanthemums has taken away a portion of the call for other items. Possibly Beauties feel the effect more than any other. They are plentiful and prices are weaker. In the effort to hold the market up to previous standards considerable stock has been permitted to pass the point where it could be shipped with safety, and on this concessions have been made. The other roses are bringing the same prices as last week, but grading is a little closer.

Carnations are not abundant, but prices are lower than in the last fortnight, because buyers are not so anxious for them; they take small chrysanthemums instead. New York violets are more plentiful and the market is weaker. Excellent prices have been realized thus far, and even with values shaded commission-men expect to hear no complaint. Easter lilies are more plentiful and prices here, too, are lower. Valley continues in excellent demand. There is not much other stock in market.

The business in greens is active. Wild smilax moves well and asparagus and smilax strings are wanted. Boxwood is seen everywhere. It is evident this will be largely used this season in the making of wreaths and other designs.

With the weather-man predicting a cold wave, with All Saints' day in the south and the horse show opening Monday at the Coliseum, this cable-trainless town ought to have an electrified market next week.

Bartzen Gets Busy.

Building Commissioner Bartzen has found his way into the cut flower wholesale district with an inspector, and is ordering changes right and left. He began at 76 and 78 Wabash, where Baumann, Bassett & Washburn and E. H. Hunt all were directed to make changes to conform to the law which requires that the approach to fire escapes shall be unobstructed. Even so slight obstructions as the sorting tables in front of the windows were ordered removed. Of course the alterations were willingly made, and will be in all cases where tables shut off access to the escapes.

Window Display.

To those who are interested in really artistic window display we commend the decorations in Fleischman's Jackson boulevard store. There are plenty of places where more stock is on display and where the facilities for good work are rather better, but there is no downtown store where the art of floral arrangement is better understood or practiced more consistently. A feature of recent windows has been a line of novelties in violet boxes, representing metallic treasure chests, both with and without decorations on the outside. George E. Wienhoeber is the one who creates the attractive displays.

Various Notes.

The wholesalers' employees are sanguine of much success for their first annual ball next Wednesday evening. Tickets are $1 a couple and a large number have been sold. The boys are planning an elaborate decoration.

Capt. A. I. Simmons, who is a member of the governor's staff, left Wednesday with the state officials to attend the dedication of the Illinois monument at Vicksburg, Miss.

"The world's greatest flower show, November 6 to 11," appears in bold letters on a number of long signs put up in some of the wholesale houses this week. There was a meeting of the chairmen of the flower show committees at the office of the Benthey-Coatsworth Co. Tuesday afternoon. Good progress was reported in all departments.

Chas. Johnson, the Limits Florist, has bought the Butler place at Chillicothe, O., and is preparing for early removal there. He has done business in the limits car barn on North Clark street. An auction sale will be held this afternoon to dispose of his remaining stock and fixtures. He also has two greenhouses on Diversey boulevard, which, with their contents, will be sold. The Butler place at Chillicothe consists of about 25,000 feet of glass and is a first-class business.

The mother of Joseph and Adam Ziska, the manufacturers of wire work, died Saturday at a ripe old age.

W. W. Randall has resumed business after his fortnight at West Baden.

The force in E. H. Hunt's supply department was busy Monday taking in a large consignment of French baskets.

Percy Jones visited the plant of the Chicago Rose Co., at Libertyville, one day last week and says the stock is in splendid condition.

Jos. Foerster, at George Reinberg's, says last week was the best in the history of the establishment, with the exception of holiday weeks. A big cut of Beauties was largely responsible for it.

L. Coatsworth went to Canada last night for a fortnight's shooting before bringing home his eldest daughter, who has been ill with typhoid fever at the old family home.

E. C. Amling says that he sees in the present market another evidence of the orthodoxy of what he has been preaching to growers for years. He finds all the larger grades of mums, such as will fetch $1.50 per dozen or up, in good demand, while this week the market is overloaded with small stock selling at $4 to $6 per hundred. It pays to produce the best grades of stock.

A. R. Ratsch, 2023 West Madison street, caused the arrest of Mrs. Mary Griffith, who lives at 4155 Grand boulevard, on a charge of securing money by false pretenses. It is alleged that the woman secured money, not only from the florist but also from numerous others, on an advertising proposition which she never fulfilled. The officials of the Garfield Park sanitarium and the Theodore Roosevelt hospital are behind the prosecution.

The business of the late F. J. Neiglick, at 2102 N. Clark street, is now conducted by Adolph Maleor.

In the big picture taken by Lawrence at the banquet to the National League baseball team the other evening, three familiar faces appear in the foreground: Leonard Kill, A. C. Spencer, and P. J. Hauswirth.

Harry Rowe is planning to annex one of the present writing rooms of the Palmer House for use as a conservatory. Mr. Rowe is making steady progress in his business.

Manusus has advanced a step, having opened an attractive flower store occupying the window and one side of the room at 24 Van Buren street. The Greeks are born merchants and steadily are becoming a more important factor in the downtown flower store world.

Jacob Russler, at Morgan Park, where the cemeteries are, proposes to sell out and retire from the greenhouse business, but Mrs. Russler will retain the retail store at West Pullman.

The Butler Floral Co. has the work for the Bankers' Club's series of five monthly dinners. These decorations are put on at the Midday Club, in the top of the First National Bank building, where Butler's also had the decoration for the dinner given for Jas. Keeley, of the Tribune.

It is reported that Poehlman Bros. Co.

again plans a considerable addition to its glass for next season, but the firm states that the subject has not yet been considered seriously.

Wieland & Risch have only one house in chrysanthemums this season, planted late, but counted on for Thanksgiving, which now looms on the horizon.

Now that the baseball season is closed, the energies at 51 Wabash avenue, which were employed "rooting" for the Cubs, are devoted to furthering the political fortunes of Ald. Thos. M. Hunter and "Larry" J. Coffey, close friends of Ald. Reinberg and his city store force. Ald. Hunter, who is well known to a portion of the trade as a large operator in grass seeds on the Board of Trade, is republican candidate for chief bailiff of the municipal court. Mr. Coffey is a democratic candidate for sanitary trustee. Each has good prospects for election.

N. J. Wieter says Clementine Touset is one of the best introductions in chrysanthemums in the last five years. It is an easy doer and makes a splendid flower.

Miss Nellie C. Moore was on deck Monday at the Flower Growers' Market for the first time since the peony season. In the meantime her mother has been doing the selling.

Kennicott Bros. Co. still received some nice cactus dahlias as late as October 22.

C. W. McKellar received one consignment of 350 cattleyas on Monday. He hopes the crop will hold till next week.

Otto Goerisch, salesman for the A. L. Randall Co., and Miss Lillian Giggel were married October 20.

CHICAGO PREMIUM LIST.

The final list of premiums offered by the Chrysanthemum Society of America and the Horticultural Society of Chicago for the joint exhibition at the Coliseum, Chicago, November 6 to 11, has just been issued. The list of special prizes of the Chrysanthemum Society was published in full in the REVIEW of October 11. The list of premiums offered by the Chicago organization is on the same liberal lines as in the past, the society having established a reputation for providing more liberal purses than any other similar organization in the country. Indeed, this year's list shows a number of substantial increases, notably in roses. For the best 100 red roses 35 cents each is offered, 25 cents for second and 12 cents for third. Other vases of 100 win $25, $12 and $8, while the Beauty premiums remain at $100, $75, $50 and $25. These sums are duplicated for a second exhibit of Beauties on Friday. Liberal premiums are offered for bride's and bridesmaid's bouquets and the premiums for table decorations are reestablished, with $50, $30 and $20 Thursday.

The program is as follows: First day, C. S. A. exhibits, chrysanthemums, general classes; second day, roses, orchids; third day, carnations, violets, valley, bouquets; fourth day, private gardeners' classes, new mums and carnations, second display of Beauties, miscellaneous; fifth day, baskets arranged for effect. The show closes Sunday night.

Copies of the premium list will be mailed upon request, addressed to W. N. Rudd, secretary, 1411 First National Bank building, or to the REVIEW.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business last week was considered good, and continues to improve. Stock of all kinds has been plentiful of late, but demand has been so good for local and shipping trade that the commission-men have cleaned up every day. The bankers' convention last week was responsible for a great deal of extra work requiring fancy stock. Society work among the uptown florists is beginning to come in more steadily, and from now on plenty of this kind of work will be done for weddings, receptions and dinners.

Chrysanthemums have greatly improved in size and quality, the demand being good. Fancy yellow and white sell well; few pink are in. The market for small roses is somewhat affected by them, but not so with fancy Beauties. These seem in good demand.

Carnations still are scarce, hardly enough coming in at any of the commission houses to supply the local demand, with more Enchantress than any other. Lily of the valley has a big demand.

Violets are much better in color and sell well.

From the above stock the local trade draw daily supplies at fairly good prices for this time of the year.

Various Notes.

The officers of the St. Louis Florists' Club held a special meeting on Monday night in the parlors of the Hotel Rozier and discussed plans for an interesting meeting of the club next month, when a chrysanthemum show will be held. Talk drifted to a big show for next fall. This matter will be brought before the next meeting of the club. Those present were President Irish, Vice-President Cannon, Secretary Beneke, Treasurer A. J. Bentzen, and the trustees, Carl Beyer, Frank D. Weber and W. C. Smith.

Henry Ostertag was at Chicago last week. He had the family order for the Tony Faust funeral, which runs into big figures. This funeral will take place October 27.

Mrs. M. M. Ayers had a busy week furnishing cut flowers for the bankers' convention, American Beauties being the principal flowers used.

Miss Badaracco furnished a violet wedding last week, which was something out of the ordinary, the shower bouquet being made of double violets.

W. J. Pilcher has started to build a range of houses on his new place at Kirkwood, and by next spring will again be a full-fledged florist. He will grow stock for this market.

Adolph Brix has leased the Klockenkemper place on Mead avenue, and it is said he will have Henry Braun as his grower. Mr. Klockenkemper will retire for the time being. Mr. Brix has a retail store at Fifteenth street and St. Louis avenue.

The Beyers had the plant decoration for the bankers' convention last week, which kept the boys on the jump.

Fred H. Weber made a fine decoration of chrysanthemums at the Jefferson hotel last Saturday, in honor of the departing bankers.

A. Jablonsky has been doing jury duty. Frank Fillmore is on this week. It is a bad time of the year for florists to do jury work.

Miss Armstrong, daughter of Luther Armstrong, who has been sick for some time, has recovered. She will soon be back to her place with Miss Newman, on Olive street.

Martin Reukauf, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., is in town this week on his way east from the coast.

Adolph Fehr, of Belleville, was a caller last week. Mr. Fehr reports business good so far this season.

All of the local banks have been handsomely decorated with plants and cut flowers, mostly Beauties, the occasion being the bankers' convention.

Conrad Bergesterman, at Grandow and Arsenal streets, has a fine show of plants and fancy cut stock in his big showhouse. Business is good.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.

At a meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association held at the Dome building during the state fair, plans were formulated to cooperate with Robert O'Dwyer, superintendent of floriculture, to make a fine exhibit at the next fair. The display of plants and cut flowers in this department of the fair this year was the finest in its history, as growers from the principal cities and towns of the state were represented. The interest of the growers of flowers throughout the state has been greatly aroused during the two years' administration of Mr. O'Dwyer as superintendent of the department, and it is the intention to make this display one of the features of the exposition next year, provided the necessary appropriation can be obtained.

Much of the success of the display was due to the efforts of J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, president of the association, and Albert T. Hey, of this city.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

A stretch of fine fall weather has been our lot during the last week, but it did not tend to do business any good. Trade started out first-class, and the early days of the week were all that could be desired, but on Thursday and Friday business went to pieces, and the price on almost everything with the exception of carnations was cut in half. This tended to make stock move a little, and I don't believe much found its way into the ash-barrel, but still it brought down the general average. On Saturday and Sunday there was a general shortening in all lines, and prices jumped back to what they ought to be. There are many orders booked for the coming week and it looks as if it would be a good one.

Mums now are being cut by the local growers, and it will not be long till there will be enough on the market to fill all orders. Last Saturday there were great numbers of them to be seen in the Jabez Elliott flower market, and they sold out at good prices. In the wholesale market the earlier varieties are about used up, and the mid-season and better varieties making their appearance. They are receiving good welcome this year and selling well. It looks as if the mums are going to average a better price than last year. Of course it is a little too early to know definitely as to the above; but judging from the way the mums are looking in the greenhouses, and the way they will come in, it would appear that there will be but just about enough to fill all orders for them. With this state of affairs all through the season, it will undoubtedly be a good one. The quality of roses is good now. Beauties are doing first-class. Other red roses are more plentiful and sell well. Carnations are still in the same way, that is, scarce; and, what is worse, there is little hope that there will be enough of them to go around until after the holidays. Violets sell well, but are scarce. Good smilax is also in demand.

Club Meeting.

The regular monthly meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held last Saturday evening, with quite a good attendance. The principal topic for discussion was whether it would be advisable to continue our flower shows on the same lines as they have been run in the past. It has been our custom in the past to give three shows a year, holding them in our club room. These shows always have been successful, but it was a question whether the people who were attracted to them were really the people we wanted to reach in order to do the most good to the business at large, owing to the location of our club room. For the above reasons it was decided to discontinue our shows, but it is not our intention to do away with them altogether. For the present, though, matters will be allowed to rest until a definite plan can be settled upon. It is our intention to give our shows hereafter in such a locality that the best class of flower buyers will be attracted to them. In this way we hope to educate them in what is the best, in both flowers and plants. At the next meeting of the society, the members are expected to come prepared to give their opinion of what they consider to be the best method for holding the shows in the future. In this way we hope to obtain the general views on the subject. The one which is the most practicable will be selected. The society will not hold a mum show this year.

Various Notes.

Louis, the four-year-old son of Otto Walke, one of our Vine street florists, died last week of diphtheria.

A retail game and fish store, located on Sixth street, had an opening last week, and among the floral offerings were a few that were surely novelties. Among the collection were to be seen a lobster, a turkey, a frog, a turtle and a fish, all made of fresh flowers. The various likenesses were easily recognizable, and it goes to show that our florists will make you any old thing, from a threshing machine down to a house and lot, and nothing in the visible world is barred from reproduction. But it would seem that flowers were not made for such things.

There were three mums sent to this city to be judged by the Chrysanthemum Society's committee. Two of them were from the E. G. Hill Co. The first, called Fusee, was a lemon yellow of large size with good stem and foliage. The second was called Director Gerard and was of a golden yellow color. It was a globular-formed flower, with petals hanging down underneath. It was built somewhat after the order of Pride. The other was exhibited by Nathan Smith, & Son. It was called Comoleta, and was of a good yellow color. Its build and habit was very much after the manner of Bergmann.

Julius Baer and Chas. Jones went to Chicago, October 22. They intend looking over the wholesale market there, and it is expected that they will place large orders.

E. G. Hill was a visitor Saturday.

C. J. OHMER.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Saturday and Sunday the fall of rain was continuous; the speed of the wind as fast as that of the autos in the great race of the week before. The flood of chrysanthemums without this other was quite sufficient to unsettle the market and undermine it. All last week it declined gradually, as the tide of mums rolled in, until on Saturday the inevitable result was consummated and the bottom fell out.

It is interesting to look at the record of other years and draw comfort from this condition of things, for it is simply a repetition of the old, old story. Every year at this time the price of mums ranges from $2 to $25 per hundred. The top price will buy about the best now coming and grand stock was sold Monday in white and pink at $1 a dozen. Eugene Dailedouze was exhibiting some President Loubet on Saturday at the New York Cut Flower Co., sent by the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., that he declared were worth $1 each and they were as large as pumpkins. They certainly were beautiful and stood the long journey in fine condition.

Violets are doing better. Really good ones touched 75 cents per hundred at times last week. They begin to show their real character. The second crop must have started. George Schuneman, of Baldwin's, who was in town Saturday, says it will be November 15 before he begins shipping his prize flowers. Long Island is a warm climate compared with Rhinebeck, but, though a little late, he "gets there just the same." It's a yearly lesson in shipping violets, that one might think should wake up these early demoralizers and stop the practice hereafter. There's no use sending violets to the New York market before the middle of October, so say the experts, the wholesalers and the buying public. Far better to wait until prices are stable and remunerative.

All the roses have turned their steps backwards. I saw boxes of them as they ran closed out at less than $1 a hundred on straight slips, firsts, seconds and fancies and some specials, and the whole box of 2,000 for $20. Fifteen cents each was the general rate for long Beauties. Saturday a few, a very few, sold at 20 cents. Monday it looked as if $4 per hundred would be top for Brides and Maids for some time, certainly while the mums last. When they are gone, welcome as they may be to the public, the real cause for thanksgiving to the wholesale florist and the grower will have arrived, and that should be just about Thanksgiving day.

Orchids are abundant and slightly off in price, but not in beauty and variety. It's wonderful where they all come from and go. The fact is they are the fashionable corsage of the Four Hundred and even the Four Thousand refuse to be married without their bride's bouquet of orchids to tell about to their less fortunate sisters.

The carnations hold up well considering the drop in roses, but they, too, have to retreat a little in sympathy with all else, while daily they improve in quality. Soon all the new varieties that were prize-winners a year ago will be on sale, F. R. Pierson's Winsor among them.

Lilies are not abundant and hold firm at $10 to $12 per hundred for selected flowers. Valley, too, at times touches $4 for the "superb brand." Will Siebrecht, of Astoria, who has valley 365 days every year, was in the city Saturday with his attorney son, the prospective bridegroom of December. He is still busy building and adjusting since the city shortened his original plant and added to the boulevard on which he lives.

Smilax is abundant and the wild variety is coming daily from the south in lots of 100 cases. The fern and galax departments of the business show increased activity and especially are the box and retinospora importers overwhelmed. It is wonderful how the hotels and private homes of New York have adopted the delightful habit of winter decoration. These, with palms and bay trees, have had an enormous sale and a good many of the purchases are made on West Twenty-ninth street, where hundreds of cases have arrived and still more to follow.

Various Notes.

The club meeting November 12 will be made the most interesting of the year. The ladies and the mums together will make it a display evening worth coming 100 miles to see. Then, too, Mr. Nugent will exceed all previous gastronomic surprises as a finale before being told to "go up higher," and music and song and eloquence, and perchance the bagpipes, will add to the general celebration.

On Friday last William White, the oldest florist in this section, died at the Methodist home in Brooklyn at the ripe age of 93 years. Mr. White came to this country in 1837. His last private estate was that of Chas. Dana, at Glen Cove. He was afterwards in business for himself at Bating Hollow, Riverhead, L. I. He had charge of and laid out Ft. Greene park, Brooklyn, and also assisted in the laying out of Prospect park. At one time, some fifteen years ago, he had a retail store at 924 Fulton street. He was the father-in-law of Wm. Burgess, of Glen Cove, who introduced the Marechal Niel rose in this country, and the grandfather of Mrs. Geo. W. Crawbuck, of the firm of Hicks & Crawbuck, Brooklyn.

The Cut Flower Exchange, on the third floor of the Coogan building, has the ten commandments framed and hung up at the outer portal so that all who come may read. Some of them are more restrictive than the ones Moses wrote, but all are reasonable and if insisted on will make the Exchange, with its 200 members, a quiet and orderly place, no matter how many crowd it in the early morning.

Phil Breitmeyer, of Detroit, accompanied by one of the city fathers there, spent several days in New York last week and a red glow pervades the place ever since. Boddington and one of the Lenox shining lights, Traendly, Bunyard, and these two nabobs of the west, celebrated things prospective at a banquet October 18 that must have been a stunner.

W. Gwillin, of the Hubert Bulb Co., Portsmouth, Va., and A. E. Covell, Hampton Meadows, R. I., were in the city on Wednesday.

Mr. Rose, formerly judge in the city courts at Montclair, N. J., was reported on Saturday very ill with pneumonia.

Mr. Bonnot, of Bonnot & Blake, Brooklyn, was ill last week with rheumatism and unable to leave his room. He was improving on Saturday. This firm has just added a fine horse and wagon to its other conveniences. Mr. Blake, Sr., of Rochester, was in Brooklyn last week visiting his son.

Mrs. Geller, wife of Sigmund Geller, of the Geller Supply Co., presented her husband on Thursday last with a handsome girl baby.

The auction sales continue at Elliott's every Tuesday and Friday. It seems harder than usual to awaken interest this fall. The firm lost a truck at their stables on Fourth street by a fire, but managed to save the horses. The big tunnel of the Delaware & Hudson is undermining so widely on Fulton and Cortlandt streets that the buildings on either side have had to be braced and the cellars occupied by the company. Mr. Elliott, with an eye to business, secured a fee for the use of his underground holdings which makes the rent for a time look easy. Peter Henderson's basement also is occupied.

The park board has received bids for a large greenhouse to be erected at One Hundred and Fifth street and Central park, adjoining the present range. It will consist of a main building with five wings, and the cost will be over $30,000.

Business has been brisk at the Cut Flower Exchange in the Coogan building of late. Six o'clock every morning finds the big room crowded, and the rush for flowers has enabled the growers to go home early with bulging pockets. The old standbys, Will Siebrecht, Frank Milang, Bonnet Bros. and Mr. Smith, are on deck here from six to six all the year round.

Perkins & Schuman, on the ground floor of the Coogan building, have their ice-box completed and are building an elevated office 7x23 which will add much to their facilities. It is a fine stand and ought to pay well. The only other wholesale store in the building, on the street elevation, is that of B. S. Slinn, Jr., the violet distributor.

E. C. Matthews, Woodside, L. I., is critically ill, the result of four operations for an affection of the throat.

Perkins & Schuman's removal from Twenty-eighth street enables George Cotsonas & Co. to utilize their whole store, and the room was greatly needed. Broker Hart maintains his office with the firm. In addition to this store, Mr. Cotsonas has a large extra cellar for storage purposes.

It is rumored that the Cut Flower Co. and Ernst Asmus & Son will each shortly contribute an addition to the ranks of the benedicts.

Myer, on Madison avenue, has completed the refurnishing and painting of his handsome store and is making beautiful window displays, changing them daily, a feature that has proved very attractive. One day 100 sprays of oncidiums alone were used, and the effect can be imagined. On October 25, at the Arion Club, Mr. Myer had charge of the Eberhardt wedding, at which a unique canopy effect was produced, asparagus with white roses and white mums being used in the decoration.

Ralph Armstrong is back from Newport and with Wadley & Smythe.

Hicks & Crawbuck, Brooklyn, report last Saturday the largest day's business, outside of holidays, which they ever have experienced. Their supply department is now complete and extensive.

Donohoe had charge of the decorations at the Schroeder-Burley wedding in the Collegiate church and many declare it was the most elaborate ever seen there. Palms, ferns, autumn leaves and yellow chrysanthemums produced this effect. The bride's bouquet was a unique shower of valley and white orchids and that of the matron of honor orchids and maidenhair. Geo. M. Geraghty superintended the work.

Young & Nugent decorated for the Lord wedding at Ogdensburg, N. Y., and the Haney wedding at the Church of the Incarnation, New York City. Crotons, autumn leaves, palms, and yellow mums were the decorations. The window in the firm's store on West Twenty-eighth street is always a demonstration of Mr. Nugent's well-known artistic ability.

Perkins & Schumann's new store is complete, including a cozy office, and no better stand could be desired. It develops since they settled there that half a dozen other wholesalers agreed as to its value, but the "pioneer" was wide awake and landed it.

N. LeCakes & Co. are handling large quantities of cut flowers and Boston ferns under the management of John J. Foley, in addition to their regular green goods department. Smilax, both kinds, is a specialty here. West Twenty-sixth street is rapidly becoming a popular wholesale street.

John Seligman & Co. are directly opposite the door of the Coogan building. Their big store now has all the modern conveniences. Everybody in this section opens up at 6 o'clock in the morning. J. AUSTIN SHAW.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The increase in production of the early varieties of chrysanthemums has been marked this week. White, represented by Polly Rose, has suffered more than the other colors. Despite the good demand for weddings and other occasions requiring white flowers, there have been too many Polly Rose. Nevertheless, they have sold better than during the same period for the last several years. The buying public has remained fairly constant to the other varieties quoted last week, but prices are perceptibly lower. The newer varieties, notably Mlle. Liger, which has the honor of realizing the highest price so far obtained, $5 a dozen; Robert Halliday, Mrs. Whilldin, Harry Parr, Nymph of Gold, resembling October sunshine, all yellows; Touset, a white shading pink, resembling white Chadwick, and a few others, are bringing the best prices.

Beauties have fallen a trifle in price, owing to the arrival of a number of long-stemmed shipments from carried-over plants. Brides and Maids are hardly up to form for the season, owing to the warm weather, but the best flowers sell readily. Richmond in medium grades is preferred to Liberty. Kaiserin is fine and Golden Gate now can be had in moderate quantities. Carnations continue scarce, prices ruling high. It is believed that shipments will steadily increase. Cosmos is fine and in good demand. Autumn foliage is plentiful and popular. Valley never has had a better run than during the present month. Orchids, while fairly plentiful, are not in especial demand. Bouvardia and pansies have made their appearance in limited quantity. Snapdragon, with fairly long stems, is coming in from several growers, and sells pretty well. Greens do not appear to be in brisk demand.

A Retailers' View.

A Philadelphia retailer, in discussing the present tendency towards centralizing the product of the greenhouses near this city in the wholesale commission houses, said that he preferred buying from the wholesalers, because, when they were unable to fill his orders from their own stock, they always took the trouble to secure the flowers elsewhere. The grower, on the contrary, simply declined the order, often making it difficult to secure the flowers in time. He thinks, however, that there is some danger should the stock get into too few hands, but believes that the wholesalers are too far-seeing to advance prices unnecessarily.

A Grower of Pot Plants.

I never have visited Godfrey Aschmann's place at 1012 Ontario street without feeling that here is a man who has made the very best use of his opportunities. I know of many growers who have had the same chances that Mr. Aschmann has had, who have failed to grasp them. Taken as a whole, the place shows signs of progress. The stock is clean and healthy, and bears evidence that the proprietor knows what he is about. The bulk of the stock at present ready for market consists of araucarias, about three-fourths excelsior, and the remaining fourth divided between glauca and compacta; ferns, of the Boston type, the Barrowsii being especially well grown; azaleas, Simon Mardner, Deutsche Perle, and Vervæneana, all nicely budded; with a sufficient number of side lines to make a good assortment. Great preparations are being made for the later crops, Easter being a special feature. Mr. Aschmann was at the custom house paying the duty on some azaleas, but his son kindly made time to show his visitors through the houses.

Gwynedd.

When Thos. Minges was superintendent of Horticultural hall in Fairmount park, a small one among his many large duties consisted in teaching Phil the art of scrubbing a lemon tree, and kindred rudimentary horticultural feats. It may be that his success in this matter was indifferent, but he succeeded in instilling into his pupil a love for things growing that has lasted ever since. About once a year the former master and pupil make an excursion together to some place of interest. This season they wanted to see John Savage, at one time a Fairmount-Parker. Mr. Minges said that it would hardly be possible to visit both Mr. Savage and Phil in one afternoon, so a schedule was carefully arranged, which began at Lansdowne at 12:07 p. m. and ended at the same place at five minutes after six. So, on the afternoon selected, Mr. Minges arrived at Phil's modest establishment, praised some things, looked sternly at others, but on the whole expressed himself approvingly and left exactly on schedule time for Gwynedd. There the pair were met by Mr. Savage, who propounded the question, "Will you walk to my place up the railroad track and over a narrow trestle on a 90-foot bridge?" Phil demurred. The possibility of disputing the possession of the narrow trestle ninety feet high with an oncoming locomotive was not pleasant, for the REVIEW copy had to be furnished, and editors do not like excuses; so a wagon was chartered, with a wonderful pair of ell-shaped seats, requiring considerable activity on the parts of Messrs. Minges and Savage to reach their places in safety. Phil climbed into the front seat, which was easy. The drive over excellent country roads was much enjoyed. Jehu put the question of whether he should drive his passengers one or both ways in such a thoroughly businesslike way that the latter offer was promptly accepted.

John Savage has the Foulds house and greenhouses, with a goodly acreage of fertile soil around them. He grows 5,000 or 6,000 Brides and Maids, a nice lot of chrysanthemums, Mrs. Jerome Jones, both white and yellow, the former being the stronger; snapdragon, white, yellow, pale pink and a dull pink, with unmistakable magenta in it, which is, however, said to light up well at night; Asparagus plumosus, and Asparagus Sprengeri. He is one of the recent additions to the consigners' list of the new S. S. Pen-nock-Meehan Co. The time spent with Mr. Savage seemed all too short, and after looking over the houses, which are just coming into crop, the visitors galloped swiftly away on schedule time.

Various Notes.

Walter P. Stokes, one of the largest forceers of lily of the valley for this market, says that despite his bringing additional pips into heat, in anticipation of the heavy demand for the October weddings, he was entirely unable to fill his orders.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Flower Market has paid its stockholders $7.50 a share, or fifty per cent of the amount paid in. The balance will be returned to the stockholders when the affairs of the Real Estate Trust Co. are settled.

The Market.

Business has continued extremely good during the past week, and all stock coming in has been quickly sold. Chrysanthemums are now seen in goodly numbers and are leading features in retailers' windows. Some Polly Rose and Glory of Pacific still arrive, but these two popular earlies are about over and their places are being filled by such sorts as October Sunshine, Robert Halliday, Ivory, Monrovia, Mrs. Coombes, and its white sport, etc. Prices vary from $6 to $20 per hundred, a few selected bringing $3 per dozen. Carnations continue to clear out quickly at from $1.50 to $3 per hundred. Lawson, Queen, Enchantress and Fair Maid continue as prime favorites here.

Roses have held up well so far, but another week will probably see a slump in values, due to the flood of chrysanthemums. Beauties are selling at $4 to $5 per dozen for best. Brides and Maids vary from $1 to $8 per hundred. Excellent blooms of Wellesley, Killarney, Richmond and Chatenay are seen. The finest realize $1.50 per dozen.

Violets come of a better color, and improve in size. Average remains 50 cents per hundred for both single and double. Lily of the valley is somewhat higher at from $3 to $5 per hundred. Easter lilies are somewhat scarce. A good many tuberose are still seen at 75 cents to $1 per dozen stalks. Some cosmos and a few dahlias from shore resorts so far immune from frost still arrive. Cattleya labiata is abundant and seems to sell better than usual. Quite a number of Oncidium Rogersii, Vanda cærulea, Dendrobium Phalæopsis, and cypripediums are also seen.

Greenhouse Construction Discussion.

There was an interesting discussion on J. B. Velie's paper, reported in full in last week's REVIEW, at the club meeting October 16. James Wheeler stated that he had recently seen some excellent samples of the King Construction Co. building at J. H. Dunlop's and elsewhere. He asked the lecturer's opinion of this class of houses. Mr. Velie replied that the advantage gained in doing away with posts was counterbalanced by the fact that the weakening of any part may cause the whole structure to collapse. This applies to the truss houses of all builders.

Daniel Iliffe inquired as to the most advantageous method of piping a place with 15,000 feet of glass. The lecturer said in reply that he would recommend 2-inch pipe for such a commercial place, and 3½-inch pipe for a private place, except where a night fireman is kept, in which case steam is the best method of heating.

M. A. Pattern asked whether iron or wooden structures require more heating. He had found a perceptible difference in his iron houses, which are cooler. Mr. Velie had found little if any difference. Mr. Patten stated that his glass breakages are fifty per cent less in iron houses. Asked as to the durability of iron footpieces and cypress posts, the answer was that cypress will last fifteen years, cast-iron is practically indestructible, wrought-iron, if unprotected, will rot out as quickly as wood.

Kenneth Finlayson asked when houses went beyond reason in width. The lecturer considered forty feet the extreme economical width. He was aware there are a good many larger and wider houses, but nothing is saved in per square foot of cost. As to the limits in height for economy, no house with the ordinary pitch of roof will be too high. Lofty houses are not hard to heat, rather the reverse. Alexander Montgomery stated that he considered high houses easier to heat and more uniform in temperature. He instanced a house of Beauty roses, 40x700, in which he placed five thermometers at equal distances. All recorded 59 degrees on a night when outside temperature was 20 degrees below zero. He also proved that it is a fallacy to suppose that the upper part of the house is hotter than the lower. On this particular severe night the thermometers, being five feet from the ridge, showed a reading of 58 degrees.

In regard to length, Mr. Montgomery well put the case when he said it depends on the length of one's field, in which the lecturer coincided. As to houses without gutters being better than those containing them, a diversity of opinion exists. The absence of gutters takes away some shade, but the gutters protect the masonry walls, although, of course, they catch some snow.

In reply to Mr. Iliffe the speaker said that solid concrete walls are not so good as those with air spaces. In the case of brick, however, unless the wall is solid it will speedily disintegrate. Asked if the iron furnished today is equal to that of twenty years ago, Mr.

Velie said decidedly it is not. Little wrought-iron is now on the market, and it is necessary either to galvanize the iron before using it, or use steel. Mr. Iliffe said galvanizing burns away forty-five per cent of the iron.

Questioned as to the comparative advantages of the curvilinear over the straight roof, he has found no difference, although it might have been expected that some advantage would lay with the former. In regard to ventilation, continuous on both sides is best; alternating sashes will cause draughts. Mr. Montgomery said in low houses ventilators should always lift from the ridge; dead air pockets cause mildew on roses. He would, in the future, set his glass the wide way. There is no more breakage than when the glass is set the narrow way, and there is a great gain in light. The only trouble he had found is that when the panes break they fall in. To prevent this, he uses zinc straps to hold them.

Various Notes.

The following is the report of the nominating committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for the annual election of officers on November 17 next: President, Stephen M. Weld, of Dedham; vice-president for two years, Charles S. Sargent, of Brookline; trustees for three years, W. N. Craig, of North Easton; A. F. Estabrook, J. K. M. L. Farquhar and Arthur D. Hills, of Boston. Nominating committee for 1907, A. F. Estabrook, Boston; W. H. Heustis, Belmont; Wm. Nicholson, Framingham; Loring Underwood, Belmont, and E. B. Wilder, Boston. The nominating committee for 1906 are James H. Bowditch, Robert Cameron, F. O. Hatfield, C. W. Parker and W. H. Spooner.

Entries are coming in satisfactorily for the chrysanthemum show on November 2 to 4, and an excellent display is assured. Music will be furnished each day by the Brookline band. The decorated dinner-tables must be ready for the lady judges by noon on November 3. This latter class promises to be one of the star features of the show.

Recent frosts were followed by abnormally mild weather. Samuel H. Warren, of Weston, daily picks a good many quarts of his Pan-American or ever-bearing strawberry, of excellent quality for the season. Strawberries and chrysanthemums are not usually in season together.

H. M. Robinson & Co. hope to do a large cut flower commission trade at 15 Province street at an early date.

Thomas Roland's new automobile for carrying plants is the first one built expressly for this purpose for the Boston trade. It will prove of great value to Mr. Roland in his increasing business. At present he is cutting fine Ivory and Ardel chrysanthemums. The latter is a pretty, silvery pink, incurved variety.

Thomas Pegler, of Wollaston, has a grand lot of double violets, as usual, which sell well. Mr. Pegler, formerly salesman for Oscar L. Dorr, of East Foxboro, has now discontinued violet growing, devoting the whole of his extensive houses to vegetables.

Peter Fisher's new scarlet carnation, Beacon, is showing up finely and prometies of roses are grown, also carnations, among which were seen some fine new seedlings of his own. His mums are coming along nicely. the whole works, and a better kept place would be hard to find.

James Carey, to hear him tell it, had nothing but poor stock; but who ever heard him boast? His stock looks good. He is growing several benches of fine Killarney, also some fine Richmond, besides Brides, Maids, La Detroit, of which he speaks highly, and some Meteor. In carnations, he grows Lawson, both light and Rose-pink Enchantress, Lady Bountiful and some old varieties.

Last but not the least place visited was that of James Taylor. Mr. Taylor's stock, consisting of chrysanthemums and carnations, looked good, but since our visit it has received a severe setback from frost. Some changes in the shed and the cross-house necessitated tearing out the ends of most of the houses, and, with no way of heating, as the system is being changed from steam to the Holly-Castle hot water under forced circulation, frost had things pretty much its own way.

At present little stock is being cut in

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

The business last week was good for the season. This week opens rather quiet, and it is probable that condition will prevail till after the elections.

The politicians and statesmen of the "Dreadnaught" type are vitally interested in the November balloting, and no social functions of importance, calling for decorations, can be expected until the Hearst nightmare is dispelled or established as a living, moving force, and white-winged peace again hovers o'er the "deestriect."

With the growers the weather could not be worse for stock: rainy, foggy, mushy, too cool and damp to do without fire heat, and the houses soon running up hot with it. Black-spot is appearing in roses; and, if clearing weather does not soon come, serious trouble may be expected.

Fair white chrysanthemums are on the market in considerable quantities; the yellows, excepting a few lots, are not yet showing good form. Carnations are now very scarce and prices are stiff. A leading retailer informs me that he is now paying $4 per hundred for fancy, or what is rated as fancy. Conditions seem favorable for a jump in carnation prices when the chrysanthemums are out of the way.

Various Notes.

Patrick O'Mara issued his pamphlet all too soon for, joyously skipping the wires, comes the report that Luther Burbank has "educated" an apple to be sweet on one side and sour on t'other. What does the genial Pat think of that? Seriously, Mr. O'Mara seems to have gone straight to the heart of the question, and has doubtless confirmed the beliefs of a large majority of the practical men who have read his pamphlet.

John Hays Hammond, millionaire, mining engineer, and noted for his adventures during the stirring times of Cecil Rhodes and "Oom" Paul Kruger, in South Africa, has purchased a tract of land in this city and will, it is said, erect a palatial home. It is understood that the landscape features will comport with the elegance of the mansion.

The A. B. Davis & Son corporation is sending in good carnation stock from its Purcellville, Va., range and it is said that the prospects for the season are excellent.

The greenhouses of the Boys' Industrial Home are showing good stocks of chrysanthemums and carnations. This is a District of Columbia institution, the boys doing most of the work. The product is sold in the open market.

THE REVIEW is the florists' best paper.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 26th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

THE double varieties of sweet peas are said to be scarce.

GREEN-PODDED beans are the one item that is perplexing the Michigan growers.

It is reported that Mrs. Frank T. Emerson recently has fallen heir to a fortune of "$100,000 or better."

WHEN the new Food and Drugs Act goes into effect, January 1, seedsmen might as well forget the addresses of the spice-grinders.

ONION seed continues to agitate the minds of the larger handlers. Some of them have stocks in sight and in store but the question of values is still an open one.

AT Chicago, October 23, Timothy was firm, cash seed, $3 to $3.85; October $4.05 bid, December $4.15, March $4.25. Clover was $13 for October, $8 to $12.85 for poor to choice.

A FEW bushels of the Chicago onion set crop were burned last week. This calls to mind the Leonard fire of 1899, when S. F. Leonard lost 40,000 bushels of the article and still had some to sell.

THE early varieties of foreign grown radish seed, especially the French product, are being cut further with each succeeding report. Five per cent less than the stock seed is reported from one source.

It is notable how close the different bean and pea growers come to the actual conditions of the present year's harvest. They each know how things are, but they are willing to hear the views of the others.

FALL shipments of onion sets will soon end. The product that is to be carried until January and early spring shipment is pretty well stored for winter and set operations will cease for the time being.

BETTER prices have been realized for onion sets this fall than for some years. This fact is likely to have considerable influence upon the demand for set seed. The smaller grower always increases his plantings the spring following a good market in the fall.

VISITED CHICAGO:—Frank T. Emerson and wife, Fremont, Neb., enroute to Corpus Christi, Tex.; F. J. Ries, of the Bromfield-Colvin-Ries Co., Bay City, Mich.; R. R. Ricketts, of the Springfield Seed Co., Springfield, Mo.; N. J. Burt, Burlington, Ia., accompanied by his brother; F. H. Morrison, Fairfield, Wash.

Is it the seed or is it the soil and climatic conditions that puts quality into the muskmelon? This is an important question in view of the prominence that a certain favored melon-growing center is seeking for its seed. Good peaches are grown in Colorado, but Delaware thinks it grows better ones. On the other hand, Delaware grows fine melons, but Colorado also may lay claim to excellence of its melon product. The Crawford peach is a Crawford, however, in either place. Cannot the same be said of the Gem, either salmon or green?

THE time has passed when an up-to-date seed catalogue can be illustrated low's old woodcuts. The modern method requires wash drawings, either from the berger, Estherville, Ia., which in future will be conducted as Rosenberger & Lit-tell. The building they occupy will be remodeled and other lines added.

THINGS are still very unsettled in the seed trade in France and a disposition shown to wait for fuller information as to stocks, etc., before quoting or accepting prices. Expert opinion is that things will turn out distinctly better than was at one time feared, and though there may be a scarcity of certain articles, sufficient will turn up from one source or another to satisfy the demand. The radish seed crop is the one great disappointment.

HOLLAND REPORT.

Continued fine and unusually warm weather marked the month of September and growers in Holland have been able to push the planting of bulbs with all possible speed. By this time many millions of bulbs are in the ground, and no doubt as many will have to be planted still. Shipments of bulbs have now come to an end and soon preparations will be made for the lifting of the late ripening crops such as gladioli, spiraea and liliun. Although liliun have suffered, in many localities, much from the effects of the long dry spell, gladioli and spiraea crops are expected to turn out fairly good. Of Gladioli Colvillei the crop has now been lifted and in many sections stocks are so badly infected by disease that good, healthy bulbs are really scarce and command good prices. Too heavy manuring seems to play havoc with Gladioli Colvillei and is generally supposed to be the cause of the many diseased stocks.

applies to collard seed, which crop is much larger than usual and of better quality.

"The okra seed crop was severely injured about October 5 by a severe frost, which was of unprecedented occurrence with us at this time of the year. The plants contained a heavy crop of seed but all the later pods that were frostbitten will be worthless for seed. So we anticipate that this crop will be at least twenty-five per cent short of a normal yield.

"The egg-plant crop was damaged somewhat by the same frost, but farther south, where most of it is grown, the bulk of the crop already had been harvested, and the output seems to be a normal one.

"The crop of Pearl millet was unusually heavy but continued rains during harvest time sprouted a good deal of the seed, so after it is cleaned up the crop will only be about a normal one.

"The cow pea crop is large, notwithstanding the great scarcity of seed to plant last spring. But the continued rains have seriously damaged this crop, and on the weather for the next thirty days much depends as to what the final result will be. We are anticipating a fair crop, with high prices, owing to increased demand every year.

"The watermelon seed crop is short about twenty-five per cent of the normal yield. There was a large acreage planted but continued wet weather during cleaning time destroyed a great many of the seeds."

(the German method of growing these for seed), were grand; the blooms were enormous. There was a large quantity of frames, used for raising small plants. These frames now are filled with flower seeds in pod, in order to dry them for thrashing and cleaning. A greenhouse containing the indoor trials of tomatoes should prove a great attraction to anyone interested in these, since every variety is represented and their cropping and other qualities easily can be compared.

On some of the squares of ground many plants had been pulled so as to purify and improve the stock, only the most perfect being left, so that the strain is always kept up to a high standard of excellence, indeed being generally improved from year to year.

After noting the varied varieties of plants in this ground, two others were visited which also are chiefly devoted to flower seeds, including, however, on each now accompanied by an American grower, who with the usual acuteness of that nation, was on the lookout for the best, and to judge from his looks and remarks, he was evidently most interested in what he saw.

ticularly striking were the colored bedding violas, the beds of Comet asters in various colors, enormous stretches of new varieties of eschscholtzia introduced by the firm, stocks, ageratum, salpiglossis and French marigold. These latter were simply grand.

In the middle of the ground stands a big barn, which is used for cleaning and storing the flower seeds, these being placed on specially-made trays, which are piled from floor to roof in such a way as to allow a current of air to thoroughly dry them.

Numerous small stacks were dotted about, consisting of the various lots of peas that have just been harvested. These are grown and selected on much the same lines as the flowers. Any that show the slightest deviation from what that particular variety should be are taken out. Many of these stocks have been obtained from one plant, and, indeed, it is impossible to get a true stock of peas without starting right from the beginning and working up a stock from one plant only. This shows at what cost and trouble stocks of peas are raised. Mr. McKay deplored the ridiculously low prices at which peas are sold nowadays in foolish competition. It is the unfortunate tendency of some buyers in placing their orders to have regard to the cheapness of the seeds offered rather than the excellence of the stocks, and they probably do not realize the amount of work and care that is necessary to ensure the raising of the best seeds. If left to nature, peas would soon be bearing microscopical pods, cabbages and lettuces be merely tufts of a few coarse leaves, and carrots and parsnips small stringy roots. It is only by constant care and selection that the tendency of all plants to revert to their natural wild state is overcome.

It was too late to see the trials of culinary peas. There were trials of every pea in commerce, and also of new varieties just sent out. Each is carefully noted in the trial books as to its usefulness and trueness.

The runner beans were in full bloom, and the visitors were particularly struck with the new Painted Lady, which is called The Marvel. The pods on this were hanging literally in ropes, and not only this, but it is the earliest runner bean extant.

A large piece of Sutton's A1 bean was being carefully gone over and rogued. There also were large stretches of dwarf and longpod beans growing for stock, all dealt with in the same way.

There also were many fine lots of FRANKEN BROS., LAKE FOREST, ILL.

The lovely color of a patch of dark beet caught the eye. This had been selected from one root only, and next year there will be enough seed to grow several tons.

Mr. McKay said the firm reckoned their stock peas cost them at least $25 per bushel to produce, while beans, flower and vegetable seeds were in the same proportion. There are seventy-five beds of asters, fifty beds of antirrhinums, and other varieties in the same proportion. Altogether on the seven different grounds there were nearly 6,000 different lots of trials and different lots of seed being selected for stock.

After going carefully over this farm, a motor was boarded and the five miles to Twickenham quickly covered. At one time the firm used to have the whole of its grounds here, but owing to the rapid extension of the business they had to take the additional grounds at Feltham.

Here were found the flower seed trials. A sample of every parcel of seed that comes in is sent down here to be grown. Unfortunately it was too late to see the sweet peas in bloom, but there had been 350 trials, a splendid sight when in full bloom. The members of the National Sweet Pea Society paid a visit in July, and were greatly interested.

In conclusion, a slight account of Watkins & Simpson's warehouses in London may be of interest. Tavistock street was the first visited. Here one office is entirely devoted to the stock books, in which every item of seed in the place is noted, together with its pedigree, year of harvest, growth and trial reports. In the testing-room more than 10,000 samples are tried for germination every year. The results are verified by a French testing machine, heated by gas, in which the seeds are wrapped in paper, damped, and show in a very few days the percentage of germination.

The Exeter street warehouse is entirely devoted to flower seeds. Some of the little drawers (over 1,500 in number) contained choice seeds of primula, calceolaria, etc., to the value of $500 to $1,000. It is interesting to note that the firm disposes every year of fourteen tons of sweet peas, and mignonette, nasturtium, etc., in the same proportion.

One immense floor on Neal street was entirely devoted to Dutch bulbs, and will be until the end of October, when the seed season commences. Another enormous floor is devoted to peas and beans, and this is filled and emptied two or three times during the season.

Mounting higher, another floor is given over to small seeds, and contains tons of Brussels sprouts, cabbage, cauliflower, etc. All these seeds are kept from one year to the other so that they may be tested at the trial grounds before being sent out.

tunia hybrida grandiflora superbissima marmorata rosea is fine—I hope the name of this variety is long enough.

David Sachs, Quedlinburg.

My last visit was to the establishment of David Sachs. Here were noted Mignonette Victoria, red shade; Mignonette Bismarek, which has the broadest spike of any variety I have seen; Mignonette White Pearl Machet, a fine whitish form; Centaurea American Giant, good.

The several varieties of Antirrhinum nanum were all distinct, true to color and character. Beauty of Nice and Queen Alexandra stocks were both good. Dianthus barbatus nanus is a pretty and interesting thing, the result of a cross between barbatus and Chinensis; the plants are dwarf, varied in color, and also in shape of flower, some following one parent, some the other; it flowers the first year from seed.

Here was a strong stock of double hollyhocks, embracing every shade of color, while the flowers were of faultless form.

Linaria maroccana excelsior strain is a good addition to these pretty little annuals. I saw some large stocks of asters, in excellent condition, but only a few of the earliest were in flower. This grower cultivates some 800 acres of vegetable seeds, and 150 acres of flower seeds.

GLEN COVE, L. I.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its regular monthly meeting October 10. The attendance was unusually large. President Harrison occupied the chair. Six new members were elected to active membership and one nominated.

The room was a blaze of color with the monthly exhibit of flowers. H. F. Myers scored 93% points with carnations and fruits; J. F. Johnston, 86%, with vase of Countess of Lonsdale dahlias; F. Mense, 81%, for a bunch single violets; S. Trepass, 81%, for a case single dahlias; H. F. Myer was awarded the box of cigars for the best collection of outdoor flowers. The fountain pen prize, for the best collection of six varieties of outdoor flowers, was won by S. Trepass. Other members showing in this class were H. Matz and A. Janecke.

This was the last meeting before the society's annual show to be held October 31 and November 1, so that the chief business was the preparation for the show. Special prizes are coming in. Stumpp & Walter Co. give $10 for 100 single and 100 double violets; Rickards Bros., $10 for a table of foliage plants 3x12 feet, pots not to exceed six inches; society's prize, $15 for best collection of carnations; Mrs. Paul Dana gives books for best ten chrysanthemums, distinct varieties. NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE American Civic Association will hold its annual meeting at Milwaukee, Wis., the last week in October.

D. HILL, of the Dundee Nurseries, Dundee, Ill., will at once proceed to put up a new office building and large packing shed and a greenhouse for propagating purposes.

SADDLER BROS., Bloomington, Ill., own a patented stock food and have established a factory for its manufacture, which they will conduct in conjunction with their nursery business.

J. H. BROWN, of the Missoula Nursery Co., Missoula, Mont., is preparing exhibits for the horticultural section of the Western Montana fair, which is each year growing in importance.

THE Aurora Nursery Co., Aurora, Ill., has been successful with its plan for landscaping at the county courthouse of DeKalb county, Syeamore, Ill., and also has secured the contract to do the work.

C. D. MILLS, Jacksonville, Fla., planted fifty palmetto trees, each twenty feet high, at Pablo Beach, Ga., last May and all are thriving. He planted 131 at Pensacola and thirty-eight at Mobile, some of which were victims of the recent severe storm.

THE growing of nut bearing trees for profit is gaining ground and to southern nurserymen nut trees are an important item. The National Fruit Growers' Association, of which a nurseryman, E. W. Kirkpatrick, is president, holds its annual convention October 31 at Scranton, Miss.

THE Department of Agriculture has issued as Bulletin No. 264 "The Brown-tail Moth and How to Control It," by L. O. Howard. Dr. Howard says the thing to do is to secure the active and intelligent coöperation of property owners "thruout" the infested district. We read his account of the battle against the pest to where, in 1899, the early work "stopt," and there we stopped.

EVIDENTLY Mexican nurserymen have their own troubles, for we find the following as part of an advertisement in the Herald, published in the city of Mexico: "The Whitney nurseries at Maltrata have been established for nearly twenty years. The most expert horticulturists have been constantly employed during that time in perfecting the very best varieties of all kinds of American trees and shrubs to the Mexican climate. Complete stocks of thoroughly acclimated fruit trees are now always on hand. These goods are carefully packed and also reach the customer in a fraction of the time required from American nurseries, and the moment they are in the ground they are ready to go on growing under conditions with which they are already accustomed. Don't overlook the importance of these points and let us figure with you."

THE many nurserymen who had dealings with Rudolph Ulrich during his service as landscape gardener at the Chicago, Trans-Mississippi and Pan-American expositions will regret to hear of his death, which occurred at Fresno, Cal., October 15, where he engaged in creating new pods. He was 65 years of age.

NURSERYMEN'S COMMITTEES.

President Orlando Harrison, of the American Association of Nurserymen, has appointed his committees for an active year's work. The executive committee, Emery Albertson, chairman, is elected. The chairmen appointed are:

Transportation, W. C. Reed, Vincennes, Ind. Legislation, R. C. Breckmans, Augusta, Ga. Tariff, J. C. Hale, Winchester, Tenn. Inspection, R. C. Breckmans, Augusta. Program, Eugene Stark, Louisiana, Mo. Publicity, J. M. Irvine, St. Joseph, Mo. Ways and Means, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia. National Council of Horticulture, C. J. Maloy, Rochester, N. Y. Arrangements, C. A. Ilgenfritz, Monroe, Mich. Editing Report, J. H. McFarland, Harrisburg, Pa.

PERENNIALS.

I have noticed in your valuable paper an article on desirable hardy perennials, such as Physostegia Virginiana, Boltonia asteroides and B. latisquama, Cimicifuga racemosa, C. simplex and C. Japonica. I would like to have seeds of those named, but as none of these seeds is mentioned in any catalogue I have, I do not know where to buy. I would be pleased if you can tell me of any firm where I can obtain seeds and the price.

tonia latisquama at 15 cents to 25 cents per package at retail. We would advise, however, the procuring of some plants of each of the varieties named. They are all offered at low wholesale rates by dealers in hardy perennials, such as Dreer, of Philadelphia; Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, N. J., and others. Some European firms make a specialty of supplying seeds of hardy perennials. Prominent among these are Haage & Schmidt, Erfurt, Germany, and Thompson & Morgan, Ipswich, England. It might pay you to send for a copy of each of these lists. Both we know to be reliable firms. C. W.

ORIGIN OF NEW HYDRANGEA.

There is good authority for the statement that while the new form of Hydrangea arborescens may have been a native of Yellow Springs, O., the same form was discerned in a wild state near Pittsburg, Pa., by James Semple a few years ago. The same sport from our native H. arborescens was found by Dr. Stone in the Mississippi bluffs in Missouri about a dozen years ago. I believe there is no record of Dr. Stone's find ever having been introduced into cultivation.

All the stock that I know of now in cultivation, except that in the hands of Thos. A. McBeth, are descendants of plants brought from Pittsburg by Mrs. May Kelley, who came with her family from that city to central Ohio fifteen years ago. Mrs. Kelley was the wife of a railroad section hand, and if she could find plants of this in the gardens of Pittsburg fifteen years ago it must

I have been familiar with Hydrangea arborescens for about seventy years, though I have not studied it in the blooming season until the last year or two. NORMAL, ILL.

The Phoenix Nursery Co. is making extensive improvements on its grounds east of Normal. Last spring a local telephone system was installed on the grounds, connecting all packing sheds and barns with the main office. Since that time electricity has been put in all buildings on the packing grounds, the power being secured from Bloomington. But the most notable improvement is that of building three large greenhouses for stock for the downtown store. These greenhouses are 225 feet in length and the total amount of glass used in the three structures amounts to 30,000 square feet. The houses are up but not as yet completed, there being some carpenter work and steam-fitting to be finished. A boiler-house also is being erected, and when finished will accommodate ten carloads of coal. The storage cellar for bulbs and the like will have connection with the heating plant.

Later in the season the Phoenix company is to erect a concrete storage cellar, which will have a capacity of at least 150 carloads of nursery stock. The season's investment will be not far from $25,000.

The growing of nursery stock as an important industry in Normal, and the Phoenix is the largest of the firms engaged in the business, and is the largest business enterprise in Normal. They are now in the midst of the fall packing season and the value of the shipments of this fall will probably amount to between $60,000 and $70,000. This is a little in advance of the usual business done during the fall months. The spring season is the greatest, about $125,000 worth of stock being shipped annually. During these seasons of the year over 100 men are employed.

Current Comment.

G. E. Wilkerson has his new house in crop and is turning out some good carnations and roses. He opened a store on Government street last week.

The Fairview Greenhouses, owned by Mrs. M. A. Farrington, have changed hands. The consideration is said to be $14,000. The name of the purchaser is unknown. Mrs. Farrington has gone on a trip to California.

Carnations are scarce at present. A few early mums are making their appearance.

The flower show at the fall fair was good. Dahlias were remarkably well shown by several amateurs. It is doubtful if such flowers can be found elsewhere, this climate being peculiarly suitable to their culture.

Flewins' Gardens took a medal valued at $50 for a display of cut flowers. They exhibited a pyramid 14x14 covered with outdoor stock. The hardy mums and several species of helianthus and Michaelmas daisies being a feature. It was a tribute to Victoria's climate.

The flower show at the New Westminster fair was again poorly managed. The exhibitors had to work through inches of lumber and cornstalks. As soon as the flowers were staged the help gave the building a dry sweep, and deposited what appeared to be the dust of ages upon plants and flowers. Plants were staged on Monday, flowers on Tuesday, and both were judged on Wednesday. In the bitterness of spirit to which these proceedings reduced me, I offer no apologies for being guilty of the following:

Next time I go to Westminster,
By all the gods and powers,
I'll make designs of immortelles,
And Burbank's fadeless flowers.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues warm, and flowers are again in fair supply and good quality. Carnations and roses are gradually getting back to the normal quantity, and prices on all kinds of stock have an upward tendency.

The best fancy carnations cost the retailers 35 cents per dozen, and from this price down to 20 cents per dozen for the ordinary varieties. American Beauties cost the stores from $1.50 to $2 per dozen for the fancy quality, and about half that price for shorter stock. Brides and Maids net the growers about 50 cents per dozen for good stock, and smaller prices for shorter stuff. Chrysanthemums are very plentiful and cheap. The choicest Bonnaffons grown under glass sell wholesale at $2.50 per dozen. Outside stock can be had at from $1.50 to $2.50 per hundred. We have, as yet, no good yellow varieties outside. The Bonnaffons are rather late, and will not be plentiful for a week or so.

Valley is more plentiful than it has been, and sells well at $3 per hundred. All the Japanese lilies are gone, except a few L. auratum, and they cost the stores $2 per dozen. Cosmos is now at its best, and is being extensively used in decorating. Other kinds of outdoor stock, except sweet peas, are over for the season. Business for the past week has been fair, although not quite so brisk as that enjoyed several weeks ago. There is little doing in the line of decorative work or anything else, except funerals. A few weddings have taken place in town, but there is little stirring in that line.

I have seen no report from your Vancouver correspondent lately, so take it upon myself to send you an account of a few places I visited. gives them about 80,000 feet. Their pot plants are looking fine, but carnations show the ravages of stem-rot.

I also visited B. T. Roger's place, a private establishment. Mr. Swires, the gardener, is an old acquaintance, and we swapped lies for some time. He has a good looking house of carnations, and a small collection of orchids. The grounds were in their autumn garb, but gave evidence of glory departed. There are some fine examples of Cocos Weddelliana in the conservatory that are in the pink of condition. Considering that these spend half their days in the dwelling rooms, they are all the more worthy of commendation.

BEST VARIETIES AT SPOKANE.

E. P. Gilbert, the Spokane nurseryman, has given the Health and Beauty Club of that town the following list of recommended varieties:

"The following shade trees are valuable for this section: Carolina poplar, sugar maple, Norway maple, sycamore and silver-leaved maples, European sycamore, green ash, mountain ash, the linden or basswood.

"Among the apples the earliest of all is the Yellow Transparent. This is followed by the Duchess of Oldenberg and Red Astrakhan. Among the best of fall apples are: Wealthy, Gravenstein, Maiden's Blush, Jeffries and Rambo. The winter apples worthy of cultivation are many, the best sellers being Rome Beauty, Jonathan and Wagner. To this may be added the King, Spitzenburg, Northern Spy, Winesap, Newtown Pippin and Baldwin."

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The market was more active last week than at any time this fall. Chrysanthemums are in great demand. There seems to be more inquiry for them this year than there has been for the last five years. A good grade sells fast. Roses and carnations are not plentiful, and the demand is greater than the supply. Some of our wholesale houses are shipping in from Chicago to fill their orders. We believe, however, that by next week this will not be the case, as home-grown mums are now coming in more plentifully and in a few days there will be plenty for all.

The quality of violets is poor and few are to be had. Cosmos is used as cheap flowers and the supply is good. The heavy frost has killed all dahlias and outdoor flowers.

Various Notes.

R. S. Brown & Son are sending in some good pink roses. There is such a demand for them that he cannot fill his orders. They had a lot of funeral work last week, and business is fine with them.

Mr. Heite, of Merriam, Kan., which is about twelve miles from this city, is bringing in his fine chrysanthemums. He is one of the best mum growers near this city, and can prove it by the blue ribbons he has from the flower shows. He supplies the downtown stores and wholesales only. Mr. Heite grows one crop of mums, then two crops of lettuce, and then a crop of cucumbers, in one season. He is a hard worker and success seems to smile on him.

Jacob Tobler, of Westport, has just completed a large house and has it planted in carnations. He intends to build two more next season. Mr. Tobler is located in a good part of the city, and his trade is increasing every year. Mrs. Tobler has been quite ill, but is much better now.

Mr. Barnes has been quite busy the past week, having had one of the largest weddings of the season. This makes the second wedding in the same family that Mr. Barnes has decorated for, and no doubt he is looking forward for the next, as there are several more girls.

Edward Humfeld has brought in from the country his black trotting horse. He has it hitched to his new wagon, and it makes a fine turnout. His health is much improved in the last two months.

Last Winter a local grower visited our place for the purpose of buying a stock of some good crimson carnation. We showed him a good bed of Harlowarden and took his order for a quantity. A few minutes later we showed him whereupon he decided that he did not want Harlowarden, but would wait a year and get Pocahontas. Now that's the kind of argument that talks. You would do the same as he did, that's why we want you to come and see it growing. Will promise to show it to you just as it grows. No dressing-up for company every morning; Pocahontas does not need it.

POCAHONTAS

When Writing Advertisers

As a matter of course you are looking for the best and the most profitable Pink Carnation. What shall it be? Our answer is, invest in the

Rose Pink Enchantress

TO still further satisfy you that we make no groundless claims we call upon the hundred and odd growers in various sections of the country, among whom we disseminated during the past season about 50,000 rooted cuttings (all we had) to bear witness to our assertion, namely; that our ROSE PINK ENCHANTRESS is the best and the finest sport of them all. And so, "lest you forget" we say again; don't hesitate, don't doubt, don't delay mailing your order. The ROSE PINK ENCHANTRESS is an ideal variety, viewed from whatever standpoint. Price for strong rooted cuttings, January and later delivery, $7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

A letter from J. BREITMEYER & SONS. "We are pleased to inform you that the stock of Rose Pink Enchantress furnished by you last spring was of a high character; the plants are producing blooms superior to its parent (Enchantress) from which it sported. We believe it to be far superior, its shade of pink is a color long sought after. We are sure it is one of the best acquisitions in Carnations we have had in a long time. Wishing you success.

Yours Truly, J. BREITMEYER & SONS.

Our Rose Pink Enchantress are simply grand and we shall not sell any cuttings from it, but reserve for ourselves. GEO. E. BUXTON, Nashua, N. H.

MABELLE

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. Delivery January 5 to 10 and later. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

MADISON, N. J.

Thursday evening, October 18, a team composed of members of the seed trade of New York came to Madison to bowl members of the Morris County Gardener's Society. The occasion, while it ended in a victory for the home team, was a most enjoyable affair. Wheeler, of New York, had registered a solemn vow to beat Bobby Schultz, but Bobby couldn't see it that way, and only in the second game was Wheeler near the money. Herrington was very nervous the first game, but he nobly redeemed himself later. The presumption is that the wrong kind of dope was tried on him at first. Totty and W. Richards, being both short and stout, were put in the center of the respective teams as heavyweights to keep the ends together. The last named would have done much better, but having left his sponge in New York was greatly handicapped. Bobby Schultz's triple in the second game saved the day for the home team. Duckham, as anchor, held his own pretty well. Chadwick, Proten and A. Rickard only need practice to develop into good bowlers. Rumor has it that they all are 200 averages in New York. Wheeler, I fear, is a hopeless case as a bowler. Bowling at one alley to make a strike in the other is tabooed in the best bowling circles, and is not permitted in any eastern league game. It was a gentlemanly game, and the best of feeling prevailed. The score follows:

Madison—	1st	2d	3d
Herrington	136	210	171
Totty	147	123	146
Schultz	127	119	134

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Trade the past week is reported as being good. The larger dealers have had about all they could do both in a social line and in funeral work. Roses are in crop, and some fine blooms have been cut. Killarneys seem to be the best. Some of our leading growers have discarded the Maids for it. It is noticeable that this variety has done exceptionally well with all of the growers. Chatenays also are fine. Richmonds are not so good. We hope to get them later on. The plants are strong and the prospects are good for some good cuts of perfect blooms within the next few weeks. Kaiserin are good, and are grown much more extensively this year than last. Carnations are not good. While the plants are perfectly clean, there are few of them being cut. The damp weather of the last few weeks has kept them back considerably. Mums are coming slowly. We have had but few cut so far. The most are shipped in.

St. Paul.

A trip through the L. L. May & Co. greenhouses finds their stock in the best of condition. Their Killarneys are a sight worth seeing. The houses are a mass of bud and bloom. They have four houses planted in this one variety. Their early varieties of chrysanthemums will be in this week.

The Swan Floral Co. keeps up an attractive display and reports a good trade.

Holm & Olson are kept doubly busy on account of moving, but report a satisfactory week's business.

H. Krinke & Son are cutting some nice violets.

Minneapolis.

Rice Bros. are getting in some good stock, and report an active market.

The Minneapolis Floral Co. is cutting some fine Moultons, but the other varieties are off-crop.

Amundson & Kirschner report a good trade, but experience some difficulty in getting good stock.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

A good, speedy week has just gone by. Chrysanthemums have been coming heavily, and there has been enough business to keep everything cleaned up nicely. Carnations are the only flowers short in supply, but this will not be so noticeable from now on, as chrysanthemums will take their place. Windows in the retail shops have mostly ferns and mums, but look good for a change.

Various Notes.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. will remove about November 1 to its large, new building, 222 Oliver avenue, where it is installing an immense new ice-box and many other facilities for handling its large trade in a more satisfactory manner. A large force of men is busy and when completed it will be one of the most complete wholesale houses in the country, and will be a credit to the trade in Pittsburgh, which, by the way, is generally credited with being one of the best flower towns in this country.

A. E. Gibson, of Punxsutawney, is confined to bed with a severe attack of grip.

W. M. Deyoe, of Oil City, Pa., has installed an electric plant which furnishes his greenhouses and residence with light.

Anton Krut, of Butler, Pa., has moved into his large, new store and is now busy erecting a conservatory in the rear. The flower business of Butler is growing rapidly, and Mr. Krut is keeping pace with the times.

Gust A. Geng, of Youngstown, O., has been at Mt. Clemens several weeks with rheumatism, but was called home on account of the death of his brother-in-law, who was killed in an accident.

J. W. Glenn, of Kittanning, is brightening up his store for the winter season. He says things look better than usual.

The H. C. Frick conservatories were opened to the public last Sunday. Besides the chrysanthemum show, there was a fine display of orchids, roses, begonias and cyclamen. These are open to the public every Sunday during the winter.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had the decoration for the banquet at the Duquesne Gardens, given for the visiting bishops and prelates who attended the dedication of the new St. Paul's cathedral, one of the grandest edifices in our city. The banquet was an elaborate affair, using twenty wagon-loads of plants alone.

The exceedingly warm weather is bringing the shrubbery out in bud again, and the chrysanthemums are crowding in at a rate to worry the wholesalers.

The Schenley park and Allegheny park conservatories will not open their mums shows until Sunday, November 4.

NEW ORLEANS.

Current Comment.

After two months without a meeting, it was to have been expected that the last meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society would have been larger. Only a few members were present, owing no doubt to the pressing work that we have at the approach of November 1. No action could be taken on several propositions made by Mr. Lagardie, the most important one being a chrysanthemum show. The matter will be discussed at the next meeting. A committee of five was appointed to find out the best way to induce some of our professors to deliver lectures at our meetings. The question of insects and parasites would be of great interest when explained by a scientific observer. President Otto Abele appointed as finance committee M. M. de Lapouyade, H. Cook and C. Ory. B. M. Wichers took a few orders on fine samples of Boston and Pieroni ferns which he had on exhibition. J. Newsham had some mums and cut roses grown under glass. He said that it was his first attempt, which certainly gives good promise for the future.

The city is full of people attending the K. P. convention. Decorations of all kinds, without omitting flowers, palms, ferns and greens, have been used in abundance.

Our chrysanthemum crop is promising, but we will have to draw heavily on Chicago for carnations and other stock, and we hope everybody will be satisfied.

J. A. Baur, of the Paducah Pottery Co., was a visitor to our city, and was present at our last meeting. M. M. L.

FITCHBURG, MASS.—W. H. Ritter opened his new flower store, October 16, with a fine display of stock and a musical program of twelve numbers.

DECATUR, ILL.—M. Z. Kellogg has removed from 447 N. Water street to 146 East North street, where he has a new store and one more convenient for the public.

ATTICA, N. Y.—William F. Pfeifer has purchased three lots at the corner of Kellogg avenue and Erie street. He has not decided what use he will make of the property.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—October 16 was flower day at Krug park. This means that on that date the plants, not desired for stock in the greenhouses, were turned over to the public; and thousands were dug up and transferred to private homes.

Chrysanthemums and Carnations

This comes from WALLACE GOMERSALL, late superintendent of the famous "Wodenethe," owned and finely maintained by Winthrop Sargent, Esq., Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.:

"For Chrysanthemums we use GRAPE DUST with the best results by freely dusting with it until the delicate blooms come, then we are a bit shy of it, to prevent any staining of the petals, but during the green state, even in bad weather, there is no trace of fungus, and we keep free of the spot. I have recommended it to many gardeners, and so far my acquaintances have found it very valuable. In common with many gardeners and florists, I have found it of great value in checking the rust on carnations. It is not expensive to use, for by using in air bellows it diffuses itself everywhere, and is, in my judgment, a valuable every day article. For roses it is of exceptional benefit against mildew."

How to Use "GRAPE DUST" for VIOLETS, ROSES, etc., in the Greenhouse.

Fill the house with dust as soon as the plants are set, and let it settle over the plants, or put one pound to a pail of water and spray it finely over everything, plants, ground, benches, etc. Spores are likely to settle anywhere about, and prevention is the best remedy. Its fineness, its reliability, and its great diffusiveness combine to make GRAPE DUST take the highest rank as a popular and economical fungicide, and no mistake about it.

Greenhouse Heating.

A CHICAGO SHOW HOUSE.

I have a new greenhouse 12x15 and ten feet to the ridge, used as a show house adjoining my store. The side walls are eight feet high, half double-boarded and half glass. The house is protected on three sides but open to the north winds and does not receive much of the sun. In Chicago climate how many feet of 2-inch cast-iron pipe will I need to maintain a temperature with hot water suitable for a miscellaneous collection of plants? B. A.

The house in question, 12x15, and ten feet to the ridge, can be heated sufficiently for mixed stock by installing 200 feet of 2-inch pipe. You speak of cast-iron pipe. Why use cast-iron pipe when malleable pipe can be had for less cost and more economically installed? The cast pipe is probably a little more durable, but the malleable pipe should last as long as the house will stand. L. C. C.

PIPING FOR A GREENHOUSE.

I have a greenhouse, 25x190, for carnations. The boiler-room is sixty feet from the front, on the north side of the greenhouse. Can you tell me the size of boiler necessary, and how to pipe it with 4-inch pipe? E. R. T.

The carnation house, 25x190, should have the piping arranged to make the shortest possible loop from the boiler to the end of the house and return. With the boiler located as it is, it is necessary to arrange the piping practically the same as would be necessary in piping two independent houses; the east end should have its radiation independent of the west end. The entire plant should contain about 1,500 lineal feet of pipe, distributed to make eight complete lengths of pipe as long as the house itself. The boiler used should not have a rated capacity for less than 2,000 lineal feet of 4-inch pipe, or be rated to carry 2,000 square feet of radiation. L. C. C.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Despite the fact that there was a lull in business, stock kept moving at the commission houses until the latter part of the week. The demand for roses has somewhat subsided, prices ranging from $3 to $8 per hundred. Some fine La Detroit coming in from Mt. Clemens meet with ready sale.

Mums move well. Large quantities of white are sold daily, prices remaining from $1 to $2 per dozen. Carnations, especially light pink and white, meet with big demand; in fact, of the light colors, there are hardly enough to go around.

Smilax has been a scarce article.

Club Meeting.

An exceptionally well attended meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held in the new headquarters Wednesday evening, October 17. J. F. Sullivan gave an interesting talk on his recent eastern trip, dwelling mostly upon his visit to the violet district, at Rhinebeck. Everyone, from the full-fledged grower to blacksmith and stagedriver, seems to be in the violet raising business, but why they grow so readily in that district, no one seems to know.

A most complete paper on ornamental trees and shrubs was read by Harry Hunter, forester in the city parks. Mr. Hunter was unanimously elected a member of the club. John Hall, also employed in the city parks, was proposed for membership.

It was thought too early in the season to hold a chrysanthemum show November 7, according to the program.

Mr. Sullivan is expected to read his paper on "Why Members Should Attend Meetings" on the night of November 7.

Various Notes.

Gus Knoch has been awarded a judgment for $800 against the Detroit Gas & Light Co. Mr. Knoch has gone quite extensively into growing water hyacinths, and gas escaping from the mains is blamed for the loss of many thousands of plants.

A recent visit to Beard Bros.' greenhouses proved interesting. A large variety of carnations is grown, among them such as M. A. Patten, Queen, The

The Market.

Continued cool weather has had a good effect, and has brought good results, so that at present writing the market is in good condition. Stock in general much improved, also quantity much increased, with the exception of carnations. These are more plentiful than last week, but still scarce, and some question just how soon there will be an abundant supply. Shipping trade, good.

In Beauties, there is some good stock in now, both in long and medium stems, selling at from $3 to $6 per dozen, retail.

Carnations, as said before, are short in supply, but prices have not advanced. The quality of some is very good, especially in Enchantress and whites. Lawson shows good flowers, though stems come short, but, owing to the scarcity, this is overlooked.

Brides and Maids continue to increase in supply; improvement is noted also in quality. Richmond and Liberty are in good shape and plentiful and selling easily.

Chrysanthemums are coming in more plentifully and help out the shortage in other lines. Some good stock is seen. The prices are high for first-class stock, but the coming week will see plenty of all grades on the market, when the prices may break.

Violets are getting better every day, and some nice stock is coming, with prices reasonable, from 50 cents to $1 per hundred for selects.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Bowling League has opened the season. The teams, instead of going by numbers this year, took the name of a flower, as The Columbines, The Beauties, The Violets, The Carnations, etc. The Beauties took two games out of three from the Columbines. The Carnations took three straight from the Violets. Both the losing teams say they cannot do it again.

Fred Maler is cutting some fine violets and E. E. Peterson has brought in some good ones. E. S. K.

MENDOTA, ILL.—The Restland Floral Co. is ready for business.

"Always safe and reliable. Ask your friends."

If your water pressure is insufficient for your needs will quickly and permanently remedy it. Towers built high enough to supply any pressure and strong enough to hold tank full of water and resist any wind pressure that comes along. The tank is just as strong and durable as the tower, and the only way water escapes from it is through the outlet pipe; no leaking or bursting with the Caldwell tank, no collapsing with the Caldwell tower. To investigate is to learn the perfect satisfaction the Caldwell outfit gives its multitude of users, many Florists and Nurserymen among them. Get our illustrated catalogue.

A CALDWELL TANK and TOWER

What Would You Think of a man who in trying to sell you his house, should bring you a brick from it as a sample? It's quite as reasonable to think of buying greenhouse materials on the merits of the quality of the materials only. Not only is it a question of quality, but the practical, exacting, economical and thorough up-to-dateness of the house they will make. Keep your eye on the firm who sends out bricks. Keep in touch with the firm who from the whirl of their factory wheels to the last hammer stroke, stand for the up-to-date thing at the up-to-date price.

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

The Dutch Bulbs.

There should be no time lost now in getting your main crop of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths into flats and pots. In these pages I often have said that we make up pans of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths from flats of these plants, when in flower, or when just about to flower in the spring, but we do this only because we don't happen to have just what is asked for. One reason why the bulbs should be got into the flats is that this is much more easily and quickly done outdoors near where the flats are to rest for the winter. And when the soil is dry and fingers not chilled work goes much quicker and more cheerfully. We can't expect much more fine weather. Put your hyacinths, narcissi and tulips into the pots and pans you expect to flower them in. The only difference in the management between the pots and the flats is, that in case of a very severe winter no harm is done to these hardy bulbs, even if the soil in the flats should be frozen hard; but if this should occur with the pots and pans there would be many broken. Nothing sells better in the spring than pans of Von Sion narcissi. Everyone likes the cheerful daffodils. All these bulbs in pans and pots should be put into coldframes, so that they can be protected from hard freezing. Don't think, because the soil you use in the flats or pans happens to be moist, that a thorough watering is not necessary. It is most essential, and without it rooting will not take place. We have passed through that mistake years ago, with fatal results.

Paper Whites and Romans.

I have often mentioned the fact that Paper White narcissi should be brought in early and given lots of time in a cool house. The same can be said of Roman hyacinths, although the Romans will endure a much higher temperature without harm. I have seen Paper Whites brought in and put down by the side of the path in a warm house, and grow all to leaves. This is entirely wrong. This early, cheap bulb is most useful at the holidays, and the way to make it so is to bring in the flats the first week of November and put them on the bench in the full light, and in a house where it is about 50 degrees at night. Roman hyacinths should be given 60 degrees at night and allowed six weeks to come into flower, but give them also full light.

Geraniums.

With the man who grows bedding plants there is one job important about now which may not appear very pressing. Your big crop of zonal geraniums that you put into 2-inch pots in early September should now be stood over and the surface of the soil stirred up. This may seem quite a chore to read about, but anybody quick with the fingers can handle thousands in a day. All that are going to root will be rooted by this time, and the ten or fifteen per cent that are dead will allow you to give the remainder a little space between pots. It is wonderful, the improvement you will notice even in a week after you have stood over and stirred the soil in the small pots. This stirring or loosening of the surface of the soil in pots is identical with hoeing a field of cabbages, or carnations in the field, and the great benefit of that you surely all have seen. In my humble opinion, with plants in pots under glass, it is not practiced nearly as much as it might be to the great benefit of most of our small plants.

Lorraine Begonias.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine will just now be starting to send up the growth that will make it such a charming plant at Christmas, and now is a good time to do what tying is necessary. Some use three or four small stakes and surround the plants with a strand of silkline. Others prefer one stake in the center of the plant and the branches supported by a tie of this material. This should be done soon, so that the plant has time to assume a natural appearance and not have the artificial form which all plants have when first tied out.

Lilies.

We are busy now potting our Japan lilies, and lack of room or pots may compel us to pot them in 4-inch pots, later to be shifted into 6-inch. It may be a case of force, but we do not approve of it. To suit our ideal would be to put them into the pot we intended to flower them in, most likely a 6-inch, and to place the bulb just below the surface of the soil, the pots being only two-thirds full, and place them in a frame protected by glass. When bringing them into the houses, about the middle of December, the pot could be filled with good soil, which would feed those roots that are sure to spring from the stem just above the bulb. The only trouble with this good method is that the fresh soil on the surface will not indicate, by a superficial appearance, whether the bail of roots is dry or not, and a greenhorn cannot be trusted to water them.

I was made to say in last week's REVIEW by some terrible mistake (most likely my own), in reference to liquid nicotine: "This application is of particular value, but not in the case of early lilies." The reverse is the truth. We already have injected into the center of the leaves of our early Bermuda lilies a weak decoction of nicotine, and it has kept them perfectly free from aphids.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

LENOX, MASS.

The annual show of the Lenox Horticultural Society was held on October 24 and 25, and, while from the standpoint of quantity of chrysanthemum blooms, was not so large as last year, the quality of the flowers staged will not be surpassed anywhere this season.

Last season's novelties were all staged in splendid condition. Beatrice May, Morton F. Plant, E. J. Brooks, Mrs. Geo. Heaume, Mrs. H. Partridge, Mrs. W. Knox, Mrs. F. F. Thompson, W. Wells and May Seddon being in all the winning classes, and in every case exceptionally fine. Mrs. A. J. Miller and Mrs. W. Duckham, 1904 varieties, also were splendid.

The Pierson cup, for six kinds, three flowers of each, was won by E. Jenkins, gardener to Girard Foster. His varieties were Morton F. Plant, Mrs. A. J. Miller, Mrs. F. F. Thompson, Chr. Montigny, Beatrice May and W. Wells, and were a splendid lot of flowers. The same exhibitor also captured the Boddington prize for twenty-four blooms in twenty-four varieties, practically all of the varieties being last year's novelties.

The Totty prize for Beatrice May brought out the largest flowers and the best competition of the day. Here again Mr. Jenkins proved his skill, Thos. Proctor running him a good second, and S. Carlquist third. Beatrice May, as shown at Lenox, is a wonder.

The vase of thirty-six blooms was won by Robert Speirs, gardener to Mrs. John E. Parsons, with a mixed collection of fine blooms; second, by A. H. Wingett, gardener to Charles Lanier, and third, to E. Jenkins. The last named exhibitor staged thirty-six grand Duckhams, but it was a matter for regret that they were not nearly finished. As mentioned before, the classes were not so well filled, and it was due entirely to the fact that many of the finest flowers were not nearly ready for showing.

Twelve blooms, distinct varieties, was won by Thomas Proctor, gardener to R. H. Patterson, with R. Speirs second.

Six blooms, distinct varieties, was won by S. Carlquist, gardener to Mrs. Robt. Winthrop; A. H. Wingett, second, and Thomas Page, gardener to Geo. H. Morgan, third.

For twelve blooms, 1906 varieties, Mr. Jenkins secured first, the most notable flower being a magnificent May Seddon.

Six yellow was won by R. J. Loveless, with Mrs. W. Duckham; E. Jenkins, second, and Thomas Proctor, third; six red, by Fred Heeremans, gardener to W. D. Sloan, with fine H. J. Jones; six white, by E. Jenkins, with Beatrice May; six pink, by the same exhibitor, with W. Duckham; six bronze, by A. J. Loveless, with Mrs. A. J. Miller; six any other color, by Thomas Proctor, also with Grand Miller; three yellow was won by S. Carlquist, and also three red; three white, by the same exhibitor, and three pink by Robert Speirs, with splendid Lady Hopetoun; three bronze Mrs. Wingett captured with beautiful Mrs. Geo. Heaume; and three any other color, by Mr. Carlquist, with the redoubtable Miller.

In the rose classes, Mr. Jenkins had it almost his own way, scoring first for twenty-four Beauty, twenty-four Bridesmaid, Brides, Kaiserin, and President Carnot. Any other variety was won by F. Heeremans, with Queen of Edgely. Morris K. Jessup won for twelve Beauty; Thos. Page, for twelve Bridesmaid; twelve Brides was won by D. Dunn, gardener to Mrs. Sturgiss, and twelve Carnot, by A. H. Wingett. Thomas Proctor got first for twelve scarlet, with grand Richmond, Thomas Dixon, gardener to F. A. Schemerhorn, being a fine second. Twelve any other color was won by Robert Speirs, with Perles, and fifty flowers in mixed variety, by E. Jenkins.

The chief class in the show was the group of plants arranged for effect. This year it was won by Mr. Heeremans, with Mr. Jenkins second. These two groups would well serve as models for exhibitors staging plants in any exhibition. Mr. Heeremans had palms and crotons against the wall as a background, and in the front a beautiful garden with Harrisii lilies, vandas, phalaenopsis, Cattleya labiata and other orchids, the whole forming a charming picture. Mr. Jenkins, exhibit was scarcely less beautiful, with Cocos flexuosa, grandly grown crotons, and other choice stock. He fell behind Mr. Heeremans in flowering plants only.

For three specimen plants Mr. Jenkins was first, also for a single specimen, and for twelve single-stemmed plants in 6-inch pots.

Mr. Speirs won for six plants, distinct varieties. Six pompons, distinct varieties, in pots was won by S. Carlquist. Specimen kentia was captured by F. Heere-twelve scarlet, twelve dark pink and twenty-four scarlet. Mr. Carlquist was first for twelve white, twelve light pink, and twelve crimson. Mr. Proctor won twenty-four scarlet, and H. P. Wookey, gardener to S. H. Woodward, twelve any other color.

In the fruit section, T. Proctor and S. Carlquist exhibited fine grapes, and F. Heeremans and W. D. Curtis fine apples and pears. Vegetables were splendidly shown by E. Jenkins, F. Heeremans, A. H. Wingett, Thomas Page, and S. Carlquist.

The judges were A. Herrington, C. H. Totty and W. Duckham, all of Madison, N. J., and George Hale, Seabright, N. J. At last report they all are still alive.

Lenox and its gardeners are to be congratulated on their exhibition. Varieties of everything were up-to-the-minute, and everything exhibited was about as good in its class as it is possible to get it. Vidi.

GREENHOUSE FOUNDATIONS.

[A paper by Judson A. Kramer, of I. N. Kramer & Son, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, delivered at the Iowa State Florists' Convention at Dubuque, October 17, 1906.]

The stability of any structure depends, first, on the foundation. Posts, the true foundation in greenhouse construction, should have the elements of strength and durability.

Wood is the most common, and I might say the most unsatisfactory material used, owing to decay caused by excessive changes of heat and moisture. The lasting qualities may be improved by a coat of tar, paint or oil; or, better still, set the post in concrete, care being taken to have same extend a few inches above the soil and rounded off so that water will not accumulate around the posts. Of the different varieties of wood used, red to the iron above ground at the expense or light.

Gutters in connected houses are an absolute necessity, but for various reasons I would not recommend their use in disconnected, or on the outside walls of connected houses. They may be made of wood, iron or cement. Wood is the most common—in fact, the only material used until recent years. The constant expansion and contraction, caused by the changing conditions of heat and moisture, soon start decay, loosen the joints, and render the gutter unfit for one of the uses for which it was made. Thorough painting is beneficial, but not lasting. Again, wood being a nonconductor of heat, does not absorb sufficient heat from within the house to keep the gutter free from snow and ice during cold weather.

In connected houses gutters usually serve a three-fold purpose, being used as a conductor of water, a walk in which to work in making repairs, and for sills, or the framework on which to build the roof. Great strength is therefore required, as in all methods of construction, with one or two exceptions, the gutter is compelled to carry the entire weight and strain of the roof; and, in order to do this with the use of wood, large dimensions are required, which is at the expense of light.

In order to overcome the objections made to wood, iron now is largely used and with great success. Being a conductor of heat, it absorbs sufficient from within the house to keep the gutter free from snow and ice in the coldest weather. An objection is made to iron on account of the condensation which forms on the inside. This, however, is overcome by the use of an auxiliary gutter, or what might be called a drip conductor, which is placed beneath the gutter proper.

For strength we have in iron, either for posts or gutters, the maximum with the minimum size, part for part, which admits of more light than any other construction. There are many styles or makes of iron gutters, all of which have more or less good points. Where strength is not needed for the support of the roof, a thin galvanized sheet-iron may be used. In this case all that is necessary is iron of sufficient strength to use for a walk in making repairs.

In constructions of this kind brackets are used on the posts, a connecting purlin running a few inches from and parallel with the gutter, forming the framework to which the bars or the roof are attached. The gutter is attached to the bars as in other constructions, but does not carry any of the weight or strain of the building.

The use of cement for gutters is comparatively limited. Its lasting quality is about the only redeeming feature.

SHASTA DAISIES.

John Donahue, gardener to Morris K. Jessup, took first for six cattleyas, and E. Jenkins for six Oncidium varicosum.

cedar is found to be the most satisfactory. Another objection to wood is large size, which reduces the amount of light.

To meet the increasing demand for better material, iron was introduced, and has proven satisfactory; so much so that iron posts are now almost exclusively used in modern, up-to-date constructions. The posts should always be set in concrete, the same as recommended for wood. A cast-iron base may be used, though it is not necessary, if care is taken in setting the posts as recommended.

Another material used for posts is cement. This, so far as lasting qualities is concerned, cannot be excelled. Strength also can be obtained by reinforcing with iron; but why add cement

VENTILATION.

My carnations were planted in the beds about September 20, and have been doing well until last week, when the upper half of some of the plants has become distorted, looking as though they were half starved. In carnation houses, after the plants have been established, should I carry a little air all night, providing the temperature is 5 or 10 degrees above zero? C. B. S.

The specimens you send show two causes for complaint, the one you mention and another which is more serious. The latter are traces of carnation leaf-spot, and I would advise you to go after it at once and rid your plants of it before it gets too bad. Pick off all the spotted leaves and handle them as I have suggested in recent answers to inquiries in the REVIEW.

The other trouble often appears on certain varieties worse than on others, and usually a few weeks after the plants are set in the benches. It seems the severe check when the plant is in active growth and the sudden resumption of growth cause the leaves to hang together. Any severe check is liable to cause it, and especially if it is followed by rather strong food. If the plants are subjected to the ravages of aphids, they will show similar distortion. If you are satisfied that it is not caused by the latter, then I would advise you to handle them so that the growth will be moderate for a few weeks, and I think they will grow out of it. Keep a little on the dry side, and withhold any kind of stimulant. Keep the surface of the soil stirred and give plenty of ventilation. Run a little fire heat at night whenever possible, and a crack of air on. When the roots get to working freely this trouble will disappear.

It is not necessary to go to such extremes as you suggest in this matter of carrying ventilation on your carnation houses. To carry two inches of air when the temperature is 10 degrees above zero would entail a great waste of fuel, and would be utter folly. Our plan is to run a flow and return in a 20-foot house, and an inch or two of ventilation. Whenever the temperature outside drops low enough, so that more heat is needed, then we close the ventilators, and, if necessary, turn on more pipes as they are needed. If the nights are cold, so that hard firing is needed, then we keep the ventilators closed and try to run a little air during the day whenever it is possible, if it is only an hour or two in case of cold, cloudy days.

You will find that in cold weather the pressure from the outside is sufficient to cause a change in the atmosphere very quickly when the ventilators are opened a trifle. Also that the warm air will escape through the numerous small cracks, and draw in fresh air as it goes out, sufficiently to keep the atmosphere in good condition for some time, without opening the ventilators. You will find that the tighter the house is built, the more ventilation will be required, outside of keeping the temperature down on bright days, and the milder the weather the more ventilation is needed to keep the atmosphere fresh in the house.

DORNER'S NOVELTIES.

The trade has grown to expect at least one new carnation a year from the F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, and seldom is disappointed. This year, for good measure, they have two new sorts for dissemination next January. One is red, Red Chief, and the Dorners esteem it as one of the best of the many good sorts they have sent out. They say that last year their house of that variety gave a splendid cut and during Christmas week produced two to one as compared to Crane, and four to one as compared to Cardinal. The flowers are full, rounded and average three inches. Calyx is non-bursting and stem long and wiry. It is a good keeper and holds its color. It is an easy grower.

Bonnie Maid is a fancy, similar in general appearance to Prosperity but better described as edged white shaded to pink center. It is said to be early and free, though not so large as Prosperity, which latter has about dropped out of cultivation because of its lack of freedom.

Both these varieties will be seen at the more important fall shows and will be examined with interest.

SUPPORTS FOR CARNATIONS.

Will you advise me whether I should have one or two strands of wire between my carnation plants? They are only ten inches apart across the bench. J. M.

We run only one wire between the rows of plants lengthwise of our carnation beds. Most plants will need the full ten inches of space by midseason. The twelve inches between the rows across the beds allows you to run two strings across between the rows, and when these strings are three inches apart it leaves a good space between the plants for circulation of air. This we consider sufficient. But by all means run two strings crossways between the rows; that is essential.

ANTHRACNOSE.

We send you some of our rose plants, which we ask you to examine carefully, and tell us what is the matter. They were planted in June, were nice healthy plants and have had the best of attention by our florist, who has grown roses for years. We never have had trouble of this nature before. We have given them a light sprinkle of lime, and one of tobacco ashes. Most of our plants are looking well; but, here and there, we find plants affected as these are. L. L. B.

This specimen is infested with the fungus known as anthracnose, an insidious trouble, hard to eradicate and infectious.

The indications of its presence are, the tops of the shoots begin to wither within a few inches of the top, and continue to die downward, while the stem will continue to send out nice, healthy growths, which in time are attacked in the same manner. This disease, if not engendered by close, moist, and stagnant atmosphere, is certainly fostered by these conditions, which should be avoided.

Cut out all affected wood, and burn it. Keep all ripe and decaying leaves off the branches. Keep walks and ground under benches clear of weeds, and decaying vegetable matter, and spray the house twice a week with the carbonate of copper mixture (Cupram), applying this during bright weather, and using a nozzle that makes a fine spray.

Keep the temperature 56 degrees at night, with enough ventilation on to keep the air in circulation, being particularly careful not to water during cloudy or muggy weather.

While the plants are in this condition, do not attempt to mulch or apply liquid feeding, as this only makes the trouble worse.

RIBES.

NITRATE OF SODA.

In watering roses with nitrate of soda, what amount should be used to the barrel? The soda is in the form of crystals.
J. H.

Nitrate of soda, being a concentrated form of food, and quick in its action, should be used sparingly, and especially in a first application it should be made weak.

This class of food should never be given to weak or ailing plants, as it will only aggravate the trouble. Even strong and robust plants require to be educated to its use. For a first application, one pound to one barrel of water will be quite sufficient.

Keep a close watch on results, and if these are favorable, the strength of the dose can be gradually increased. Choose bright weather when applying this food.

ROSE CHARLOTTE KLEMM.

This handsome new rose which will shortly be introduced to commerce by Hoyer & Klemm, of Dresden-Gruna, is the result of a cross between the hybrid perpetual, Alfred Colomb, and the Bengal rose, Cramoisi Superieur, the latter being the pollen bearer. Robert Turke, of Mussen, remarks in the Rosen Zeitung: "I can say from personal observation that no other variety of rose is in existence having such a fiery red color, and it exceeds in a remarkable degree all rivals of a similar tint. Planted as dwarf bushes or standards in groups, the color is predominant. The blossom is of a fairly large size, moderately red-color, and that it is more intensive than Gruss an Teplitz, while it does not burn under strong sunshine."

A NEW ASPLENIUM.

Asplenium nidus-avis laceratum is a quite distinct new fern, for which a first class certificate was awarded to J. Hill & Sons, of Lower Edmonton, England, by the Royal Horticultural Society. It is an importation from Brazil, and probably either a new species or a natural hybrid rather than a variety of Asplenium nidus-avis. From that species it differs markedly, not merely in the division of the fronds into pinnate segments, but in the fact that while A. nidus-avis has its fronds winged from the base, the lamina of the frond commencing close to the central caudex, the importation has a long naked stalk with the lamina commencing abruptly some seven or eight inches or more from the ground, thus resembling Asplenium lucidum and most of the other asplenias and also Scolopendrium vulgare. At a distance, indeed, it strongly resembles a robust form of the last-named species, but is of much stouter make and more rigid habit. It is welcomed as a most promising market variety.

SOME ENGLISH NEW PLANTS.

At the Royal Horticultural Gardens at Wisley an extensive trial of dahlias has taken place, and it appears that in hardly any of the new varieties has any improvement been made in the habit of the plants, judging from a garden and cut flower point of view. The flowers are still more or less hidden with foliage, yellow; Reggie, magenta; West Hall Scarlet, scarlet.

At the autumn exhibition of the National Rose Society, lately held in London, it was abundantly seen that, for this year, at least, the best autumn roses come from Ireland and the one or two big rose growers in Ireland showed probably the finest blooms ever seen for the time of year. The only two varieties which gained gold medals came from that country, Alex Dickson winning them with a grand exhibit of Dorothy P. Robert, H. T., a lovely thing, of a rose color, shaded apricot; and also with the Mrs. S. Clark, H. T., a lovely pink shade, its chief characteristic being the very double habit.

Several lots of the much talked of perpetual bearing strawberry are being picked this autumn, and are of useful quality. It appears that quite a crop, almost amounting to commercial value, can be obtained, if this section is treated as an autumn fruiting sort, and not as a perpetual bearer. In the ordinary way they commence to bloom at the same time as the ordinary summer varieties, and then when the fruit is really wanted in September, the plants are getting exhausted. If all flowers and runners are kept carefully picked off for the first two months after they commence to appear, and the plant encouraged by liberal cultivation, a fine crop of large, well formed fruit may be obtained during September and October.

H. B. May, of Edmonton, has introduced a fine asplenium, called nidus-avis laceratum. The fronds are two feet long and a much deeper and harder green than is usual with asplegiums. The variety is likely to become a fine pot plant and market variety, a great point being its extreme hardness of texture.

F. Stredwick & Son, St. Leopards, are taking a leading place as raisers of dahlias. The following varieties coming from them are likely to become standard varieties: Hyacinth, bronze, pink tips, unusually distinct color; Sunshine, red, lighter towards the outside petal, good form; Ruby Grinstead, the latest type of cactus, having incurved petals, color yellow, shaded rose; Meteor, white spotted purple and crimson. A variety named Portia, a true pompon, comes from C. Turner. This is likely to become a standard florists' variety and will probably be grown in large quantities for cutting.

In chrysanthemums a sort called White Countess attracts notice as likely to become a valuable, early market variety. It is pure white. The same may be said of a yellow named Mercedes. They both originate in one of our large market nurseries and will be extensively grown for early market work. Another variety from the same nursery, called Mrs. Arthur Beech, is deep orange, reverse side of petals old gold. These three, in my opinion, are the greatest improvement in the early flowering section that the market trade has had for a long time, and they are three colors that are wanted more than any others. They are introduced by Joseph Lowe & Co., of Uxbridge, Middlesex.

double, mostly one bloom to each stalk or shoot; it has good foliage and growth, and in unfavorable autumn weather is free from mildew. In Germany the plant withstands the severity of the winter when slightly protected. The plant flowers early and onwards till the frost makes an end of flowering. HELLENTHAL'S HOUSES.

The accompanying illustrations are from recent photographs made at the establishment of J. R. Hellenthal, Columbus, O. One of the pictures is of the interior of a new carnation house, 30x140, which is an especially fine structure. It is planted with The Queen, Lady Bountiful, Enchantress, White Lawson, Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson, Ethel Ward, Flamingo and Estelle. A late start was made but the plants are in fine condition and the prospect for winter is excellent.

The rose house contains Bride and Bridesmaid out of 2-inch pots planted in June. They are in good order. The side bench is one given to Boston ferns. A crop of fine chrysanthemums now is about ready to cut. There is a nice lot of poinsettias on a bench, and also a lot in pans. Mr. Hellenthal is neglecting no detail, which makes for good stock.

FORCING STRAWBERRIES.

I have 500 plants in 6-inch pots. How should I keep them through the winter? I have no coldframes, and intend to put them in a vegetable house. What time should I start them growing to be reasonably early? I have no time for hand-setting. T. Y.

If you have no coldframes you are going to have some trouble keeping your plants through the winter. The plants would not be hurt by frost with a slight covering of some light material, but unless your pots are protected they are sure to be cracked by frost; and you will not be able to cover them sufficiently out of doors to prevent their freezing solid, without danger of ruining the plants, as the crowns are liable to rot, if covered too heavily. All the protection the plants really need is just enough to prevent freezing and thawing; but the covering material must never be put on heavy enough to exclude the air. You could probably plunge the pots out of doors, and cover over lightly after they have had sufficient frost to put them to sleep for the winter. That is, frost hard enough to pretty well freeze them through. The idea is to retain this frost in the soil, and prevent alternate freezing and thawing; and, at the same time, prevent them from getting frozen too hard. To prevent this, some sort of movable covering should be provided, to put over during cold nights, and removed during suitable days.

Regarding the time of starting, you should regulate that to suit yourself. They can be started as early as Christmas, and as late as you want; but I would not advise starting much after March 1, as southern grown berries come in the market early; and unless you get your crop sold before you run against them, there would be little profit. About the beginning of February would be a good time.

You say you have no time for hand-setting. I fail to see how you are going to get them set any other way, unless you have bees. Unless the flowers are pollinated, your crop will surely be a failure. I hope you have chosen suitable varieties for forcing. There is a great difference in the pollen producing qualities of the different varieties. One would naturally think that all perfect-flowered varieties would be alike in this respect, but such is not the case. The best pollen producer we have found so far is Nick Ohmer, though it does not mature as quickly as some of the others. It pays to grow it for the purpose of getting pollen to fertilize some of the others. The pollen, when ripe, can be shaken from the flower onto a piece of glass and transferred from there, by a camel's-hair brush. The operation does not take up so much time. The brush soon becomes loaded with pollen, and quite a number of flowers can be run over and fertilized with what it contains.

SWEET PEA TROUBLE.

I am enclosing a root of sweet pea infested with an insect which I have been fighting since the first part of August and with little success. It already has destroyed my house of peas and the ground is so full of the pest it seems useless to plant in the same soil again. I have some few peas left and should like to try some remedy. I already have used air-slaked lime, tobacco dust, tobacco dust and camphor, wood ashes, and watered abundantly, as the dry soil seems to breed them. Would some one help me out in this trouble? G. L. B.

We could see where the fiber of the root had been eaten away but could not detect the insect that was the cause of it. It is difficult to get at anything that is destroying the roots of plants, for anything strong enough to destroy the enemy will in most cases injure the roots. In other words, the cure is worse than the disease. As you seem willing to try any remedy suggested, I would ask you to put a peck or more of tobacco stems in a tub or barrel and pour some boiling water on them. The strength of this decoction will, of course, depend on the quality of stems and how much diluted. When applied to the plants it should be as dark as weak coffee. When cool and properly diluted, water the peas with it. We heard recently a true story of a friend who did this to kill wire-worms that were eating the roots of his cauliflower, and with marked success. If tobacco water will kill these tough-skinned wire-worms it should kill anything that creeps, or walks, or flies. It would be less trouble to dilute some of the commercial nicotine extracts, but I don't know what strength would be safe. If you prefer to dilute an extract, then water heavily enough to go to the bottom of the bed. W. S.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

CHENILLE.

Its Uses and Abuses.

The uses to which chenille can be put in our business are many and varied, and still many florists use little, if any. It is true enough that a poorly made letter detracts a great deal from the beauty of a design, while one well made of chenille is by far more artistic than any other. And why not have a well made letter.

Right here let me give you a few pointers in chenille letter-making. First of all use twisted chenille. For large letters, say over two inches, use extra heavy. If this is not at hand, twist two or three lengths together. A baby ribbon spool, with a heavy wire, having a hook on one end, and the other bent in shape of a crank, the same wire running through the spool, is very handy for this purpose.

For letters between one and one-fourth inches and two inches, use regular size chenille, and under one and one-fourth inches use small size, plain. Any size letter being at the artist's command is one reason why chenille lettering is preferable.

In making single block letters, always use a guide, so as to have them of a uniform height. The letter "O" should always be about one-sixteenth to one-eighth of an inch higher, in order to look right in the finished word. A knife stuck into a board is the simplest guide.

Use your finger to bend the round parts of letters, but always use a pair of tweezers to bend the corners, as it is most important that your letters have sharp, square corners.

Twisted chenille should always have the end bent back to keep the cotton from unraveling. A cabinet made of cigar boxes can always be kept filled with some standard sized letters, say 1 3/4-inch, for regular use. The easiest and neatest way of fastening these letters on your design is with a piece of No. 20 wire, bent in the shape of a tight hairpin, so tight that it will just slip over the wire in the chenille nicely.

In making chenille into script, a good plan is to write the inscription in the size wanted on paper, and use that as a guide. So much for lettering.

One should always keep on hand an assortment of colors, for use in covering strings of designs, as harps, lyres, etc. For this purpose the twisted is best, unless white is required; then plain is preferable.

Last, but not least, it can be used in a hundred and one other ways, as for instance in making anchors, hearts, crosses, crowns, swords, etc., for use on designs of different societies. The easiest and best way is by first bending the desired shape out of a piece of No. 16 wire and then winding chenille around the same. Large letters are also made in this way.

FORCING LILACS.

One of the famous growers for the London market is T. Jannoch, of Dersingham, known as an authority on lily of the valley from his years of success not only in forcing but in growing the pips. But of late years valley has taken a somewhat secondary place to lilacs at Mr. Jannoch's, a large number of varieties, both single and double, being grown, but chiefly those introduced by Lemoine. The mother plants are grown in the ground in lines by the sides of the walks, forming a magnificent display when in bloom. The whole of the salable stock is grown as potted plants fit for forcing or for planting out.

The largest of these are in small tubs and in 8 and 10-inch pots; the biggest plants are furnished with from twenty-five to thirty-five shoots, and strong, fat buds that are sure to throw four flower spikes on each shoot, giving a grand display when forced. All blind and weak shoots are carefully removed several times during the season of growth, so that the strength of the plant is confined to the main shoots, hence the great size of the spikes and flowers, and the flowering shoots in general measure from one and one-half to two feet in length, and are of great strength, furnished with large, leathery leaves of a dark-green tint, when the flowers are dark-colored, and of a lighter tint in white and pale-colored varieties. Many, and indeed most, of the older plants are worked on stems of seedling Syringa vulgaris, one and one-half to two feet in height.

It is of the greatest consequence that a lilac plant for forcing purposes should have the shoots well matured, and this can only be assured by full exposure to light and air, and with this intent the plants are plunged to three-quarters the depth of the pots, and are never top-dressed with either soil or manure, although during the season of growth manure water is occasionally afforded. They are stood three feet apart in the lines, with two feet between the lines, there being three lines in a bed; smaller plants are placed at two feet and two and one-half feet apart. These plants looked very promising for bloom, showing from five to seven shoots per plant. Their ages ranged from three to four years. In every case the plants, after having bloomed, have the last season's growth cut back to within three to four inches of the base.

With the exception of two beds holding the largest plants, all the other stock stands on the soil, and thus secures perfect ripening, and there is complete control over the application of water, each plant getting what it needs, and that only. Continental cultivators invariably sink the pots deeply and mold them over, thus inducing roots to grow over the rim, which have to be removed on taking them out of the soil.

Budding of stocks is an operation which is preferred by Mr. Jannoch, although at the start a year is lost as compared with the results obtained by grafting, but the ensuing growth is much stronger, and at the first cutting back a strong break of shoots is secured, much more so than from grafted plants.

Budding is commenced in July, and continued throughout August. The plants, according to the height at which the stocks are budded as dwarf bush, and to form quarter, half, and full standards, and miniature plants.

The best white lilac is considered to be Frau B. Dammann; it is single flowered, has very large spikes. Grand Duke Constantine has grayish-blue flowers, and is one of the finest doubles; the color is that of the Marie Louise violet. Belonging to the same class are Mme. Abel Chatenay, a beautiful, white flower; Mme. Casimir Perier; a quite new variety, white, and excellent for forcing; Mme. Lemoine, white, a large spike; Michel Buchner, pale lilac, a dwarf-growing plant; President Grevy, a very double, blue-tinted variety, with a long spike; President Carnot, large pale lilac spike, and free to flower; pyramidalis, large and dense spike of a fine mauve color; Alphonse Lavallée, with large spikes of blue shaded violet; and Charles Joly, a dark purple, one of the finest of the dark-colored varieties. Those mentioned force well whether retarded or not, and are fine outdoor objects in the garden.

Equally excellent in the same way are the following single varieties: Charles X., a strong grower, in several shades of lilac, and one of the best for forcing; Claude Lorraine, large spikes of a deep lilac tint; Mme. Francisque Morel; Marie Legraye, large white spikes, forcing well; Reaumur, carmine, flowers of satiny texture, spike large; Rouge de Marly, reddish-purple; Rouge de Trianon, large spikes, the individual flowers large, and of a reddish-blue color; Souv. de Louis Späth, dark purple, flowers large, the finest of its color; Ville de Troyes, dark purple, a fine variety.

Gladioli From Seeds.

The article in the REVIEW for October 18 entitled "Gladioli from Seeds" induces me to offer a few notes of my experimental work in California, in the last two seasons.

In April, 1904, I planted a lot of small seedling corms of gladioli, some of which were no larger than a plump grain of wheat. Nearly every one bloomed, made fine corms. Taking them up eastern fashion after maturity, there was unavoidably left in the earth the smallest corms. This past spring, they came up thick, have bloomed, developed seed, are mature, and ready to plant again, and bloom in early April. The large corms that have not been taken up, have bloomed twice each year, April and October.

Seed from the seedlings and normal varieties, all Crawford's strain of gladioli, I sowed April 13 of the present year, in the open ground, and did not transplant. They commenced to bloom in early September, and some are in bloom at this date. The last named have reached a height of four feet, a few have twenty-inch spikes, and much of the seed is mature.

This coast country seems eminently adapted, not only to gladioli, but other tender bulbous plants seem at home. Callas in bloom, grown from seed, in less than one year. Hollyhocks, sown in April, have long been in bloom, and platycodon has done as well. The surprises for an eastern man who takes up experimental work here are many.

It is my first year taking the REVIEW. The florists' journals all are good, but you easily lead them all.

THE MEXICAN POPPY.

Hunnemannia fumariæfolia, better known as the Mexican poppy, is not so much grown as its merits would warrant. Unlike most members of the papaveracæa family, the flowers have excellent keeping qualities when cut, lasting for four or five days in good condition. The flowers are not unlike those of Eschscholtzia Californica, the Californian poppy, in appearance, but the plant is of more erect habit, the stems are harder and it withstands considerable cold. For cutting from August 1 until sharp frost it is one of our most desirable flowers. A large bunch makes a fine dining-table center-piece, and arranged in wide-mouthed bowls it is especially effective. It ought to prove a desirable flower commercially, owing to its good keeping and shipping qualities, but it appears to be little grown by florists.

While the plant in its native country (Mexico) is a perennial, it requires to be treated here as an annual. Seed sown thinly about May 1 in shallow drills two feet apart gives excellent results. The ground should be well manured. The flowers are solitary and the leaves glaucous, making a pleasing contrast.

OBITUARY.

John Summerfield.

John Summerfield, 71 years of age, died suddenly near his place of business, Darby, Pa., October 18. Mr. Summerfield was apparently quite vigorous for his age, and had not complained of illness. He was engaged in his work, pushing a wheelbarrow, when he fell to the pavement. Heart disease is attributed as the cause of death.

J. L. Dillon.

J. L. Dillon, of Bloomsburg, Pa., met an accidental death at 9:30 a. m. on Tuesday, October 30. Mr. Dillon went, with his men, to the Pennsylvania railroad station at East Bloomsburg to direct the unloading of a car of coal. The car not being in position, Mr. Dillon directed his employees to start the car. The track being on a down grade caused the car to move off at a lively pace. Mr. Dillon stepped in front and he was struck, thrown to the ground, and his legs crushed. A bolt in the car caught in his coat collar, dragging him on his face for a number of feet. It required fifteen minutes to remove him from this position and before the body was freed life was extinct.

Mr. Dillon was 55 years of age. He leaves a widow, three sons and one daughter. Mr. Dillon's death is doubly sad for Mrs. Dillon, as her father, Mr. Hutchings, of Kingston, Pa., was lying dead at the time, awaiting burial on Wednesday.

J. L. Dillon was widely known in the trade. He was a man of large energy and had made a conspicuous success with a number of specialties. Verbenas were one of his leading items, of which he shipped many thousands all over the United States. Grafted roses also seemed especially to respond to his treatment. Carnations were largely and successfully grown. Mr. Dillon acquired a competence from his greenhouses, which led him into many outside ventures, in which he met with varying success. He had western mining interests to which he paid a visit each year, the last time most of the trade saw him being at Dayton while he was en route home from one of his periodical trips to the west. Some years ago Mr. Dillon became interested in the possibilities afforded by the rapid expansion of the trade and with H. W. Gibbons formed a partnership for the manufacture of greenhouse material. This was an ill fated venture. Mr. Dillon settled the obligations of the partnership and formed the Dillon Greenhouse Mfg. Co., which since has been directly under his management and has manufactured not only the ordinary items of greenhouse material, but a number of specialties, such as composition gutters and posts. He was a man of irreproachable character and his death in such a manner awakens the sympathy of everyone who knew him, either personally or by reputation.

John Nelson.

The trade in St. Paul was surprised and grieved to hear of the death of John Nelson. The news reached them through last week's REVIEW, and the peculiar part of it was that none of his friends in St. Paul knew anything whatever of his illness. Mr. Nelson was born in Norway. He was a florist of the old school, being very thorough, and anything grown by him was grown well. He had worked in the Royal Gardens, in Sans-Souci, near Berlin, also for Waters & Sons, London, England. He came to this country in 1888 and started with John A. Salzer, of LaCrosse, Wis., along with C. F. Vogt, of St. Paul. Afterwards he located in St. Paul. The last few years, he had charge of the greenhouses in connection with the Minnesota State Reform school.

FELIX.

Lewis Ullrich.

The death of Lewis Ullrich at Tiffin, O., October 29, was without previous notice of his illness and comes as a shock to the trade, for he was well and widely known.

Mr. Ullrich was born at Kerweiler, in Bavaria, in 1848, but was brought to America by his parents when he was in only his second year. The family resided at Monroeville, N. Y., for a time, but removed to Tiffin, O., in 1862, and there Mr. Ullrich has made his home for forty-four years. He completed the public school course in 1866 and then went to

John Nelson.

Heidelberg, in Baden, to complete his education in the university founded in 1386 and restored in 1803, which is the oldest in Germany and one of the most famous in the world. Graduating there, he returned to Tiffin and devoted sixteen years to pharmacy.

In 1874 he built his first greenhouse, a conservatory 15x20, for his mother's plants. At that time there was no florist in Tiffin and cut flowers were unknown to the many uses for which they are now so largely employed. Six years later Mr. Ullrich bought a piece of ground in the suburbs and built two commercial houses, one 12x50, the other 25x50. Now he has about 60,000 feet of well kept glass, growing roses, carnations, violets, chrysanthemums and a few bedding plants. Ninety per cent of the product is sold wholesale to the florists of the vicinity. He recently has introduced a new scarlet geranium named for his home town.

Mr. Ullrich was a participant in all local activities and did much to widen the floricultural interests of his locality. At the same time he earned for himself a place high in the regard of his neighbors, having served for several years as a member of the city council and three terms as county clerk. He has for years been an active member of the S. A. F. and of the American Carnation Society, so that he has a wider acquaintance in the trade than ordinarily falls to the lot of one whose business interests are so well centered. At the Detroit meeting of the Carnation Society he delivered a speech at the banquet, to the toast "The Florist: He's a Jolly Good Fellow," which showed a rhetorical ability and a breadth of sentiment which placed the speaker in the front rank of our after-dinner orators. At the St. Louis and again at the Washington convention of the S. A. F. he was a candidate for the presidency, and, had he been elected, would have filled the office to the credit of himself and the society.

The funeral will be held at Tiffin on Friday, November 2.

Mrs. Joseph Kaiser.

Mrs. Susanna Kaiser, wife of Joseph Kaiser, died October 26, at 721 East Seventh street, Belleville, Ill., aged about 50 years. She is survived by her husband and several sons and daughters.

WORMS ON FERNS.

I am having trouble with worms eating the leaves of ferns. They are green and black worms, about one and a quarter inches long. I do not know how to get at them and they are destroying the tips of the fronds. L. M.

This is a rather unusual trouble for a fern grower, but the most likely remedy to try would be to dust the plants thoroughly with powdered hellebore. The hellebore being a vegetable poison, is less liable to injure the foliage than Paris green, or any other metallic poison, and from the fact that fresh powdered hellebore is the best remedy for the currant worm, it is probable that it would give good results in this case.

W. H. TAPLIN.

LILIUM MULTIFLORUM.

Last week I received and potted up my 7x9 longiflorum multiflorum and placed them in a cool house, running 54 to 55 degrees under a bench, covering them again with moss. Kindly advise me what treatment is best for them for Easter forcing. J. H.

We would have advised you to put your lilies when first potted into a cold-frame, and to leave them there until the end of November, or until you feared a hard frost. Broadly, it seems to suit these lilies best to get them rooted before giving them any top heat. As it is, and you now have them under a bench, leave them there; but lift them to the full light before the leaf growth is the slightest bit drawn up. Fifty-five degrees at night will suit them well up to the first part of February. By that time you will be able to judge whether they will want an increase of heat. The proper time to do the heaviest forcing with these Japan lilies is the last four weeks before flowering. They then will endure a high temperature and respond quickly. W. S.

HYACINTHS.

Will you kindly tell me if I can plant my hyacinths for Easter in flats, and then transplant into pots when wanted at Easter time, and get as good results as if planted in 4-inch pots at once? If so, how much less room would they occupy? We are crowded with spring plants at this time of the year, and cannot find room for all our bulbous stock next year, as Easter is so early. H. C. O.

We presume you allude to the large bulbs of the Dutch hyacinths. The method suggested is followed by many growers with perfect success. We have made up paps, or other arrangements, from flats of hyacinths, Roman hyacinths, narcissi of several sorts, and tulips, and have before today given it as our opinion that there was no fraud about it. The flowers will last just about as long, and in every way be as satisfactory, with this advantage, that, in making up a pan of tulips or narcissi from the flats, you can select those of uniform height and there will be no blanks.

In the case of Dutch hyacinths, which would now be put into 4-inch pots and placed outdoors, how much bench room will you save? In my opinion very little, not worth considering; and, as you have more time now than in the spring, that will offset the small amount of bench room you will save. In the first place, the Dutch hyacinths for Easter never want more than two weeks in the greenhouse. They are almost ready to bloom outdoors. If planted now in flats, and brought in two weeks before Easter, you would want to get them into the pots within a few days of bringing them in, so where is the saving? While all these bulbs can be transplanted with success, we would advise you to adhere to the old plan and pot them at once, and you will be glad of it when busy spring comes around. W. S.

FUMIGATING BEGONIAS.

Does fumigating with tobacco stems injure Lorraine begonias? J. H.

The fumes of tobacco do not hurt Lorraine or any other begonia, unless an extra dose is given them. If the begonias are in a house where fumigation is necessary, then smoke two successive nights mildly and your begonias will not be hurt in the least. W. S.

ILLINOIS ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the executive committee of the Illinois State Florists' Association will be held in Chicago during the flower show, on Thursday, November 8, at 2 p. m., in the Coliseum building. These meetings are beginning to show good results and all florists are requested to attend. The final arrangements will be made for our annual meeting to be held at Bloomington on the second Tuesday in February. All Illinois florists are requested to attend this meeting. A visit to the great Chicago flower show is well worth your while, so come and don't miss either. J. F. AMMANN, Pres.

AZALEAS.

I would like some information as to the care of azaleas between the time of arrival and starting. How long before they are wanted should they be put on the bench? W. H. P.

You will find, in the last two numbers of the REVIEW, some special notes on the treatment of azaleas; and in last week's issue, treatment for those you want in bloom at the holidays. I could not improve on those hints if I tried again, and will most respectfully ask you to look up your recent numbers of the REVIEW. W. S.

A PROPAGATING QUESTION.

In tearing out an old greenhouse and building a new one, I have a space 6½x 20 feet between the new house and boiler-room, that I am fitting up for a propagating house. I wish to ask whether I should put my propagating bench on the north, or on the south of this space. If put on the south, it will be shaded by a broad gutter, but if put on the north side it will get good sunlight. W. N. T.

Put your propagating bench on the north side. If the sun is too bright on it, you can easily shade it by a curtain of cheese-cloth or some such material, and in dull weather the curtain can be rolled up. W. S.

VERBENAS WITHOUT RUST.

Will you kindly mention, in the columns of your paper, the best method for the propagation and care of verbenas to avoid their being subject to attacks of mildew and rust? E. H.

We can tell you how to get healthy cuttings of verbenas, although it is late for this season. How to avoid the dreaded rust, and the less destructive mildew, is beyond our power; and that is why we have for years advised the raising of these sweet, old flowers from seeds. Seedlings are raised in half the time, at much less cost, and are perfectly healthy.

Verbenas that have flowered abundantly during summer will not give you good material for cuttings, and about September 1 a few plants should be cut back, or at least all the flowers cut off. The ground beneath the spreading growth should be lightly forked up, and a little rotted manure spread on the surface. In this, the plants will make a fresh and vigorous growth; and this young growth will give you the right kind of wood for a good start in the fall. I am inclined to believe there are two ways of wintering verbenas. One is to keep the plants steadily warm and growing, say 55 degrees at night; and the other is to keep them steadily cool and almost dormant, down to 40 degrees; but I must beg of the verbenas specialists to enlighten us on how to prevent rust and mildew. J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa., and R. Vincent, Jr., & Son are growers of named varieties of verbenas, raising them in quantity; and a gentleman, who used to be very successful with verbenas, and well qualified to give his views on the subject, is W. T. Bell, of Franklin, Pa.

I will conclude by saying that the verbenas, in my opinion, is coming back to favor, although it seems to have lost its vigor. As a child, I can remember that beads of verbenas grew so tall and robust that they were edged with a variegated geranium, and the white varieties were strongly scented, without the creative powers of Luther Burbank.

W. S.

CHANGING PLANT HABITS.

Retardation of Growth.

The action of continued cold upon plant is to keep in check, in actual suspension, the natural tendency of plants to grow at root and top in spring, and this suspension of the vital power may be prolonged from January to June, and probably for a much longer period. The application of the cold process is to a certain extent combined with a certain cost. By the cold process lily of the valley, lilac, various species of lily, hydrangeas, Ghent and Mollis azaleas, Gueldres rose, prunus of species, Philadelphus hybridus Lemoinei, etc., may be kept till any period late in the year, and they will bloom just as well and as certainly as non-retarded plants; lily of the valley in about three weeks and lilacs in about the same time.

Accelerating Growth.

Etherization produces a change in plants that causes them to grow more quickly and open the flowers sooner when they are put into warmth. It is applied in autumn and winter to plants that have not had their usual length of rest. The inventor of the original process was Dr. Johannsen. Ether causes the sleep or repose to be far deeper, and according to the duration and density the more easy and rapid is their recovery. The effect of ether or chloroform vapor is supposed to be due to the drying up of the food juices in the stems and bases of the buds. Before a selected plant is put into the ether-chamber, the soil, stems and foliage are thoroughly dried, so much as to be productive of a certain degree of withering. The ether is applied by being poured into a shallow vessel through a short length of pipe inserted in the center of the arched roof of the etherising chamber, after the door has been hermetically closed; the fumes, being heavier than air, fall down among the plants standing on the floor. The ether is applied in most instances twice in forty-eight hours, a twelve hours' interval being afforded with the door opened. Not all species of plants require two doses.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

LYONS, N. Y.—James P. Boyle, treasurer of the fire department, acted as fireman and extinguished what at first threatened to be a disastrous fire in his greenhouse, October 22.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The latter half of last week was only fairly active, the demand largely centering on chrysanthemums, which now are the predominating feature. This week started off with a rush. Two or three days of dark weather had operated to reduce receipts in noticeable fashion, and the sudden acceleration of demand put the wholesalers where they had to skirmish to fill orders. The New Orleans All Saints' day business began on Sunday, and Monday night the American Express Co. took out on the 5:25 Illinois Central train one of the heaviest shipments ever sent south from this market. The bulk was perhaps greater than usual because a larger part of the stock than is ordinarily the case consisted of chrysanthemums. Orders for these were filled in full, but not all the roses wanted could be supplied, and carnations were considerably short of the demand. On Tuesday further heavy shipments went south, and altogether the southern business has been a great factor in this week's market. The horse show is calling for considerable select stock, and increased requirements are expected at the latter end of the week, when the dinners and dances will begin.

Chrysanthemums are abundant; any order can be filled. Beauties have been equal to all requirements, but there was a pronounced shortening up on Tuesday. Red roses are enough to go around, for the southern demand is not for this color. Other roses are scarce, especially Brides, and have firmed up in price. Carnations are far short of the demand and prices paid by city buyers for select stock have been in advance of quotations. Carnations never have brought such high prices at this season. Lily of the valley also is in light supply, but there is an abundance of Easter lilies, principally used for funeral work. New York violets have been received in quantity this week and are of greatly improved quality. The horse show has made a better market for them and prices have firmed up quite a little.

There seems to be a pause in the demand for green goods and there are abundant supplies in all departments.

Bahr's Seedling.

Fritz Bahr, at Highland Park, has a seedling carnation of which he thinks highly and which has favorably impressed all the growers who have seen it. It is from Prosperity and has that variety's size, but is more full and rounded. The color is white overlaid pink, not blotched as in Prosperity. The plant is an easy grower and free bloomer. The J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., at Joliet, has 1,000 plants on trial this year, and if it does as well there as it does at Highland Park it will be introduced, probably by Thompson.

Employees' Ball.

The wholesale florists' employees made a great success of their first annual ball at Columbia hall, 638 North Clark street, last night, Hallowe'en. The committee on arrangements consisted of H. W. Rogers, E. C. Benthley, Charles Ernie and Leonard Kill. J. P. Risch was treasurer. The same committee, with the addition of John Ziska, had charge of the floor. Fitzgerald supplied the music and over 200 couples participated in the grand march under the artificial morning-glory vines that covered the ceiling. Palms and chrysanthemums were banked along the wall and the decoration did the boys much credit.

Hughes Makes Record.

H. R. Hughes, on West Van Buren street, has made a record in the rebuilding of his establishment. The greenhouse was taken down, a new one put up and a new heating plant installed, including the remodeling of the store, all within the space of two weeks. During the operation the stock of palms and ferns was stored in an adjoining basement. It was just housed in the new structure when the inclement weather came.

Various Notes.

C. M. Dickinson is laid up this week with another attack of his old enemy, rheumatism, in his knee. His son Donald has been ill two weeks with tonsillitis.

Mrs. Meyer now does the selling for Schroeder & Meyer at the Flower Growers' market.

Stollery Bros. have during the current week received a large importation of kentias and araucarias from Belgium for use in their retail trade. They also have just received 1,000 azaleas. They stick to the old, favorite varieties, Vander Cruyssen, Vervæneana, Simon Mardner, Deutsche Perle and Niobe.

The Burlington is again getting its dining-car decorations from Chicago and Council Bluffs growers, and it is reported that the greenhouses at Aurora are to be demolished. The railroads are finding that it is cheaper to buy on standing orders than it is to grow their own cut flowers. With a large range there is added expense and a surplus at times; with a small place, in times of scarcity they have difficulty in getting stock, and have to pay stiff prices.

Miss A. L. Tonner, of the A. L. Randall Co., has returned from a week's trip to Aberdeen, S. D., where she was called by the serious illness of her brother, whom she left much improved.

C. W. McKellar has added gardenias to his list of specialties.

E. C. Amling last week had occasion to inform a grower as to a shipment of stock, and sent a telegram. This is what the grower got: "Stork arrived three-fifteen; everything fine." The grower mailed the telegram with his congratulations on the safe arrival of the "stork."

Richard Mansfield, with his family, is again occupying his old quarters, the rooms of George Wienhoeber, above the store of the E. Wienhoeber Co., 415 Elm street.

A bloom of the E. G. Hill Co.'s big early yellow chrysanthemum, Fusee, has stood on Mrs. Horton's desk in the office of Bassett & Washburn for two weeks, and remained perfectly fresh.

E. E. Pieser says the Kennicott Bros. Co. considers itself fortunate that several of its growers have been cutting pretty fair crops of carnations this last week.

C. J. Johnson, the Limits florist, sold off all his stock last Thursday and Monday went to Chillicothe, O., to take hold of his new greenhouse plant.

Wieter Bros. sold 3,000 mums on Monday, one-third of them being Clemantine Touse.

W. E. Lynch, in E. H. Hunt's price list, received Monday, meets the fate of all reporters who write in the present tense about the weather. He says it is "fine; all that could be asked." Even a modest man like Mr. Lynch would be justified in asking something better than we had Saturday and the three days following. It has shortened stock materially.

The George Wittbold Co. has had a more than usually busy October in its decorating department. The big store openings this year have called for fewer cut flowers and more plants, autumn foliage and the other decorative materials for which the department store buyers rely on Wittbold's.

Patrick Buckley, claiming to be a florist, was arrested by the Oak Park police October 27 after a chase in which the former fired several shots at the police officer. Buckley, according to the police, sold ferns to families in Oak Park and in the early evening returned to his customers and asked for more money, asserting that he had sold the ferns too cheap.

Vaughan & Sperry report Monday much the busiest day to date this season.

Liberty and Richmond both are in fine form and good crop at Peter Reinberg's.

E. F. Winterson is selling flower show souvenir post cards; next week flower show wholesale tickets will be his specialty. He expects to break last year's splendid record.

J. A. Budlong's are beginning to reap the full reward for their work in grafting their rose plants. The Maids are especially fine.

F. Thomas, formerly with Wieter

Bros., is now with R. Will & Sons, Minneapolis. He is cutting some fine Kate Moulton and Richmond, and states that their 8,000 mums are coming along nicely.

Flower show preparations are going forward smoothly. The retailers will do their part fully as well as last year. Prof. Hasselbring again is in charge of the lecture feature, and has word that Miss Susan B. Sipe, who so pleased the S. A. F. during the Washington convention, will be here for two lectures on Saturday. Much good advertising is being done aside from the newspaper work, and everything points to a most successful show.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. reports the southern orders this year not more numerous, but heavier, than usual. They had an especial demand for carnations.

Scheiden & Schoos are cutting some fine yellow mums, but most of their place is in carnations.

Horse show week always is one of the busiest of the year for P. J. Hauswirth.

Henry Hilmers has received word from his wife in Berlin that the Princess Frederick Leopold, sister of the empress, wishes to adopt their daughter, Daphne, who is a musical prodigy. Mr. and Mrs. Hilmers object.

Albert T. Hay, of Springfield, Ill., was in town last week, and was elected grand master of the Grand Council of the Royal and Select Masons of the state of Illinois, probably the highest position any florist ever has attained in the Masonic order. Other visitors were B. L. Van Aken, Coldwater, Mich., with his wife; J. W. Springer, of the New Hampton Floral Co., New Hampton, Ia.; A. L. Barnett, New York.

WE are now in the middle of the MUM SEASON. For those of our customers wishing to make a show at their own store we will be pleased to

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The trade has put in a very busy week. The wholesalers had plenty to do, filling orders for both local and shipping trade. A number of large and small weddings, social affairs, and the Foust funeral used up considerable fancy stock. Stock of all kinds was quite plentiful. The retailers experienced little trouble in filling their orders. The downtown retailers, who do the transient business, report that trade in this line is picking up greatly. Cut flowers are daily becoming better and prices are ranged according to the demand.

Chrysanthemums are arriving in big lots at all the commission houses. Col. Appleton is fine. We also saw some extra fine blooms of T. Eaton, Robinson, Perrin and Yellow Queen.

Roses have been in good demand, but the mums will crowd them this week. Long Beauties had a good run last week, and the market had a good supply in all grades of the smaller roses. Brides and Ivory had a good call, as did Chatenay. Richmond, too, sold well, but only the fancy stock. Plenty of seconds were sold cheap in 1,000 lots. In this way the commission-men cleaned up well all of last week.

Carnations are still in great demand. They are becoming more plentiful, yet the market was cleaned up every morning at good prices. Violets are also cleaned up every morning. These are not so plentiful, but the quality becomes better each day. Fine valley is scarce. Greens are in full supply.

Various Notes.

J. F. Johnson, of J. F. Johnson & Co., Fort Smith, Ark., made the rounds of the trade last week.

L. N. Van Hook, at Fergusson, has taken to growing carnations in addition to violets, and is cutting some nice blooms, also first-class California violets. A new house or two is contemplated for next spring.

Wm. Edlefsen, of Milwaukee, is here this week to help celebrate the ninety-second birthday anniversary of his mother, who lives here. Mr. Edlefsen is a guest at the house of W. C. Smith, his nephew.

Henry Braun, late foreman for A. Jablonsky, has taken charge of the Klockenkemper place, which was, as stated in the last issue, leased by Adolph Brix. Mr. Braun is a member of the Florists' Club and has a host of friends who wish him good luck in his new position, in which he will surely make a success.

C. Young & Sons Co. has been busy filling bulb orders and has plenty to do in cut flower work.

Grimm & Gorley's place, at 15 Cass avenue, has an attractive appearance. This firm has a big run of trade in the north end. Mr. Gorley's popularity with the young folks has a great deal to do with the firm's success.

Dr. A. S. Halsted, president of the St. Clair Floral Co., Belleville, called last week. The doctor reports a big sale for his new geranium, Sycamore. His new range of glass has just been completed by Robert Thompson, of St. Louis, who made a fine job of it. Mr. Halsted will visit Chicago during the flower show next week. The cut flower season so far in Belleville has been good with all the trade there.

A. J. Bentzen, of the Bentzen Floral Co., reports that he is cutting a fine lot of Dorner's White Perfection. Mr. Bentzen says he is ready for his discussion on "Growing Cyclamen" at the club meeting.

Nick Himmers is bringing in a fine cut of Col. Appleton chrysanthemum. He will have a large and fine crop of T. Eaton soon. He expects to capture some of the club prizes next week.

George Windler has a fine lot of pot chrysanthemums. He will be looking for some of the club prizes next week.

Henry Ostertag had a busy time of it on Friday and Saturday, with a big force of extra help working up designs for the Foust funeral.

At Ellis's the place looks more natural with the boss around again. He was trying to tell a crowd of his friends a banana story the other day, but slipped up on it.

Will Smith entertained a few friends for dinner at Hotel Peabody last week. The table was nicely decorated with American Beauties and small ferns. Those present were Fred Alves, George Angermueller, W. J. Pilcher and J. J. Beneke.

The Eggeling Floral Co. is cutting a fine lot of chrysanthemums. They have a new one which they will exhibit at the club meeting next week.

Frank A. Weber, the nurseryman, for the benefit of the club members at the meeting next week, will answer the question, "Does it pay to advertise?"

Don't forget the big chrysanthemum exhibition at the Florists' Club meeting Thursday afternoon, November 8. All florists, regardless of membership, are invited to attend. Prizes are offered for the best twelve white blooms—$7.50 for first, $5 for second and $2.50 for third. Same for the best twelve yellow, and the best twelve pink, any variety; also $5 for the best specimen plant. Discussions by Harry Young and A. J. Bentzen. A vote will be taken on the big flower show for next fall; also a proposed change in the by-laws will come up for a vote. President Irish says that should any florist be overlooked with an invitation, he should not wait, but come, as this meeting will be open to the trade in all its branches, and the biggest meeting of florists ever held in this city is looked for.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Last week's business was the best that the majority of dealers has had for some time. The largest stores had about all they could take care of, and do it right. Stock, especially of roses, is somewhat scarce, on account of the cloudy weather. The Killarneys grown in this section are particularly fine, and command ready sale at good prices. Carnations are in poor shape, and the only dealers who seem able to get them are the Greeks. No doubt connections in the east help them. Chrysanthemums are coming in as well as can be expected. A few good Monrovia are on the market, also Bergmann. The demand for them is brisk and a fair price is obtained.

Plant sales are active, principally in ferns. Nephrolepis elegantissima sells well.

St. Paul.

C. Bussjaeger has completed two new houses. He has them planted in roses. He has combination heat, hot water and steam. Mr. Bussjaeger manages to make some improvements every spring. Aside from greenhouses, he has made some investments in real estate, which, from all reports, are very profitable.

L. L. May & Co. have had an exceptionally busy week. Their roses are all in crop, but their increasing retail business keeps them nearly always short. Their carnations have done little up to date. The plants look fine, and before long large numbers will be cut.

A visit to the St. Paul Floral Co. found the stock in good shape, particularly the Brides and Maids. Richmond has not done much. Their three new houses look well, and, although the stock in them was not planted until September 1, some fine Brides and Maids are cut. They have a fine stock of Nephrolepis elegantissima. The Enchantress carnations are doing much better than other varieties. While they have quantity of Flamingo and Lady Bountiful, the cut has been light.

Max Bussjaeger was awarded the contract for resodding a portion of the Minnesota State Capitol grounds.

The Swanson Floral Co. reports good business, but a scarcity of stock.

Minneapolis.

William Donaldson Co. says that business is fine. The improvements in their ice-boxes and counters make their place present an entirely different appearance. Miss Sylvester, formerly with a St. Paul florist, is now in their employ.

The Powers Mercantile Co. reports an active trade, particularly in bulbs. Cut flower trade is good, but the stock is not up to grade and affects trade materially.

Oscar Swanson says trade is fair. He handles only the best stock, and of course secures the best prices and the best trade.

Carlson & Sandberg have been cutting some fine roses. Their Chateaus are hard to beat.

Will & Son have been sending in large numbers of roses, which are all handled by one concern, and, from reports, have contracted to supply that one dealer only.

FELIX.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

The last fortnight brought by far the best business of the autumn to date. Several things helped to swell the sales, such as many funeral orders, wedding decorations, the opening of the chrysanthemum season, and large over-the-counter sales; but the great factor of all was the decorations of the booths, and the supplying daily for a week enormous quantities of cut flowers to the exhibitors of the American Street and Interurban Railway Association, whose annual convention and exhibition has just closed. To supply in full all the cut flowers ordered by the various exhibitors at this convention was a difficult task. Carnations were the hardest to obtain, telegrams to Chicago and other large mar-

The chrysanthemum season is well under way. Roses are in good supply, and the quality is especially good for so early. Other stock needs no special comment.

Club Meeting.

The annual meeting and election of our club was held October 16, and resulted in the unanimous choice of the following officers: President, Sherman F. Stephens; vice-president, Robert A. Currie; recording secretary, James McKellar; treasurer, Jacob Reichart; sergeant at arms, John H. Williams; trustees, Albert Knopf, Gustave Drobisch, Guy H. Woodrow, George Bauman and John Brust.

Vice-President Currie, as a committee on the children's gardens, has awarded four sweepstake prizes, instead of two, as arranged. Eight schools were represented. The club has made its annual distribution of Dutch bulbs to the public schools. It was voted to change our regular meeting nights from the first and third to the second and fourth Tuesdays of each month.

The chrysanthemum show will be held November 13, at our new rooms in the Brent building. The schedule of prizes is out, and prospects for a good display are excellent. The committee on awards is M. B. Faxon, William Graff and Richard Sinclair. Messrs. Faxon and Graff have offered special prizes. R. A. Currie is manager of the show.

Various Notes.

A. P. Gagge, the landscape architect, has had so much work here this season and sees so much ahead, that he has closed his New York office and opened permanent headquarters in the Outlook building in this city.

The large department stores have killed the sales of the Chinese sacred lilies, as far as prices go. They are selling two fine bulbs for 5 cents.

S. N. Kiner & Son are making a specialty this fall of supplying and setting large trees. They keep a load of them,

The Franklin Park Floral Co. has been doing some excellent decorative work for the republican political meetings at the new Franklin Memorial hall.

Miss Gertrude Blair, after a good vacation, has returned to her post, in charge of the floral decorative department with the Livingston Seed Co.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has had an especially good run on chrysanthemums. It is cutting some fine Clementine Touse and other popular sorts.

A thorough overhauling and repairing has recently been given the Maurice Evans place, and it is now in good shape for business.

Roth has been receiving and growing some especially fine carnations, perhaps the best so far seen here this fall.

ZERO.

FORT DODGE, IA.—P. L. Larson has about 40,000 feet of glass and has everything in good shape for winter. He has two steam boilers, operating one and holding the other in reserve except in severe weather.

HILLSDALE, MICH.—The Lake Shore railroad has torn down its greenhouses here and removed the material to its shops at Adrian. It is understood that the company will not in the future have as many flower beds but will use more shrubbery, hardy perennials, and trees. The more important stations along the line will have a few flower beds.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The market conditions this week are about the same. The better grades of chrysanthemums are now in; the earlier sorts are about done with. Carnations are a little more plentiful than last week.

Various Notes.

W. K. Harris is sending some good chrysanthemums to the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., the varieties being Florence Harris and Ivory. This firm also is receiving fine Yellow Eaton from H. Weber & Sons Co., and fine LaFrance violets from Fred Roos.

Edward Reid has some fine Cheltoni, yellow, and Mrs. Coombes, pink.

Wm. Baker is handling some good Ivory.

Wm. E. McKissick has a good white seedling, which follows Polly Rose, also some Fair Maid carnations with good stems.

The varieties of chrysanthemums noted at the Leo Niessen Co.'s this week are Balsley, pink, Col. Appleton, yellow, and Alice Byron, white. They are handling cut boxwood in quantity.

The Dingee & Conard Co., of West Grove, Pa., has just completed the erection of eight greenhouses of iron construction, 12x90 feet.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. has some very good Harrisii lilies, and some fine single and double violets.

PHIL.

Phil's brief notes this week fail to include an item which the Editor is sure will awaken sympathetic interest in the trade in Philadelphia. On Saturday afternoon, October 27, Phil was taken suddenly ill and conveyed immediately to the Germantown hospital, where he was at once operated on for appendicitis. The latest report was that he was doing well, but necessarily will have to be quiet for a period.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

It is Indian summer in the east, beautiful weather for weddings, for palm and fern shipping, for the final setting of one's (green) house in order, so that all may be in shape for the long, cold winter, which William Scott and all the other reliable prophets say is close at hand.

Last week was like its predecessors of even date in other years, prices low and steady. Mums were not as numerous as expected and prices of the yellow varieties were excellent on Saturday because of the big Princeton-Cornell football game. Soon the violets will have their inning for Yale will next be in the limelight. Half a million violets are already booked for New Haven when the great day arrives.

Mums will probably see their lowest prices this week and the fancy and large varieties will doubtless hold at about present quotations until the end. Every window is a mass of color.

Roses have remained in statu quo, the prices low and the cleaning up process universal at figures it would be unwise to quote. The growers must be satisfied with the general average, and be patient, knowing a few weeks will restore everything to the profitable winter basis of an exceptionally promising season. American Beauties improve in size and quality daily.

Carnations are more and more perfect as the season advances and the fancy kinds begin to assert themselves and hold prices well. The Rose-pink Enchantress is highly commended by expert growers.

Violets have improved wonderfully in quality and color. The best have been selling at 75 cents per hundred and there are not enough of them. Ordinary stock at 35 cents to 50 cents was abundant and hard to move.

Gardenias seem to grow in numbers and popularity. Orchids were down to the lowest prices of the year at times last week, and especially large surplus of labiata being thrown on the market by a prominent grower, something unusual in orchid demonstration. But nothing can cheapen the aristocrat of floriculture long and there will be no surplus when the fashionable season commences.

In the meantime we have distracting things on hand that must be put away, including an election that means much to florists, for if it turns out wrong and public enterprise, prosperity and free investment are curtailed, this business is always first to feel the change, and we do not need another experience similar to that which followed the election of 1892. Many a florist remembers those days and the memory is bitter. In these days of almost universal prosperity there is an old rule that touches many a successful florist's heart, and it is "Let well enough alone."

Various Notes.

In another week the flower shows will be in full blast. If all reports are correct they will outdo in beauty those of other years. The one in New York, because of cramped quarters, must of necessity be small, but some year we shall try again to take the palm from Chicago.

The October weddings are an abundant crop. All the leading retailers in both cities are busy with them and decorations are more elaborate than usual. Masur, of Brooklyn, tells me he has ten of them booked for before the middle of November. Mrs. Masur lately made it possible soon to change the name of this firm to Masur & Son.

R. C. Wilson has added Shannan's big store and greenhouses on Greene avenue to his possessions and opens his branch there on November 1, with Mrs. Bruchard manager of the cut flower department.

A Third avenue florist, who handles diamonds as a side line, lost $3,000 worth while riding on a car on Twenty-eighth street, his pockets being picked. Florists should wear their diamonds or leave them in care of their wives when on Twenty-eighth street hereafter. I saw a $1,000 stud on a violet grower's bosom a few days ago, but he got his on Twenty-eighth street.

A wedding at the church of the Heavenly Rest on November 3 is a $1,200 affair, entrusted to Myer, of Madison avenue. The groom is a nephew of the late Marshall Field, of Chicago.

James McManus has been handling of late especially fine stock of gardenias and Cattleya Dowiana.

Julius Lang, who for twelve years has conducted a wholesale cut flower business on West Thirtieth street, has decided to retire November 1. This store was the last stand of the wholesale cut flower contingent on the street. The Limprecht Florists' Supply Co. still remains at the old stand, and Dacre, the retailer, occupies the store formerly used by James McManus and has refurbished and decorated it handsomely. The trend of the wholesale business is toward centralization and from Twenty-sixth to Twenty-ninth may safely now be called the wholesale cut flower district of New York.

H. H. Berger & Co. say their foreign correspondents announce that owing to drought there has been a poor growth of Lilium longiflorum giganteum and that the large sizes will be scarce this year.

A. T. Boddington is receiving large shipments of Lilium longiflorum multiflorum, the early flowering type. All their Holland bulbs are in.

ment, is in the city, and Alphonse Kock, of Alsace, of the same firm, has just returned from Arizona, Indian Navajo blankets being another specialty of this house in addition to bulbs.

Harley James, the Harrisii lily grower, returned last week to Bermuda.

Walter Mott has left Berger & Co. and is now on the road for Bobbink & Atkins.

Fred Heeremans, of Lenox, gardener to W. D. Sloane, and John Shields, of Dalton, Mass., with F. G. Crane, were recent visitors in New York.

Sam Mainzer, formerly with L. J. Kreshover, reports a rapidly growing business at his new store, 117 West Twenty-sixth street, and is handling the same specialties as his predecessor.

H. Crawbuck, in Brooklyn, is receiving daily shipments of wild smilax from Caldwell the Woodsman.

Charles Millang is unloading vast quantities of box and retinospora at his headquarters on Twenty-ninth street, his yard and store for the purpose being constantly crowded with his extensive importations.

Gunther Bros. have added a daily display of orchids to their stock and maintain their reputation for the finest grade of violets.

Walter Sheridan's Beauties are fully maintaining his reputation.

Next Monday is ladies' night and chrysanthemum night at the club and it behooves every member to be present. Chairman Nugent says the musical program is complete. Outside talent has been secured and the club's own songsters, the Rickards brothers, will be there. Turkeys also are ripe and the mums promised by Totty and Pierson and other experts will be an exhibition that will make the trip to Chicago's "greatest show on earth" unnecessary. Then, too, the selections for office by the nominating committee will be announced and altogether you can't afford to miss it.

The Tarrytown flower show began Tuesday. Red Bank began Wednesday. Glen Cove uses the same dates and Madison celebrates on Thursday and Friday. Next week on Monday and Tuesday East Orange will try to outstrip them all, and on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday the New York show will be held at the American Institute.

The Cottage Gardens are sending in some grand carnations. Alma Ward, white, and Mrs. C. W. Ward, pink, sell at $6 per hundred. Mrs. Harvey, a dark pink, and No. 2651 and No. 2653, fine whites, also are popular. Robert Craig, Beacon, Enchantress, Evangeline, Mrs. Patten, Octoroon and some surprise seedlings also keep John Young hustling, a total of nearly 2,000 assorted reaching him on Monday. Fine mums arrive daily from Robert and John Leach, George Darsley, and John Scott, and splendid Beauties from Carl Jurgens and from Mr. Young's large 700-foot house at Bedford.

An immense shield of Chatenay, violets and mums was sent to Brooklyn last week by the Thos. Young Co., to the opening of the new store of Oppenheim, Collins & Co.

Phil Kessler's quartet now is complete, the stork and a girl baby arriving early Monday morning.

W. F. Fellar, the violet grower of Red Hook, N. Y., and Miss Traver, daughter of Allen Traver, the violet grower of Rhinebeck, N. Y., were married October 23 and are spending their honeymoon in this city.

Thorley's new store on Broadway is complete and double the size of the old stand.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

AURORA, ILL.

The big C., B. & Q. greenhouses on North Lincoln avenue near the coal chutes are to be torn down. The work will be done during the winter months, when the building department has little to do.

The destruction of the greenhouses will mean a loss of thousands of dollars to the Burlington. The houses were erected a few years ago at the cost of $12,000. The plan was to grow flowers for dining cars and plants for bedding about the stations, but the location proved to be unsatisfactory, owing to the smoke and dust from the shops, and the houses have been unused since the death of the old gardener, Anthony Warimont, which occurred last spring.

BUFFALO.

Current Comment.

The evidences of the great snow and sleet storm of two weeks ago are fast disappearing, but the damage to telephone wires was so severe that the companies had to draft 500 linemen from Chicago, Pittsburg and other cities to help out their home force and it interrupted our service greatly.

Chrysanthemums are here, if not in great abundance, enough to relieve the famine in flowers of two weeks ago. Talk about a wane in the popularity of the mums! They have not sold so well in several years. People do not grumble at the price, and as quality improves, so will the price. There are a good many mums grown in this vicinity; few novelties because there is no chrysanthemum enthusiast here, but plenty of the standard commercial varieties. I wish we had a Smith or Totty in this neighborhood. How it would wake us up!

A few days ago we paid a visit to the Elmwood avenue houses of S. A. Anderson. We had not seen the place since last spring, a few days after Mr. Anderson had acquired the property from Joseph H. Rebstock. The change that hard work and money have achieved is truly marvelous. Glass has been relaid, heating overhauled, benches built and the entire place painted. It looked to me last spring a most formidable job and one that needed youth and pluck to grasp. A good many thousands of dollars have been put into the place this summer, but I feel sure it will all come back with good interest, and it should, for industry, energy and courage are entitled to their reward. There is not much attempt to grow flowers in this establishment. These can be bought. The half dozen houses are devoted to potted stock to supply the large business at the Main street store. Here can be seen thousands of superbly grown Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in 5-inch, and 6-inch pots; Boston ferns of all sizes, rubbers, araucarias, and many thousand palms of all sizes and in perfect order.

Mr. Anderson says, "Not a plant in this house goes out to a decoration, not one; we have another lot for that." A long, narrow house with no heat in it so far contained 1,500 azaleas that will retail from $1 to $15 each. Many other things could be mentioned that go to equip a first-class retail store. It is only fair to give a word of credit for the great change in this place to Joseph Striet. He is a dandy, and this summer Joe has had to put in five days building and repairing and one day gardening. What will he do in gardening next year, when he can give all his time to his pets? I have spoken highly of the stock in this place, but not more so than it deserves, and partly for the reason to stir up other young men who have a better chance than conditions in this place afforded. All the help in this place, five or six able-bodied men, are out and out union labor men and it certainly works well here. They are well paid and work regular hours. If they are off an hour they are not paid for that hour and if they work an hour overtime they are paid, and while they are working they seem active and alert. I think if we had a little more of the system florists' help would not be so scarce as it has been of late.

There has been the usual crop of October weddings, mostly of moderate dimensions, still enough to keep the artists of several firms busy. Real artists are Mr. Slattery and Mr. Beyer, of W. J. Palmer & Son; Mr. Snell, of S. A. Anderson's; Roland Cloudsley, of the Wm. Scott Co., and James Higgins, who has the pleasure to do the fine work for Miss Rachel Rebstock. There may be others worthy the name of artist, but they are modest and don't let us know. W. S.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Business last week was a duplicate of the week before. That is, it started out fine Monday and Tuesday, but on Wednesday and Thursday the demand seemed to die out, and there was a lot of stock left over after the morning's business was concluded. On Friday and Saturday there was a lively demand, and by Saturday night everything was cleaned up at good prices. At present there is a fairly active demand, but the supply of stock is so short that there is not enough to fill all orders. Outside of a few mums there is nothing to be seen. Mums are arriving in fine shape, and some of the mid-season big blooms are seen. These bring good prices, and sell on sight. Small mums that can be used for funeral work are in good demand, and there are not enough to fill the demand. The heavy demand for this grade is caused largely by the shortage of carnations. They don't seem to be blooming at all. While there are a few coming into this market every day, they can scarcely be taken into account, when one considers what we ought to be getting at this season of the year. It is hoped that they will redeem themselves during the winter months, when as a rule they are always so scarce.

Roses have been doing well, and with the exception of American Beauties there is enough to take good care of the demand. American Beauties have been a little erratic, and at present they are scarce. The price has held up well, notwithstanding that mums usually cause them to drop a little.

Violets are in good demand, with few to fill orders. There has been a good deal of call for white violets this year and no supply. As a rule white violets are a dead article on this market. Baby primrose and snapdragon are beginning to come in and sell well. There has been a good demand for valley; at times orders could not be taken care of. Smilax and asparagus sell well and ferns are doing nicely.

Various Notes.

Frank Dellar, who has recently purchased a tract of land on West Price Hill, is erecting a greenhouse, 20x100 feet. This is the start of what in time will be a good-sized place. Carnations will be grown, and as Mr. Dellar has had experience with R. Witterstaetter and Wm. Murphy for many years, it is expected that he will produce some fine stock.

Wm. Murphy is constructing three houses 200 feet long in which to grow roses.

Several of the craft are on the sick list, among them being George Murphy and Henry Konzelman, both of whom are afflicted with typhoid fever. As the disease appears to be in a light form, it is hoped that it will deal lightly with both of them and that they will be up and about again soon.

C. J. OHMER.

A PITTSBURG SUCCESS.

Although a wholesale cut flower commission house for Pittsburg was discussed for several years before it became an actuality, the suggestion always was discouraged by the growers and retailers, the very ones who have since been most benefited by such establishments.

In 1898 Fred Burki, one of the largest and best known growers in his section, with William A. Clarke, one of the oldest Pittsburg men employed in the retail cut flower business, and Theodore P. Langhans, a younger man with some years of experience in the retail trade, concluding the time was ripe for the project, organized the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., the first wholesale cut flower house between the east and middle west.

There were many who were dubious as to the success of the venture, surmising a short existence for the new enterprise. However, the men who had the project in hand commanded the respect of the trade, and with the additional resources of energy, patience and persistence, they steadily developed the business and soon had it on a successful footing.

The start was made, in the autumn of 1898, at 705 Penn avenue. The floor space of their room was only 540 square feet, with about 700 feet of basement room. It was only a short time until the first forward step was made by securing larger and more convenient quarters. The building at 504 Liberty avenue was leased, containing 2,880 square feet of floor space with 960 feet in the basement. For a time they were at a loss how to make use of all this additional room, but they added various lines of florists' supplies, ribbons, and other articles to their stock until this large building became too small to accommodate the details of the business, which had by this time gone beyond even their own expectations.

For more than a year now they have sought a larger building, which should be conveniently located, but by those familiar with Pittsburg it will be understood that such wants are not easy to supply. A few weeks ago a large concern, making alterations in its business, gave them the opportunity of securing the location at 222 Oliver avenue, centrally located among the retail florists and in close proximity to the railroad depots and express offices.

This new location has 10,000 square feet of floor space, with 4,000 square feet of basement room, which will be used entirely for the handling and selling of cut flowers and florists' supplies. The building is fitted up with all the latest equipments for handling cut flowers.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. now represents over 144 growers of cut flowers under a very large area of glass. In its eight years of existence the firm always has adhered strictly to business principles and stands before the trade today, not only as one of the solid and reliable concerns of the city, but among wholesale florists no name is better known or more esteemed than that of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—The greenhouses of William E. Wilkins were damaged by fire October 17 to the extent of $1,000.

TRAVERSE CITY, MICH.—F. M. Paine is building an addition, 20x83, to his greenhouse, which will double his present accommodations.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

With weddings, receptions and afternoon teas, the last week has been a good one. There has been a steady demand for all select stock coming in. There have been some magnificent Beauties and chrysanthemums in the leading stores, which brought good prices.

Various Notes.

P. J. Probeck will have in the first Paper Whites of the season the coming week. This gentleman takes pardonable pride in a bench of dwarf Bostons that are a picture of health and beauty. It is a sport of his own, but identical with the Scottii.

Nearly all the downtown stores have their windows decorated for Hallowe'en, some of them beautiful and grotesque combined.

Bramley & Mann have an attractive window, combining the products of farm, field and the greenhouse. For a background there is a lifesize figure of a son of the sod, made of corkbark, with a coconut head, complacently smoking a corn-cob pipe and resting against a shock of cornstalks.

Some of our growers will lose heavily this season by the nonarrival of import orders of narcissi and Romans from France. The delay was caused by the wrecking of the steamer on the shores of the Azores, by which part of the cargo of bulbs was lost. As the cause of delay was not known till recently, it was then too late to secure other stock for early forcing.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

[All catalogues are filed by the Review and are accessible to the trade for reference at any time. Following are the latest arrivals.]

W. C. Kennedy, St. Joseph, Mo., fall bulbs, baskets and gas heaters; Barteldes & Co., Denver, baskets; V. Lemoine & Sons, Nancy, France, plants; Reliance Nursery Co., Geneva, N. Y., nursery stock; Labelliflos Nurseries, Voorschoten, Holland, lilioms, Amaryllis vitatta; Otto Katzenstein & Co., Atlanta, Ga., tree and shrub seeds, roots and bulbs; T. V. Munson & Son, Denison, Texas, fruits, trees, vines, roses, etc.; Sluis & Groot, Enkhuizen, Holland, vegetable, flower and agricultural seeds; F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., carnation novelties, rooted cuttings.

FORT RECOVERY, O.—Geo. Popp, Jr., says the weather has been fine for outdoor work, but that it has not helped the trade in fall bulbs.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—On the night of October 23 some one who knew how to get into the safe without using force, entered the store of the Alpha Floral Co. and removed $194 from the strong box.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Prices slumped rather badly last week, due to the increased arrivals of chrysanthemums and to the heavy supplies of other flowers consequent on the abnormally warm weather. Growers are hoping for a severe freeze, which will lessen production and stiffen prices. Chrysanthemums are considerably lower, from $4 to $12 being the range of prices, some special blooms making $2 to $3 per dozen. Some of the later sorts like Bonnaillon, Mrs. Jerome Jones and Eaton, are already seen, while Col. Appleton, Cheltoni and other midseason sorts are of good quality. Clementine Tousey is one of the most popular varieties at the stores. Carnations are becoming overabundant and prices have a downward tendency. Fair Maid is one of the best sellers.

Roses are much harder to move, and for the next two or three weeks will be decidedly druggy. Quite a number of short stems are cleared at $1, while some extra fine blooms fetch $6 to $8. American Beauties are of fine quality, but do not sell well, owing to the presence of so many chrysanthemums. Violets are very abundant, and the quality is excellent. Some of the finest singles come from outdoors, where plants are at present blue with flowers. Good blooms bring 50 cents, a few specials 75 cents, but 35 cents has to be taken for ordinary stock. Tuberoses are 60 cents per dozen stalks. Lily of the valley sells fairly well at $3 to $4. Lilies are not plentiful. Quite a good supply of scarlet, pink and white bouvardia is coming in. There is no change in green stock.

Flower Market Banquet.

The stallholders of the Boston Co-operative Flower Growers' Association, better known as the Park street market, had their annual banquet and business session at Young's hotel on the evening of October 27. After the inner man had been abundantly satisfied with good things, W. C. Stickel, as toastmaster, called on several present for remarks. J. W. Duncan and W. N. Craig responded for the press. Andrew Christiansen gave a short account of a recent European trip. W. H. Elliott described horticultural progress as seen in visits to Wisconsin and Cuba. He was greatly impressed with the marvelous blooming qualities of roses transplanted from tin cans at Havana. F. R. Mathieson gave an interesting account of a recent visit to California, Arizona, New Mexico, Utah and Colorado, telling what he saw of horticultural interest during his travels.

At the business session the treasurer gave the financial statement for the year ending September 30, 1906. Cash on hand October 1, 1905, was $6,677.31; receipts from interest, $383.79; receipts from rents, premiums, etc., $9,499.28; total receipts, $16,560.38. After paying the running expenses and making considerable betterments in the market a cash balance of $6,464.49 remains on hand, which is a most excellent showing. It was voted to pay a dividend of twenty per cent, or $5 per share, to stockholders. The following board of directors was chosen: W. W. Edgar, E. A. Pierce, Alex. Montgomery, E. Sutermeister, Lester Mann and A. Christiansen. George Cartwright remains treasurer, Joseph R. Free manager, and other officials as in 1905-6.

Various Notes.

A good exhibition at Horticultural hall on November 2, 3 and 4 is assured, but a better one would have been forthcoming had the dates been a week later. Owing to the hot summer and warm fall chrysanthemums are unusually late this season and pot plants are especially backward. There is a strong list of entries for the decorated dinner-tables on

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

VICK'S SONS, Rochester, report a quite satisfactory crop of aster seeds in most varieties.

SNOW in the Wisconsin woods the first of this week did not improve the prospects for green.

SMALL lots of radish are coming to light, but the turnip-shaped sorts still are in strong request.

HUNTINGTON & PAGE, Indianapolis, have removed to a larger and better store at 206 N. Delaware street.

THE Pure Culture Spawn Co., C. H. Winkler, manager, has removed its main office to 609 W. Fourth street, Cincinnati, but the factory will remain at Pacific, Mo.

WALTER MOTT has resigned his position as traveling salesman for H. H. Berger & Co., New York, to take a similar place with Bobbink & Atkins, Ruthersford, N. J.

SEED peas are developing scarce. Sharp advances in the price of all the canners' varieties are a feature of the week. It looks as though there will not be enough stock to go around.

THE deliveries that are being made on onion seed are something awful. They seem to give poorer satisfaction to the recipient than the average government free seed package does.

S. M. ISBELL & Co., Jackson, Mich., report that the milling of beans is showing a loss from previous estimates, not only in their own crops but in those of a number of others whose results are known to them.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. A. Berry, of the A. A. Berry Seed Co., Clarinda, Ia.; Alfred Emerich, of Vilmorin, Andrieux & Co., Paris, France; Max Wilhelmi, of F. Barteldes & Co., Lawrence, Kan.; E. J. Sheap, of S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich.

As far as can be judged from present figures, contract orders for garden beans will be filled in full. It may be that milling and picking will pull some of the varieties down to the cutting line, but on the average the bean crops generally are meeting expectations.

THE Leonard Seed Co., of Chicago, has just completed another onion-set warehouse on the Northwestern railroad tracks at Jefferson Park. This firm has always been in the front as growers and shippers of onion sets and this addition to its plant makes its facilities better than ever.

SEED travelers generally report trade conditions to be in first-class shape. The outlook for business appears to be good from the seedsman's standpoint. Orders for future shipment are not hard to book and the higher prices that are being asked do not seem to be a hindrance in getting orders for liberal quantities.

SEED CONCERN'S TROUBLES.

His suspicions aroused by a report of the sale of the total assets of the Elgin Seed Co., Elgin, Ill., to W. H. Goetting for a consideration of $900, John Hoeft, of Park Ridge, Ill., has, according to the Elgin Courier, employed attorneys to investigate the alleged sale, and, if the facts warrant it, says he will institute proceedings against C. G. Heine and W. H. Goetting under the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses or of being accessories to a fraudulent sale. According to the statements of his attorneys, Mr. Hoeft was induced

A culmination of the trouble came October 27, when Attorney Charles Hazel-hurst filed a bill in the City Court on behalf of Z. Latimer, late manager of the company, asking that a receiver be appointed for the concern. The bill declares the corporation to be insolvent, as-company has ceased to do business. C. G.

SOUTHERN SEED CROPS.

D. H. Gilbert, Monticello, Florida, under date of October 22, reports on the seed crops in the south as follows:

"I have made a personal canvass of the crops in this section, both during the growing season and harvest. I saw many of the fields during the summer, in different parts of the south, and talked the matter over with some of the growers in the different sections; and, without exception, the harvest this year is shorter than ever before. This applies especially to watermelon, as this is the main seed crop in this state and Georgia. The muskmelon did fairly well, with the exception of a few varieties. New Orleans Market, the Hackensack, Jenny Lind and Osage failed completely. In fact, all the late plantings practically failed.
The collard turned out an average crop.
I will give the average of the yield of the different seed crops here:

Watermelon, early plantings, about.....	60 lbs.
Watermelon, late plantings, about.....	40 lbs.
Muskmelon, early plantings, about.....	90 lbs.
Muskmelon, late plantings, about.....	20 lbs.
Collard, about	150 lbs.

"Not only were the vines shy of fruit, but the melons were shy of seed.ordinarily it requires about six watermelons to get one pound of seed, and this year it requires about eight. Muskmelons required about forty."

at hearing what he confidently thought was the official death knell of the seed department of Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago. Recently, however, there appeared in the trade journals certain statements those not familiar with the modus operandi of the mammoth institution will, I am afraid, come to the abrupt conclusion that the manager of the seed department had wholly failed to rise to the occasion. Such, however, fortunately not being the case, I will endeavor to elucidate matters. In the first place it is stated—and I have no reason to doubt that the statement is true—that it costs the house 15 cents to handle each order before it reaches a department to be filled. That being the case, it would be unprofitable to fill packet orders. Therefore, the idea originated with the heads of the firm to sell packets in collections only. What seedsman is there today who has tried the same scheme and not found it a more or less dismal failure? The manager of the department, much against his will as well as his experience, I am told, had to insert thirty-eight pages or these collections in his 70-page catalogue. And I wish to say right here, that in the face of all his troubles and difficulties his record there stands by itself—an increase of 450 per cent over the previous year's sales.

How far this fell short of the rosy realization of the firm's daylight dreams it is not my province to guess, but suffice it to say that the scheme was a failure, and the manager, whose troubles were many, had to stand the blame. I have singled out the above instance, from others I could mention from my experience in the work, to show those who have followed the introduction of seeds into the mercantile houses how difficult it is for any manager to make a success of a seed department under the prevailing system.

labor is decidedly low. The men are paid from $2.50 to $5 per week; the higher figure is for well-educated, smart men employed in the higher arts of seed raising. A great many women and children also are employed, the women getting about $1.50 per week; they work about two hours shorter time than the men, whose summer hours are from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. As one might expect, the ordinary German laborer does not go about his work in any great hustle, but takes things with a philosophic calm which augurs well for a ripe old age. The higher grade of workmen, such as those in charge of greenhouses, or whose duty it is to fertilize the choicer flowers, are an intelligent set of men, many of them speaking two or three languages. The cleaning of the flower fields is done principally with small draw hoes, about four inches wide, supplemented by hand weeding. The farms of the best cultivators are kept wonderfully clean; on some one hardly sees a weed in a morning's drive. Extreme care and thoroughness in every detail are found in these establishments. For instance, on the beds of the commonest hardy annuals, seed of which will sell at 20 cents to 25 cents per pound, one will see sticks put to every plant which is ever so little superior in color, form or habit to its neighbors; these plants are kept for stock seed. Again, sugar beet seed is one of the great cultures of some of the growers (I saw a field of seventy-five acres on one farm), and to improve their stock and increase the percentage of sugar, they actually take out a sample of every root which is to be planted for stock seed, and test it for the amount of sugar contained, and if it does not reach a certain standard it is rejected. The method employed is very scientific, but in working is simple, and can be done with great rapidity. At Dippe Bros.' there is a room sixty feet square entirely devoted to this chemical analysis of the sugar beets.

Coldframes play an important part in the growing of plants for seed. Millions of seedlings are raised in them, to be transplanted to the fields, while many half-hardy subjects are entirely grown in them. These frames are low, perhaps not more than nine inches at the back. When the plants are too high for the frames, the lights are raised on stakes driven into the ground and connected by building laths, only a slight pitch being given to run the water off. These frames and the cold sheds before mentioned are always inside walled gardens, where the wind is kept off to a certain extent.

The greenhouses employed are generally narrow, low and partly dug out of the ground on account of the severe winters. The woodwork is heavy, and during hot weather heavy shading is employed, the inside of the houses being almost in twilight by comparison with the blinding sunshine outside. Nearly all the towns I visited were much beautified by trees and flowers; it is quite astonishing to an Englishman to find such a wealth of greenery, and such really beautiful beds of flowers, as are to be seen in even large towns in this part of Germany. Such a thing would be impossible in most of our large cities; but then in Germany, in the non-manufacturing towns, there seems to be almost no smoke—one hardly ever sees a chimney really smoking at any hour of the day. What a blessing it would be if the same could be said of our towns.

If anyone should think of taking a trip through these districts, let him not hesitate on account of the difficulties of the journey, or the want of knowledge of the language, for the journey is made as easy as a long journey can be, while at nearly every large hotel, railway station, or seed establishment, someone can be found to speak English.

even asserted by one custom house broker that he will be surprised if the matter is premitted to drop before someone has paid a more severe penalty than the one for undervaluation.

It appears that the appraisers have for more than one season passed Dutch bulbs on consular invoices which were lower than the prices at which the goods actually had been sold. This seems to have led to all sorts of complications. In a few cases it appears that the consignee was made a party to the irregularity by direct knowledge that he was saved duty by a false oath, but in the great majority of cases it is alleged the saving in duty was made to apply as an allowance on ocean freights, to accomplish which there of course must have been collusion. of the fraud appears to have been an endeavor to get forwarding agents to split up with the shipper whatever sum could be saved in duty by supplying a consular invoice below the actual selling prices of the bulbs. This necessitated charging the consignee with duty on the true values and was so bold an operation that it naturally could not escape exposure.

The result has been that at ports of entry all over the country bulb shipments have been held up, the consignees have been required to produce their invoices for comparison with the consular invoices, and enough discrepancies discovered to set on foot a thorough investigation. Values have been increased, penalties imposed, and there are in the appraisers' stores at Chicago bulbs which have been there since August waiting for the tangle to be unsnarled.

Not by any means all Holland bulb houses have been guilty of these practices, and those that have will of course be required to pay the penalty. Not only will they lose standing and customers, but they will lose the sums for which the importers are held up for penalty, etc., these being deducted when making settlement for the goods. A number of travelers are likely to find it an unusually warm spring in the United States next year.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.—Peter Thomas De Voy, son of the late Thomas De Voy, will continue the business of Thomas De Voy & Son, under the firm name of Thomas De Voy's Son.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—The furious storm of October 20 caused considerable damage to the greenhouses and stock of Thomas Hobday. Two houses, 20x100, were damaged to the extent of $2,500, and the loss on stock destroyed is estimated at $3,000.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, IA.—The Omaha horse show has been making the greatest demand for the flowers. J. F. Wilcox has been disposing of from 300 to 500 chrysanthemums daily since the season opened: Glory of Pacific, Polly Rose, Monrovia, Omega, Lady Harriet, Shaw and Robinson.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THEODORE DE VRIES, a Hollander, has purchased a farm near Alvin, Tex., and is preparing to start a nursery.

THE Phoenix Nursery Co., of Bloomington, Ill., has platted a portion of its property, which will be sold for building purposes.

THE National Nut Growers' Association is in session this week at Scranton, Miss., E. W. Kirkpatrick, of McKinney, Tex., presiding.

THE White Elm Nursery, Oconomowoc, and the Hartland Nursery, owned by Harvey Brown, Hartland, Wis., have been consolidated but each will be continued.

THE Grover Nursery Co., of Rochester, N. Y., has been incorporated with $2,000 capital stock by F. E. Grover, J. H. Welch, and F. A. Parmenter, all of Rochester.

JOHN C. OLMSTED, of Olmsted Bros., Brookline, Mass., has been chosen to lay out the grounds of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition of 1909 at Seattle, Wash. He is now on the ground and will begin the work at once.

THE farmers of Spinks Corners, Mich., placed a joint order for stock with Greening Bros., Monroe, Mich., but first sent one of their number to inspect the nursery to see that no damage had been done to the stock by the severe cold early in October.

J. K. HENBY & SON, Greenfield, Ind., operate one of the large nurseries in the state, nearly 200 acres being covered. They say there has been a falling off in demand for fruit trees, but an increase in sales of forest tree seedlings. Farmers are planting catalpas and black locusts, owing to scarcity of timber for posts and similar uses. Shipments will continue until November 15. Fifty men are packing trees and plants. Shipments will amount to more than $40,000, there being 80,000 standard fruit trees, 100,000 plants, vines, etc., and 1,000,000 forest tree seedlings to go out this fall.

TEXAS NURSERIES.

A. W. Orr, Texas state inspector of nurseries, has filed the following report, dated October 22, with the commissioner of agriculture:

"To this date we have found worthy of certificates 227 nurseries: Class A, small plats of one kind, 71; class B, general retail nurseries, 144; class C, wholesale nurseries, 10; class D, nursery stock dealers, 2. Estimated value of all nurseries, $725,000.

"The general condition of nurseries throughout the state is fully fifty per cent better than it was this time last year. All the better class of nurserymen now feel kindly toward the inspection law and are cheerfully complying with its provisions.

"The life of a certificate should extend to September 1 instead of July 31.

The state should pay inspection charges, employing a chief inspector by the year, and he, when not engaged in the inspection of nurseries or orchards, should be giving public free spraying demonstrations.

"The importation of all kinds of nursery stock should be prohibited except by Texas permits. The proprietors of all nurseries, both in and out of the state, should be held legally responsible for the misrepresentations of their agents."

OTTAWA, KAN.

This is the time of the fall shipments from the Ottawa nurseries. Franklin county has a larger general nursery business than any other county in the state, its nearest competitor being Shawnee, which leads in one line, that of apple seedlings; in fact, it leads any other community in the world in that line. With this large industry around Ottawa there is a demand for many laborers. One company is at present employing 150 men and the proprietors of another concern say they will hire all the men they can get.

This year the orders call for more apple, peach and cherry trees than any other kind, and there is a larger demand for cherry than there has been in any preceding year. Ornamental stock is being planted extensively. Orders for catalpa, black locust and elm lead all the other varieties.

The leading firms have orders from all parts of the United States. A car-load of trees was shipped to the state of Washington last week and next week two car-loads will go to New York. The climate of Franklin county is finely adapted to growing nursery stock and the acreage is being increased, but the area is not more than it once was, for we had a flood here several years ago which about cleaned us out. Ever since then the time has been spent in getting back the acreage to what it was.

THE WEST MICHIGAN FREEZE.

How hard the Michigan fruit belt has been hit by the severe cold weather the first part of October it is impossible to determine at this time, but it seems almost certain from reports received from Watervliet that the prospects of a peach crop for next year have been destroyed. After a thorough examination of his orchards J. F. Clauser is of the opinion that his peach, plum and pear trees were all killed to the snow line. J. S. Burnside is afraid the peach trees have all been killed. An examination of the peach orchards on Woody Crest indicate that they have met a like fate, with the possible exception of those grown in the sod under the mulching system. George W. Grant, of the Paw Paw Valley Nursery Co., also thinks that young trees have been badly injured, if not killed outright. While the lowest temperature in any part of Berrien county was only 10 degrees above zero, yet the fruit trees were full of sap and in no condition to withstand such a freeze.

R. H. Sherwood, owner of the Lake View Orchards and one of the largest fruit growers in Michigan, is not so

SHRUBS FROM SEEDS.

I wish to sow some seeds of shrubs and ornamental trees, and would like your advice concerning the matter. The seeds are Exochorda grandiflora, euonymus, Calycanthus floridus, different kinds of cornus and magnolia. Is it better to sow these seeds in the fall or in the spring?
H. G. N.

Exochorda grandiflora does not produce seeds freely except on old plants. Seeds may be sown in early spring, preferably in a frame where they can have some shade and the proper moisture until germination. Cuttings of this shrub do not root readily, but it easily can be layered. Euonymus, such as alatus and Europæus, should have the seed stratified, and be sown in spring, either under sash or outdoors in shallow drills. The seeds germinate freely. The evergreen euonymus roots freely from cuttings any time during the summer. The variety E. alatus may be propagated in a frame from well ripened wood in late summer. These are preferable to seedlings.

Calycanthus floridus may be propagated from seeds sown in spring. It also is readily increased by division and from suckers. Some red branched varieties of cornus, such as C. sanguinea, C. alba and C. Baileyi can be raised from seeds, which usually do not germinate until the following spring. These same sorts can be increased by cuttings of mature wood, which root freely. The well known C. floridus may also be propagated in the same way. The cuttings should be inserted in a shaded frame during late summer.

Magnolia seeds are best sown under glass as soon as ripe. The general method of propagation adopted for most of this genus is veneer or side grafted on potted stock under glass. Magnolias are hard to transplant; hence it is desirable to pot off seedlings singly, rather than place them in flats. Grafted stock also gives best results if planted out from pots.

HARDY STOCK.

Camellias, azaleas and rhododendrons, when properly handled, are among our most satisfactory plants for outdoor growing. It has to a certain extent been an idea with many people that these shrubs are not hardy, but I have yet to see any place on this coast that they cannot be successfully grown. They are all fond of considerable moisture, especially in the growing season, and, in the case of the azalea and rhododendron, fond of good drainage. This is especially true with the first named. For these a partially shaded situation should be secured if possible, as they will make much more growth and of a better color, if they are not exposed too much to the direct sun's rays.

But with the camellia, I have had better success in planting them directly out in the open ground, and always give them an abundance of water. I find the Belgian varieties are of quicker growth than the Japanese stock, and make more symmetrical trees, but they are both equally hardy and should be more generally planted.

In this climate the plants usually set such a quantity of buds that it is a good plan to thin them out about this time of the year, and much finer flowers will be had in consequence. Many more buds are set when they are planted in the sun than when they are in the shade; and, except for the possible burning of the flowers by the early spring sunshine, there is no advantage in planting anywhere except in the open ground. With us camellias attain a large size. We have specimen plants in the neighborhood of San Francisco from ten to twelve feet in height, and six to eight feet in diameter. Such trees produce many thousands of blossoms yearly. They commence to flower early in December, and continue until April. This is another factor in favor of this beautiful shrub, as it gives quantities of bloom when flowers are very scarce. In common with azaleas and rhododendrons, camellias do not like to be pruned, but should the plants become too large or uneven, they can be trimmed during the months of April or March. That is, just before they commence to make a new growth.

With azaleas, either the cultivated or wild varieties, good drainage is absolutely necessary, together with soil that is not too heavy. The wild azaleas of California, I have found, can be grown to the best advantage in partial shade, and the Indian azaleas in complete shade. They flower freely, and during their growing season the ground should be kept well worked, in addition to having a light coat of well rotted manure. Do not disturb the soil too close to the plants, however, as the azalea does not root deeply, and much damage can be done in this way. Our native azaleas grow to a height of fifteen feet and are ornamental shrubs.

With rhododendrons the same rules can be followed. They also want good drainage and plenty of moisture. They are gross feeders during their growing season, and quickly respond to proper attention with an increased amount of blossom. They are not fond of being pruned, and in common with the azalea, this class of work must be done sparingly, and then at the time when the flowers are gone and the growing season is about to begin. SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business has been quiet for the last two weeks. There is little doing in any line except that of funeral work, and even that has fallen off considerably. The weather continues warm and dry. The warm days and nights, however, are keeping the prices of stock down, and the quantity produced is more than the average at this time of the year.

Chrysanthemums are our staple article at this time. While they are hardly up to the quality produced a year ago, they are generally good throughout. The price is away down, considering what should be charged for stock at this season. Indoor mums bring a fair price, although probably a shade cheaper than that of last season. Carnations, especially stock of only medium length stems, are cheap, while the fancy varieties hold up well. Roses of the shorter grades also are quite plentiful at this time. The weather favors them considerably, and the quality, even of the younger plants, is fair.

Other classes of stock move slowly. Valley is not in abundant supply, but there is ample to go around. Lilies of all kinds are scarce. Smilax is plentiful and good. Maidenhair is becoming scarcer. Violets that should, under ordinary circumstances, be plentiful are in only limited supply. They cost the retailers about $1 per dozen bunches. We are badly in need of rain, and until it comes we cannot expect much in the line of good, healthy business.

Various Notes.

F. Ludemann, of the Pacific Nursery, is handling a large quantity of Dutch bulbs this season. He reports out-of-town orders as being brisk at present.

Inquiry at the various seed stores brings information that everything is quiet in that line. A few good showers are needed to put planting seeds into the minds of the rural public.

Domoto Bros. are cutting many thousands of extra fine Bonnaffons. They ship about half their stock to the interior of the state and to Nevada.

A. Lacazette, of Fruitvale, has a splendid crop of Brides and Maids, from which he has been cutting for several weeks. His stock is in good shape throughout.

The Society Hortensia had a regular meeting October 27, at its hall in Alameda. About fifty were present. A spring flower show was discussed and several interesting papers read.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

The condition of business remains unchanged. There is a reasonable amount of decorative work and counter trade, but no more than should be expected at this season.

Many of our society people who spend the summer doing Europe in autos or climbing its mountains are so exhausted when they reach home that they remain at their country places for a time to rest. To their shame be it said, there are many Americans who are more interested, and will spend twice as much money, in any little old European borough than in their own capital. That is the class which showers tips with liberal hands on the other side. At home they are not willing to pay a fair price. Pardon this digression from matters strictly horticultural.

Various Notes.

On October 27 the President was 48 years old, and friends remembered him with many choice flowers. About the largest and handsomest bouquet was presented by the superintendent of buildings and grounds under the War Department. It was made and the flowers were grown at the greenhouses of the Propagating Gardens.

To the funeral of Senor Munoz, late minister from Guatemala, which was held at St. Matthew's church, October 24, the President sent a fine floral offering. A number of other beautiful designs were prepared by J. H. Small & Sons.

The weather is now much cooler, and consequently more favorable to growing stock. Chrysanthemums are having the best of it in the stores, though there is a reasonable demand for roses, carnations and violets. Carnations are taken as fast as they come in, and this condition is likely to prevail till after the holidays. A. F.

SAVANNA, ILL.—J. Y. Lambert has just completed a greenhouse 20x40, of the best construction. He reports all stock looking fine, and looks for a prosperous season.

MORRISON, ILL.—Davis Bros. have recently made extensive improvements in their range of twelve greenhouses, and built a new show room 24x40. Their cucumbers will be ready for market in about two weeks.

A "New Wonder" For 1907

The Variegated Seedling

IMPERIAL

IMPERIAL Carnation has been shown extensively and took a prize at Philadelphia last Fall, besides ten Certificates of Merit and Diplomas from various places. The color is a variegation of delicate pink similar to the shade in Enchantress and a deeper pink of a pleasing shade. A splendid keeper and fine shipper. Flowers are from 3 inches to 4 inches in diameter, nicely formed, very fragrant and with an exceptionally strong calyx, less than a half-dozen splitting last season. Stems run as much as four feet in length, with 30-inch stem as early as November. A very early, free and continuous bloomer from October to July. A vigorous grower, but with no extra grass, every shoot making a flower.

The "Greatest Wonder" of 1907

The New Pink Seedling

PINK IMPERIAL CARNATION

THIS Carnation cannot help but be a winner, the color is a most pleasing shade of pink, one which has long been wanted in the cut flower market. It is a good sport of Imperial and has all its good qualities.

MABELLE

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. Delivery January 5 to 10 and later. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Fall trade seems to have come to stay; everyone is busy. Numerous weddings and other social affairs have called for decorations, some of them quite elaborate. Small trade Saturday was good, notwithstanding the extremely bad weather.

Stock of all kinds is plentiful except carnations, which are still short in supply. However, chrysanthemums make up for the shortage in everything else. Some good stock is coming in, and oceans of it, but prices are a little lower than other years. Beauties and lilies have been forced to the rear and prices have fallen. Green stock of all kinds is a glut; many growers, having nothing else to cut, are sending in extra quantities of greens.

Various Notes.

Geo. A. McWilliams is doing jury duty. He put in most of last week on the celebrated Hooe case; and, as there is no telling how long this case will last, he may have an opportunity of putting in an extra week, which is not a pleasant prospect.

A number of growers have been in the habit of selling their own stock when possible, but when there was no market for it, sent it into the commission houses, and in a few instances making an awful howl when it was lost. The wholesale men have about come to the conclusion the only thing to do is to refuse to handle anything for them.

Fred Burki and his family have gone to Virginia, visiting Mr. Burki's sister, stopping at Washington, D. C., and other points of interest. Hoo-Hoo.

NEW ORLEANS.

Club Meeting.

At the October meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society a committee was appointed to devise ways and means of giving a social session in a short time. The members appointed to serve by President Otto Abele were: R. Lockerbie, J. Steckler, J. A. Newsham, B. M. Wichers and H. Kracke. At this gathering the members will be expected to discuss practical means of furthering home industry. Refreshments will be served and an entertaining program arranged.

J. A. Newsham brought with him a number of home-grown Bride, Bridesmaid and Richmond roses. Mr. Newsham said the flowers represented his first efforts in growing roses on an extensive scale. Mr. Newsham also showed chrysanthemums which he grew in his nursery. The members expressed the opinion that the flowers were equal to any brought to this city from the north.

B. M. Wichers showed specimens of Boston ferns, and also gave the members a remedy for caterpillars, which is as follows: A level teaspoonful of Paris green, three tablespoonfuls of lime, in five gallons of water. This liquid must be sprinkled lightly every two weeks.

Otto Abele spoke for the local florists who attended the convention in Dayton and mentioned the fact that H. Papworth was one of the judges. Mr. Abele said the northern florists entertained the New Orleans visitors cordially.

Charles Weiss, honorary member of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, one of its founders, the oldest member, and one of the veteran florists of the south, passed away at the Soldiers' Home at the age of 87 years. The deceased was born in Bavaria, Germany, but came to this country when quite a child. He served in the Mexican war, and also in the civil war, afterwards devoting his time to the care of flowers. He was never established in business for himself. Many families accustomed to see his familiar figure in the garden district, and who were interested in his life work, sustained quite a loss in his death. He was buried with the honors of a good soldier.

The Market.

The few florists who had decorating to do last week were fortunate, as there was simply nothing doing in the regular run of business. Complaints of dullness were heard on all sides, and still stock kept well cleared up, the small shipments probably accounting for this.

Mums, with the exception of yellow, which are overplentiful, are moving well, prices ranging from 75 cents to $2 per dozen. Roses find a ready sale at from $3 to $8 per hundred. Carnations are scarce. The price ranges from $1.50 to $2.50 per hundred, and at this figure there are not enough to go half around.

Various Notes.

Robert Flowerday has been confined to the house for some time, having had a severe attack of grippe. Several decorations have kept Mr. Flowerday's help busy.

Walter Taepke is rejoicing, as they will soon say "twenty-three for you" to the baseburner which has done service many years, but is to be replaced by steam from the central heating plant.

The Bomb Floral Co. has just completed the installation of a new icebox. This box is really in two compartments. The entrance, right out of the store, is into a chamber for displaying the best stock, while by going on you come into a larger room for storing stock for work, ferns, smilax, etc. It is the intention of Albert Pochelon to cool the whole box with the cold air furnished by nature, although a compartment for ice in warm weather is also installed.

L. Coatsworth, of Chicago, stopped off at Detroit while on his way to Canada on a hunting trip.

Experiments are being carried on in the parks and boulevards for eliminating the dust nuisance by sprinkling, or rather soaking, the road with a mixture of crude oil and some other chemical. The oil is furnished at 10 cents per gallon, including the sprinkling, which is done by wagons similar to street sprinklers, except that the stream is heavier and directed straight down. The cost is about $600 per mile of roadway. The only objection so far is that the ground assumes a dark color, which is not in keeping with the surroundings. By applying this oil in the fall and again the following spring the road will need no more attention for two years.

A new firm, to be known as Lachman & Gooding, will open a retail flower store about November 1, at 16 and 18 Wilcox street.

The soil in the flower beds in the parks is being given a good dose of air-

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Weather conditions last week were against business. Last Saturday at 4 o'clock in the morning the thermometer registered 40 degrees. A genial sun sent it to 70 degrees at 1 o'clock in the afternoon. The air continued balmy until 5 o'clock, when a change occurred. The wind began traveling twenty-six miles an hour, and within an hour the mercury dropped from 67 degrees to 59 degrees; meanwhile it rained at intervals. About 7 o'clock the wind veered west and it cleared off nicely, but much colder.

The weather conditions made cut flowers scarce, and any kind of a bloom was salable. A considerable amount of wedding work was done, and a few dinners were given. Chrysanthemums are coming more heavily, but seem to be more in demand than in former years.

Carnations are the only flowers that are lacking in supply. Golden Gate is more plentiful now, and American Beauties are holding their own. Mignonette is flowering, and will be on the market shortly. Cosmos is still plentiful and a few dahlias are to be seen, selling at fair prices, while violets are coming in more abundantly.

There is a great demand for ferns. The retail windows have decorations mostly of ferns and mums, which make a desirable change.

Various Notes.

A general transfer of the various superintendents of the city parks went into effect October 24. The men affected and their new duties are: Superintendent N. F. Flitton, to Patterson park, transferred from Clifton park; Superintendent Boone, to Clifton park, from Druid Hill park; Superintendent C. L. Seybold, to Carroll park, from Patterson park; Superintendent Wessels, to Druid Hill park from Riverside park.

The only reason given by the park board for the change was the stereotyped one, the good of the service.

Charles Cook, on North Mosher street, is having trouble with his boiler and pipes. Mr. Cook is suffering from a sore foot, which may prove to be of a serious nature.

John Oler, Arlington, cut from fifty-eight sashes 26,000 single violets from October 13, 1905, to March 31, 1906.

Stoll Bros. are making some fine funeral designs.

The Gardeners' Club has its announcements concerning the chrysanthemum show, to be held next month, placed in all the florists' stores.

G. A. Lotze and Miss Alice Taylor, of Glen Burnie, Md., were married in Baltimore, October 14. The event was expected, but the exact date was not known at the club. The bride is a daughter of

Mr. and Mrs. G. Taylor, of Glen Burnie. Mr. Lotze has named a new chrysanthemum, in honor of his wife, Mrs. G. A. Lotze. It is from Nellie Pockett and Alice Byron, pure white, large, and one of the most perfect flowers on the market. It sold readily last week for $4 per dozen. Mr. Lotze has sent specimens to the chrysanthemum committee at Philadelphia for a certificate.

The grandson of the late Anthony Cook has purchased five and one-half acres of land at Catonsville, where he will erect several houses this fall.

G. V. Smith, Waverly, Md., is repairing his houses and giving them a new appearance. J. L. T.

DES MOINES, IA.—A new botanical laboratory and greenhouse will be built for the State University at Iowa City. The laboratory will be a two-story brick, 30x30, and the conservatory, 12x48.

Current Comment.

Business conditions were good last week, stock of all kinds being cleared up. Roses and carnations are both improving in quality and quantity, while of mums you can get plenty. Fortunately the demand has been good and there is no surplus on hand.

Huntington & Page have moved from their store on Market street to 206 North Delaware street. They have now a fine, large storeroom and can better take care of their trade.

The Tomlinson market was a chrysanthemum show itself last Saturday, and from now on will be well supplied with cut flowers and plants.

H. W. Rieman has some nice seedling mums that will be heard from later.

Baur & Smith's new carnation, Pocahontas, is showing up well, also a scarlet seedling and one or two others.

H. Junge has recovered from the effects of his recent accident, due to an unruly horse. The roses his firm have been sending to the city were not affected. They are as good as ever. S.

TORONTO.

N. Stewart Dunlop, tax and insurance commissioner of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, who also is head of the company's floral department, was in the city yesterday. He stated that 150,000 bulbs are being sent out by the company to employees at stations, divisional points and section houses, to be planted this autumn. These bulbs go to over 1,000 gardens. In addition to this shipment, shrubs, perennials, etc., in large numbers also are being sent out all over the system. This floral department has become an interesting as well as an important one in the company. The bulbs are imported from Holland, and the employees wishing flowers are carefully instructed how to grow them. Last summer there were flowers in bloom all along the company's lines, Mr. Dunlop stated, from seeds and bulbs sent out free by the company.

GRAND FORKS, N. D.—E. S. Kneeland, formerly of Hillsboro, who recently constructed a greenhouse here, has moved his family to this city.

WEST DERRY, N. H.—Mrs. Smith, the wife of Freeman Smith, died at a Boston hospital a few days since after an operation. She had been in feeble health for some time. The body was taken to Brentwood for burial. Mr. and Mrs. Smith had lived in Derry two or three years and had many friends.

KEWANEE, ILL.—The firm of Hamilton & Plummer recently made a special sale of ferns. As an inducement, everyone who visited the greenhouse and registered was given a number. At a drawing, those holding winning numbers were given a fern. So successful was the plan that the sale has been continued.

The Test of QUALITY

CYPRESS is conceded by all authorities to be the best wood for greenhouse construction and quite a little has been said about the "right kind of cypress." What way have you of knowing the "right kind of cypress?" Can you tell by looking at a cypress plank just where the sap lies and what kind it is?

One way to be sure that you get the "right kind" of cypress, is to place your order with a firm that makes a test of every piece before shipping and employs an expert to detect cypress defects. Send for "Why Use Cypress" and "The Mummy's Case."

The Big Side of the Smallest Details

We put tremendous stress on our smallest detail, even devoting entire ads. to one seemingly insignificant feature—we do this because we are convinced that there's nothing more convincing that a concern can erect a "perfect finished" house than the actual evidence that each detail is not only "perfect and finished" but has strong points not possessed by others. Take for instance, the matter of our ridge—we believe it's worth while to have the cap and ridge line up perfectly, not only as a matter of good workmanship and looks but to insure an absolutely even overhang on each side to give the sash ample protection from the weather.

It's a small matter but it's the difference between a zig-zag ridge with no assured weather protection and a perfect straight line up and a cap that keeps out the most driving rain.

THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

CHICAGO.

The man who coined the phrase "The World's Greatest Flower Show" knew exactly what it was that the public would throng to see at the Coliseum beginning November 6. It is no misnomer. Last year's exhibition at Chicago, which was called "The Million Dollar Show," established a record as the "greatest ever," but it is relegated to a second place by the exhibition now in progress.

Last year the fear that not sufficient stock would be forthcoming to make an adequate show in so great a building led to some overcrowding. This year this defect has been remedied by using smaller groups of decorative plants and by devoting the annex, which last year was given to the lectures, to a part of the display of cut blooms.

The arrangement is a decided improvement over last year's, the broad promenade down the center of the building being bordered with bay trees joined by streamers of laurel wreathing, the plant exhibits ranged on either side, with the model gardens occupying the ends of the hall, and the spaces between the arches along this side being occupied, as last year, by the exhibits of the retail florists. The whole arrangement is greatly to the credit of Manager George Asmus, whose work improves with each year of his experience.

It is to the committee on decorations—C. A. Samuelson and W. J. Smyth—that a large part of the credit for the general effect must be given. The horse show canopy of green and yellow was retained. Beneath it are festooned long lines of laurel wreathing leading from loops of the same material in the center of the great span down to where the arches cut the balcony. These are spaced every few feet, and present an excellent appearance, especially at night. The balcony is looped with interlapping garlands of the same material, in all about 15,000 yards of laurel wreathing having been employed. It is probably the largest quantity of laurel wreathing ever got together for one purpose. In addition a carload of wild smilax has been used to cover the structural parts of the building below the line of the balcony.

As was the case last year, the circle of retailers' displays not only is a wonderful attraction in itself, but serves to bind the show into a harmonious whole. Each one of the spaces formed by the steelwork of the building is occupied by a retailer, and there were others who would have made exhibits had there been spaces for them. There is a greater variety in their displays than was the case last year, and several have gone to large expense to provide a fitting setting for their stock. The retailers appear to thoroughly appreciate the advertising value of such a showing, nevertheless credit should be given them for what their enterprise adds to the interest of the exhibition as a whole. They are using only the choicest of material in great variety and changing the display each day, so that there is constant novelty. The diagram reproduced in this issue shows who are exhibiting and the location of each display.

The participation of the Chrysanthemum Society of America has added not a little in point of trade interest. It has given Chicago growers an opportunity to see many of the season's novelties before placing their orders for stock.

Usually they have been compelled to act on the reports from eastern exhibitions. Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., is one of the largest eastern exhibitors, his cut blooms having traveled in excellent shape, and are a center of interest. His collection of forty blooms in forty varieties never has been equaled so far as western exhibitions go. Wm. Duckham, president of the Chrysanthemum Society and superintendent of the estate of D. Willis James, Madison, N. J., almost swept the decks in the classes for six blooms, and what probably affords him greatest pleasure is to show western growers how the chrysanthemum bearing his name looks when well grown. Possibly it is climate rather than culture that makes the difference, but the variety, as he shows it, is a complete surprise to Chicago growers who know it only as locally produced. But there is the same difference in Mr. Duckham's Beatrice May and the same sort as grown here. Another Madison grower who has splendid blooms is R. Vince, gardener to R. D. Foote. All told, Chicago never has had such fine cut mums as the Madison gentlemen have brought, and the vases of 100, all home grown entries, also show an advance in quality.

Arthur Herrington, of Madison, contributes the largest chrysanthemum plant ever seen in Chicago. It occupies a point of vantage directly in front of the entrance, and is easily the most noticeable feature in the eyes of the general public. The plant is about eight feet in diameter, and is said to carry 500 flowers, each about three inches across.

The Chicago parks and private gardeners are exhibiting as usual.

Special Features.

The special features are so numerous that it is wholly impossible to mention any considerable part of them. One that cannot be overlooked is A. Herrington's plant of Chrysanthemum Mrs. J. R. Tranter, which is said to be the largest chrysanthemum plant ever exhibited in the United States and probably in the world. It is about eight feet in diameter and carries over 500 flowers; not guesswork; Mr. Herrington says he counted them. It certainly is an evidence of skillful culture and arrived in perfect condition after its 1,000-mile journey from Madison, N. J. The packing of itself was an example of thoroughness. It was crated so that no flower would have been bruised had the plant been tipped upside down.

The dooryard scene by Vaughan's Seed Store is one of the best things in the show. J. S. Wilson and Carl Cropp were the creators. The lawn is bordered with shrubbery and cut by flower beds containing tender stock of many kinds in full flower, grown especially for the purpose. It is one of the finest educational features of the exhibition.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, besides his usual entries, has Begonia Agatha, pink, a cross between Moonlight and Socotrana. It was given a place by the fountain and lost its beauty by reason of the steady fall of spray, but it appeared a fine thing.

Edward Amerpohl, of Janesville, Wis., duplicates his convention exhibit of Nephrolepis Amerpohli; one large plant and a number in 3-inch pots which show the full character. It is not a large table but it catches the eye.

Nephrolepis Whitmani, from H. H. Barrows, Whitman, Mass., makes a fine group, attracting much attention.

The John C. Moninger Co. exhibits a model greenhouse with an attractive setting, and the Foley Mfg. Co. has its sign on the greenhouse which is part of A. I. Simmons' display.

A fine group of cyclamen was staged by E. Oeschlin, of the Garfield Park Floral Co., Chicago.

J. N. May, Summit, N. J., brought a table of hardy mums, not for competition.

August Jurgens has a beautiful round table of begonias edged with English ivy.

C. W. McKellar staged some splendid orchids grown by George Field, Washington, D. C. The varieties were Vanda caerulea and Dendrobium formosum.

Peter Reinberg's vase of Mrs. Marshall Field rose attracts even more attention than last year, when it was first shown, and the quality is better.

The show will continue open until 11 p. m. Sunday.

One plant single—Vaughan first, M. A. Ryerson second.

One plant anemone—Vaughan first.

Three standards—Vaughan first, A. S. Trude, Chicago, second.

Five standards—Vaughan first, A. S. Trude second.

Five specimens in five varieties—Vaughan first, A. S. Trude second, M. A. Ryerson third.

Vaughan had the only entry in the classes for five specimen plants single, five specimen plants pompon, twenty-five grown to single stem, and grafted plant, and was awarded first premium except in the class for five singles, where the quality was so poor the judges gave it only second money.

Miscellaneous Plants.

Collection orchids, E. G. Uihlein, first; ten palms, Geo. Wittbold Co., first; one palm, Geo. Wittbold Co., first; Boston fern or sport, C. A. Samuelson, first; Vaughan, second.

Asparagus Sprenger, Anton Then, first; Vaughan, second.

Ten araucarias, Vaughan, first, A. McAdams, second.

Gloire de Lorraine begonias, J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, first.

Flowering plant, J. A. Peterson, second on Begonia Agatha.

Six Bostons, C. A. Samuelson, first; Vaughan, second.

Group of fifty feet, Vaughan, first; J. J. Mitchell, second.

Group of 100 feet, Geo. Wittbold Co., first; E. G. Uihlein, second.

Five flowering tobacco plants, M. A. Ryerson, second.

Fern dish, E. G. Uihlein, first; C. Frauenfelder, second.

Basket of plants, C. Frauenfelder, first; A. McAdams, second.

Strings of asparagus, Amling, first.

Orchid plant in bloom, E. G. Uihlein, first.

Roses.

The roses were staged on Wednesday and brought out about the keenest competition ever seen at a western exhibit, and Chicago shows are noted for the splendid displays of roses. There were not so many entries as usual, but quality was better than ever, and it was nip and tuck in most of the classes. It took the judges most of the afternoon to get through their task.

Twenty-five Beauty, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Bassett & Washburn, second; Peter Reinberg, third.

Forty red, Peter Reinberg, first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second; Bassett & Washburn, third.

Forty Gate or Uncle John, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Peter Reinberg, second.

Forty Chatenay, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Peter Reinberg, second.

Forty Bride, Bassett & Washburn, first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second.

Forty Maid, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first.

Forty Killarney, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first.

Forty any other, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Peter Reinberg, second.

One hundred Beauty, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Bassett & Washburn, second; Peter Reinberg, third; Wm. Dittmann, fourth.

One hundred red, Peter Reinberg, first, on Liberty; Poehlmann Bros., second, on Richmond; Wieter Bros., third.

One hundred Gate or Uncle John, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Wieter Bros., second.

One hundred Bride, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Benthey-Coatsworth Co., second; Wieter Bros., third.

One hundred Maid, Benthey-Coatsworth Co., first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second.

One hundred Chatenay, Peter Reinberg, first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second; Wieter Bros., third.

One hundred any other, Benthey-Coatsworth Co., first, on Killarney; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, on Perle; Peter Reinberg, third, on Perle.

Rose never before exhibited, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, on sport of Chatenay; Bassett & Washburn, second; E. G. Hill Co., third.

Variety not yet in commerce, E. G. Hill Co., first, on No. A 1, a red of American-Beauty shade that took every grower's eye.

Cuttings.

The program for the rest of the week is as follows: Thursday, carnations, violets, valley, bouquets; Friday, miscellaneous plants, private gardeners' classes, seedling mums and seedling carnations, second display of American Beauty roses; Saturday, floral arrangements in baskets; Sunday, closing day.

The lectures on gardening are handicapped by the fact that there is no place to hold them except in the hall in the second story of the annex—not easy to find, even when one is looking for it, and possessed of unusually poor acoustics. But the lectures are a popular feature. The speakers are C. B. Whitnall, E. G. Routzahn, J. C. Blair, Frederic Crane-field, a National Cash Register man, and Miss Sipe, the latter announced to talk to school teachers and pupils on Saturday. The subjects concern amateur gardening.

The Illinois State Florists' Association holds a meeting today. So does the S. A. F. executive board and the National Council of Horticulture. The Florists' Club meets tonight before the banquet.

P. J. Hauswirth again has charge of the admissions, but his duties are not so arduous as last year. This time the Coliseum management get their rent on a percentage basis, so they have to help handle the cash.

The flower booth is conducted by Will Kyle and all profit goes to Mrs. James Hartshorne. As most of the stock is donated, a snug sum should be realized. Mr. Kyle says especial thanks are due Orr & Lockett, who built and installed a special refrigerator for the sale.

The judges are John Burton, of Philadelphia; John F. Cowell, of Buffalo, and John T. Temple, of Davenport, three Johns whose combined experience covers the whole range of floriculture.

It always pays to read the schedule. After some of the growers, and few of them are artists, had staged their big vases of 100 mums they discovered that the premium list said arrangement was to be considered. The judges not getting around until late, however, the jostling of the crowd made all pretty well organized, and all departments in such good hands, that everything moves smoothly and the maximum result is achieved with the minimum effort.

Visitors.

Thursday is visitors' day, the largest number always being present on the third day of the show, and on that evening the annual banquet will be given at the Auditorium. Visitors the first of the week included:

Chrysanthemum Society Meets.

The annual business session of the Chrysanthemum Society of America was called to order by President Wm. Duckham at 3 p. m. Wednesday at the Coliseum. About a score of members were present. J. N. May read the report of F. H. Lemon, keeper of last year's minutes, and Mr. Duckham read his address, thanking the society for the honor it had done him and expressing the pleasure all felt at visiting Chicago again. He also related some of the experiences of his last year's trip to Scotland. Secretary Fraser reported a large delinquent list; and dead names were ordered dropped. E. D. Smith was deputized to keep up the list of introductions, but asked the aid of all who send out new sorts to the extent of supplying data. Treasurer May reported a balance of $259.96. The annual report was ordered printed in pamphlet form. F. H. Lemon read a paper by E. G. Hill discussing the influence of climate in chrysanthemum culture. It was full of interest and led to some account of the effect of early frost in hastening the development of blooms, by W. R. Pierson, A. Herrington, C. H. Totty and E. D. Smith.

Officers were elected as follows: President, A. J. Loveless, Lenox, Mass.; vice-president, Wm. Kleinheinz, Philadelphia; secretary, David Fraser, Pittsburg; treasurer, J. N. May.

Invitations for 1907 were read, from Jamestown, St. Louis and Indianapolis. The choice was left to the executive committee.

DECATUR, ILL.—About 26,000 tulip bulbs have been planted in the city parks.

WACO, TEX.—C. H. Mayer will enter exhibits at the Denison flower show in November.

The effort to add new features each day is well repaid in added interest. The orchids were missed on Tuesday and became an especially strong attraction Wednesday, with the roses. E. G. Uihlein was the chief exhibitor, staging a magnificent table. The Selfridge collection was missed.

TARRYTOWN.

The Tarrytown Horticultural Society's eighth fall exhibition, held in Music hall, October 30 to November 1, was without a doubt the best the society has ever put up, and reflects great credit on the manager, James Smith, for neat and tasteful arrangement. The season being somewhat late, quite a few of the blooms lacked just a few days of being at their best, but in spite of this fact, the blooms taken all through, were a magnificent lot. The classes were all well niled and the competition keen in most instances. The dinner-table decorations, introduced last year, proved to be one of the features of the exhibitions. While last year there were but two competitors, this year there were eight, making the variety of design both beautiful and instructive. This class was judged by three competent ladies, who after considerable deliberation, awarded the coveted prize to James Balantyne, gardener to Mrs. Geo. Lewis. The prize was a beautiful silver cup, given by Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish. The winning table was tastefully done with catleyas and Adiantum Farleyense.

In the cut bloom classes, Girard Foster, Lenox, Mass., Edwin Jenkins, gardener, carried off first prize for both the twenty-five and twelve blooms, Wm. Rockefeller, Tarrytown, Geo. Middleton, gardener, running a close second. The competition in these two classes alone filled three large tables, and made an array of blooms which we can safely say has not been equaled in any of this season's shows. Among the more prominent varieties shown were Beatrice May, Lady Hopetoun, Mrs. A. J. Miller, Mrs. Wm. Knox, Morton F. Plant, Mrs. H. Partridge, M. Marc di Mons, Mrs. F. F. Thompson, Montigne, May Siddon, Ben Wells, and T. S. Richardson.

In the class calling for thirty-six blooms, six varieties, six of each, E. Berolzheimer, Tarrytown, David McFarlane, gardener, carried off first honors. Among his best varieties were Lady Hopetoun, Merza and Glenview.

The show of bush plants was not so large as in former years. The lateness of the season had no doubt a good deal to do with this, as only the early varieties were shown, the late ones not being up. The first prize for group of palms and foliage plants went to Mrs. J. B. Trevor, Yonkers, Howard Nichols, gardener, who showed a lot of clean, well-grown stuff. The same exhibitor led in many of the plant and fern classes. E. Berolzheimer was first for a table of plants, which was one of the best exhibits in the show.

Mrs. Geo. Lewis led in most of the rose classes, carrying off two silver cups, one for Richmond and the other for Killarney. The carnation exhibit was large and fine, but with the exception of F. R. Pierson Co.'s Winsor nothing new was shown. Winsor shows up well, and will no doubt prove a winner. The same company showed a dwarf form of Piersoni, which was awarded a certificate of merit.

The Elmsford Nurseries, Scott Bros., won the society's silver medal for the best new decorative plant, with Dracæna Elmsfordii. This is a seedling from D. Godseffiana, and is a decided improvement on the old variety, the markings being much brighter and more distinct.

Among other successful competitors for special prizes were Theodore Trevillian, O. B. Jennings, Mrs. H. Fairfield Osborne, and James Donald.

The exhibit of F. R. Pierson Co., not for competition, consisted of a fine vase of American Beauty roses, several vases of fine carnations, also palms, ferns, etc. Their Winsor carnation attracted a great deal of attention. Other exhibits were orchids in pots, by Lager & Hurrell, and a vase of white chrysanthemums by Charles H. Totty. W. S. C.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Philadelphia chrysanthemum show opened its doors to the flower loving public November 6, to as good a show as was ever seen in Philadelphia. While there are not so many exhibits as in former years, the blooms are very fine. The stairway is well filled with cut mums of enormous size and fine color. Some of the varieties are Mrs. William Duckham and William Duckham, Nellie Pockett and Merza.

The main hall is well filled with specimen chrysanthemum plants, ferns and two collections of orchids, one from Lager & Hurrell, of Summit, N. J., and the other from Julius Roehrs Co. Edw. A. Schmidt, Radnor, Pa., shows a fine collection of crotons, which took first prize. The names of the varieties are Thompsoni, Mrs. Swan, Evansianum, Canterburyana, Queen Victoria, Hookerianum, superbissimum. Thomas Long, gardener for George W. Childs Drexel, also shows a fine collection of ferns, on which he took first prize. E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., shows a fine pink mum, Mlle. E. Chabanne, which looks as though it would make a good commercial variety. Beatrice May is also a good variety, being a fine white of large size. William Robertson, gardener for John W. Pepper, has a fine collection of marantas, which make a fine display besides capturing first prize. William K. Harris has a collection of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. The H. F. Michell Co. has a fine display. H. A. Dreer has a nice assortment of plants in all sizes which are greatly admired.

A full account of the show, including the prize winners, will appear next week.

BOSTON.

The date set for the Boston show proved to be ten days too early. Chrysanthemums are unusually late and, as we forecasted a week ago, the display of these was far below the average, not only in quantity, but also in quality. Neither the big specimen plants nor big blooms are now as popular in Boston as they were a few years ago. The demand is for medium sizes in each section, both on private and commercial places, and the inevitable result is that the blooms and plants which were Boston's pride for so many years are now almost a thing of the past. Other cities are growing them now, but they in turn will tire of them and demand something different, as Boston is doing. Chrysanthemums as flowers are not losing popularity, however, and the queen of autumn will continue to draw crowds as in past years.

Turning first to the cut bloom classes, there was a good competition. For twenty-five blooms in twenty-five varieties Thomas Proctor, gardener to R. W. Peterson, Lenox, won with a splendid set of well finished flowers. His varieties were the latest. Peter B. Robb was second and W. Whitman, M. Sullivan gardener, third. The last named won for six vases, ten blooms in each. In the incurved, reflexed and other classes the prize-winners were Mrs. Lester Leland, G. H. Waterton gardener; Mrs. E. A. Converse, D. F. Roy gardener, and Peter B. Robb.

For six blooms, introductions of 1906, W. Whitman won with Mrs. D. W. James, Tioga, Crocus, Old Gold, Mayor Weaver and Mrs. W. Knox; D. F. Roy was second.

Geo. F. Fabyan, James Stuart gardener, had the best ten blooms pink, showing M. F. Plant; second, A. F. Whitin, with Wm. Duckham; third, Mrs. E. M. Gill, with Dr. Enguehard. For red, W. Whitman was first and G. F. Fabyan second, each showing John Shrimpton. W. Whitman led for ten white, with Merza. He also was second, with Nellie Pockett; third, G. F. Fabyan, with Beatrice May.

A. F. Whitin was first for yellow, with Cheltoni; Seth A. Borden second, with Appleton; W. Whitman third, with Appleton. For any other color G. F. Fabyan won, with Donald McLeod; James Nicol second, with Harrison Dick. A. F. Whitin had the best six Mrs. Jerome Jones; James Nicol second.

Competitors were few in the plant classes. For eight specimens not exceeding 12-inch pots, J. S. Bailey, J. Nilan gardener, was first. His plants needed ten days more to develop, some having few flowers open. W. H. Elliott was the only other competitor in this class. J. S. Bailey, W. H. Elliott and E. J. Mitton, J. Lawson gardener, won the prizes in the other plant classes. There were eight competitors for six plants grown to six stems, one bloom to a stem. Mrs. Lester Leland, Mrs. A. W. Blake, J. L. Smith gardener, and Wm. Whitman won in order named. Plants grown in this way are a great improvement over those with a single flower to a plant.

For group of foliage and flowering plants covering 200 square feet there were five entries. W. Whitman led, followed by Edward MacMulkin and Sidney Hoffman.

For group of orchids Mrs. J. S. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher gardener, was first; Edward MacMulkin second. Mrs. Gardner was also first for ten Begonia Rex, Mrs. A. W. Blake second.

There was not a large showing of carnations, but some good flowers were staged. For twenty-five crimson, Backer & Co. won with Harry Fenn. For Day-break color P. Dexter, James Salter gardener, was first, and Exeter Conservatories second, each showing Enchantress. For dark pink Backer & Co. led, with Pink Patten, also for light pink, with a rose pink sport of Enchantress. For scarlet, Backer & Co. took all three prizes, with Robert Craig, Victory and Flambeau. Peter Fisher won on white, with White Perfection, Backer & Co. second, with Puritana. Backer & Co. captured all premiums for yellow, with Sunrise, Eldorado and Yellow King, and were also first for white variegated, with Mrs. Patten.

J. E. Rothwell, E. Johanssen gardener, won the silver gilt medal for cut orchids, staging a splendid lot, filling nearly 200 bottles. Edward MacMulkin won the bronze medal.

There were numerous non-competitive displays. F. R. Pierson Co. showed Carnation Winsor in fine shape, also their latest "creation" in nephrolepis, which has Todea-like fronds, and is quite distinct.

Lager & Hurrell had a nice table of seasonable orchids. Julius Roehrs Co. had a good display of orchids and fine foliage plants, also varieties of Begonia Rex, and lily of the valley. Edward MacMulkin had groups of palms and other foliage plants. R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had numerous bay trees, palms, dracenas, etc. They had a fine display of coniferæ which was awarded first prize in its class. W. Whitman showed Fifty Varieties Single Mums Exhibited at Boston by John Ash.

Large Vase of Cut Flowers Exhibited at Boston by W. A. Riggs.

Cattleya labiata. E. O. Orpet had cut blooms of several new seedling cattleyas and lilio-cattleyas. Peter B. Robb had Cattleya x Louise, awarded honorable mention. William Sim showed vases of James Wheeler's new sport from Princess of Wales violet, awarded honorable mention. F. W. Fletcher Co. showed a ficus which was awarded honorable mention. N. A. Lindsay, G. H. Walker, and W. C. Winter had large displays of dahlias. W. H. Elliott had fine Wellesley and Richmond roses and Waban Conservatories good Beauty and Wellesley. Peter Fisher had his new carnations, Evangeline and Beacon; the latter showed up finely. H. A. Jahn had his new white seedling, also a fine crimson. Each were awarded honorable mention.

Dr. C. G. Weld, W. G. Rust gardener, had five nice standards of Chrysanthemum Garza. C. H. Totty received a certificate of merit for Chrysanthemum White Duckham. Mrs. E. M. Gill had a nice display of chrysanthemums.

One of the features of the show was a table of fifty varieties of single chrysanthemums, English varieties, from Miss E. J. Clark, Pomfret, Conn., John Ash gardener. These attracted more favorable notice than any of the big blooms. They included some beautiful things which should prove of value to commercial as well as private growers. A small selection of the best were Sir Geo. Bullough, Mrs. Holden, Stella, Pretoria and Mary Anderson. This collection merited the silver medal awarded. E. A. Clark, W. A. Riggs gardener, staged a large vase of specimen blooms of fine quality and was awarded a cultural certificate. Julius Roehrs Co. received honorable mention for Tillandsia Durvalliana and Begonia Rex The Marquis. C. D. Sias, J. Porter gardener, had half a dozen grandly grown specimens of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Louis Dupuy received honorable mention for a new unnamed chrysanthemum of which several were shown in pots, of a rosy crimson color. J. S. Bailey received honorable mention for a seedling impatiens and a new fern as yet unnamed.

The dinner-tables on the second day attracted eight entries. The lady judges gave first prize to Sidney Hoffman, for a harmonious arrangement of Cattleya labiata. Smaller cattleyas were used for the boutonnieres. J. J. Casey, of the Rosary, was second. In this case Princess of Wales violets were used; while pleasing by day it was somewhat somber under artificial light. Houghton & Clark, who took third prize, had a beautiful center-piece of Oncidium Rogersii and Cypripedium insigne. Corsage bouquets were of Cattleya labiata and boutonnieres of gardenias. G. A. Severy & Co. received a complimentary notice for a tastefully arranged fruit center-piece. Two of the unplaced tables were arranged with Cattleya labiata and one with pink roses. This competition seemed to attract a great amount of interest among the visitors.

Fruit and vegetable displays were good. The attendance was large, especially on the closing days.

W. N. CRAIG.

MADISON, N. J.

The eleventh annual show of the Morris County Horticultural Society was held on November 1 and 2, and, while the show, in common with other eastern exhibitions, suffered somewhat in point of quantity, the quality of all the exhibits staged left nothing to be desired. So many varieties are late this year that many of the finest flowers will not be in time for the exhibition.

The premier class for thirty-six flowers in six varieties was won by R. Vince, gardener to Robert D. Foote, who staged splendid flowers of Beatrice May, Morton F. Plant, E. J. Brooks, Valerie Greenham, Gen. Hutton and Mrs. J. E. Dunne. The eighteen flowers in six varieties was won by John Downing, gardener to Dr. McAlpin, with James Fraser second. Twelve flowers in twelve varieties was also won by Mr. Vince, likewise the six flowers of 1905 introductions, and the special prize offered by F. R. Pierson for six flowers of Glenview. Mr. Vince's flowers averaged high in quality all through his exhibits.

The special prize offered by Stumpp & Walter for ten pink was won by James Fraser, with fine W. Duckham. Twelve flowers in twelve varieties was won by John Downing, with James Fraser second. Mr. Vyse won for six flowers in six varieties, and for six yellow, with fine F. S. Vallis. Six pink was won by James Fraser. Six white was won by John Heeremans, gardener to A. R. Whitney, who also was second in six flowers in six varieties, for six Glenview, and six pink. Mr. Heeremans' flowers of Beatrice May for six white were one of the finest vases of flowers in the show. Six flowers any other color was won by Andrew Kennedy, gardener to Dr. Ward, with fine Mrs. A. J. Miller.

Good competition developed for the vase of flowers arranged for effect, which was won by E. Reagan, with James Fraser second. The best display of pompons was won by John N. May, with C. H. Totty second. Ten flowers of any white was won by C. H. Totty with Beatrice May; ten yellow, by Frank L. Moore, Chatham, N. J., with ten Maj. Bonnafon.

The rose classes, while not so largely filled as we have seen at this exhibition, were of high quality. Special prize for twenty-five Richmond was won by C. H. Totty, C. A. Work being second and L. B. Coddington third. Eighteen American Beauties was won by L. A. Noe, L. M. Noe getting second and Henry Hentz third. Twenty-five Bridesmaid was won by H. A. Neuner, Henry Hentz second and David Falconer third. Twenty-five Brides was won by L. A. Noe, with David Falconer second and C. Badgley third. In twelve Maids J. T. Wagner ran first, Mr. Badgley second, and in twelve Brides L. M. Noe ran first, Mr. Badgley again coming in second.

Carnation classes were well filled, chief interest centering in the Farquhar silver cup. This cup had to be won twice in succession, and Mr. Duckham won it last year. He was once more successful, and now the cup is his property. His varieties staged were Robt. Craig and White Lawson. Mr. Vince was a good second, and set up fine Fiancee and White Perfection.

The Vaughan prize was won by R. Vince, and the A. H. Secker prize by John N. May, with Robt. M. Schultz second. Three vases in three varieties was won by Mr. Vince, with John Heeremans second. One vase, any variety, was won by James Fraser, with Robt. Craig; R. Vince second.

In violets Mr. Duff was first for fifty singles; Mr. Vince second.

The special prize offered by the Pierson-Sefton Co. for group of plants was won by John Heeremans, John Downing second and H. B. Vyse, gardener to G. E. Kessel third. Mr. Heeremans' group was largely composed of Beatrice May chrysanthemums in pots, with ferns and palms intermingled.

Three specimen plants, chrysanthemums in flower, was won by Peter Duff, who also was first for a single specimen. Mr. Duff was also successful for twelve plants in 6-inch pots, grown to single stem, Mr. Vince being a good second. For six plants in 6-inch pots Mr. Heeremans was first.

The vegetable classes for some reason were not nearly so well filled as usual, Mr. Duckham capturing the Boddington special, John Heeremans the Peter Henderson special, and H. B. Vyse the Weber & Don special.

Certificates of merit were awarded to Lager & Hurrell for a fine group of orchids; to Charles H. Totty for new chrysanthemums, white sport of Duckham, Meriam Hankey, Mr. Henry Barnes, Mrs. A. T. Miller, A. L. Stevens and a collection of fifty varieties of new singles.

A vase of beautiful new cosmos, named Lady Lenox, was set up by A. T. Boddington, and richly deserved the certificate awarded.

Certificates were also given F. R. Pier-son for Winsor carnation; to H. Weber & Sons for Mabelle carnation, and to G. A. Lotze for Chrysanthemum Mrs. G. A. Lotze, an incurving white.

The weather was fine and the attendance ran about as usual. VIDL.

RED BANK, N. J.

The tenth annual flower show of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society, which opened October 24, was a great success in every sense of the word. The exhibits, the attendance, and the awards were such as easily to place this latest demonstration of the society as one of its best. The following is the list of awards:

Twenty-five chrysanthemum blooms, distinct varieties, first prize, William Turner, superintendent of the M. C. D. Borden estate, with Nellie Pickett, H. J. Jones, Mrs. William Knox, Morton F. Plant, F. S. Vass, Beatrice May, F. A. Cobbold, Ethel Fitzroy, Mrs. Henry Partridge, Lovellness, Ben Wells, Mrs. John E. Dunne, William Duckham, Chelton, Mrs. George Heaume, Col. D. Appleton, Mrs. D. thawing which in many seasons occurs in our fickle month of March.

While on the subject of wintering bulbs I will remind you of what was to me a surprise when told by Mr. Beerhorst, one of the best posted growers of bulbs in Holland, that while the tulip is as hardy as a rhubarb root, the trumpet narcissi are not, and he had seen thousands of the well-known Von Sion narcissus killed in the ground with 12 degrees of frost.

Rhododendrons.

Just now you will be receiving rhododendrons, which for the past two seasons have sold well, especially at Easter. For size of plant and number of buds the first cost of the plants is a trifle and their worth must be estimated on the bench room they occupy and not on first cost. The rhododendrons, remember, are hardy even in our semi-arctic winters, and it is not the cold but the soil that makes these the most beautiful of hardy shrubs, a failure in this locality. Wet the roots of the rhododendron as you did the azaleas and place them in the coldest house you have. A cool shed would do just as well. The ideal place would be a deep coldframe covered with sashes, where they could remain till the middle of next February. Thus little bench room is used when valuable.

In my humble opinion the principal part of making money in our business is not in how finely you can grow a plant, but in how quickly you can turn out a crop and occupy the space with another. Every square foot of bench room under glass must yield a profit or you are going backward.

Deutzias and Lilacs.

Deutzias and lilacs are arriving. As these are both hardy shrubs they should not be introduced to the greenhouse at all. When first unpacked don't expose them to a hard frost, for their buds have been loosened and very slightly started by the warm and close ocean voyage and are in no condition to endure a hard frost. If their roots are dry, soak them a few moments and then heel them in in a coldframe. The term heel in is a technical phrase and means to put the roots of shrubs or trees in a trench and well covered with earth to protect the roots. It would be well also to keep the tops from too much frost by covering with sash or boards.

These hardy plants can be brought in and forced with success without being potted now.

Spiræa.

Spiræas, or astilbe, will soon be here. Don't leave them in the original cases. They may be very dry, and when packed closely, have often heated in the journey and made roots. If the clumps of roots are dry dip them in water and place in boxes with a little earth between the clumps and a little over the crowns and place outside. This herbaceous spiræa is the hardiest of all plants, yet it can be abused.

Valley.

A far more important plant to all of us is the lily of the valley, which soon will be arriving. These also should be unpacked at once, and what I believe is very important, if the roots are dry they should be thoroughly wet. I am not writing for the large growers, but for the man who forces perhaps 500 to 1,000 a week from New Year's, up to the middle of April, after which we must depend on

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Look Out for Winter.

This is rather a busy time, handling our imports of azaleas, rhododendrons and other shrubs and roots. I mentioned a few weeks ago that it was better to put off the planting of tulips and hyacinths as late as possible; that they would have finer flowers in the spring, and the flowers would last longer. The question is, how late will it be wise to wait? If we knew when it were going to freeze up it would be easy to mention the date when planting should be done. I will remind you that two years ago on November 15 hard frosts occurred. Nurserymen said, "Oh! This is not winter; goodness, no! I have thousands of trees yet to dig." But it was winter, and no spade or fork entered the ground again until the following April. So it is necessary to be on the safe side, and we are filling all orders for bulb planting. In fact, we don't hesitate because the soil in the beds is wet, so that working on it will puddle it. Working soil when wet in the spring when no more frost is to be expected would be great folly, but when tramped into a sticky, muddy state in the fall, no harm is done, because the hard frosts of winter will mellow it as no other agency can.

Bulb Planting.

Planting these bulbs is a simple operation. Some will recommend an expensive plan of excavating the soil to a depth of four or five inches, then sprinkling a thin layer of sand to set the bulbs on, and next restoring the soil that was removed. All that labor is useless. Use a blunt, thick dibble amply large enough to drop the bulb into and see that you get the bulb six inches below the surface. This is important, for if planted shallow the bulbs will be exposed to the surface before flowering time. Any covering with leaves or stable litter is unnecessary before the end of February, as tulips and hyacinths are as hardy as an oak. Covering the beds after February is done to prevent the alternate freezing and the roots that have been retarded by cold storage. There is no need of untying the original bunches of twenty-five, but place them in boxes with a thin layer of soil between the bunches of roots and some moss or soil over the pips. Freezing hard will do no harm, but rains will, and therefore they should be covered with sashes or shutters. I recommend placing these roots in boxes of 500 because that quantity or double that quantity could be easily brought in when wanted, but if put into soil in a cold-frame the whole mass may be frozen tight and difficult to separate, vexatious, if not the cause of loss of stock.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

CONCRETE GREENHOUSES.

There is a new style of greenhouse which is attracting considerable attention among the Guernsey growers, according to the Horticultural Advertiser. The house is, with exception of the doors and ventilating lights, built entirely of concrete, even the rafters being of the same material. These last are, it appears, made in wooden molds with a thin steel wire in the center to strengthen them; and it is claimed that they, in common with the rest of the structure, are practically indestructible. These houses are said to need no paint, a coat of lime or white-wash periodically being all that is needed to make them look as good as new. The cost is said to be about $6 per foot run for a house thirty feet wide. We have not yet had the pleasure of a personal inspection, but if all the claims made are substantiated, the invention should, we think, have a considerable influence upon the future prospects of culture under glass. We only hope it will not be the means of altering the present legal status of glass houses from "trade fixtures" to "buildings." The inventors are the Ramee Vinerics Co., Ltd., Guernsey.

the time of year, were the general rule.

Hugh Low & Co. had no fewer than fifteen varieties in their exhibit, Enchantress, Robert Craig and White Perfection being conspicuous. This firm received awards of merit for the two latter varieties, the blooms measuring three and one-half inches and over in diameter. White Perfection caught the eye of many of the smaller growers. One of the largest cut flower salesmen in Covent Garden market told me that it was the white we were looking for, and when I mentioned White Enchantress he said he would sooner handle the White Perfection class of flower.

Victory, as yet, has not made a public appearance; at least, British grown blooms have not. This variety crossed the Atlantic badly. Several growers complain of their stock being infested with rust. This must have been created in transit, as there was no outward appearance of it upon first landing; but when we do get it into shape again, it and Robert Craig will renew their battle.

PROPAGATING.

Will you inform me what time of the year is the most favorable for carnation cuttings? What soil mixture and temperature do they require?

W. C. H.

SOIL FOR CARNATIONS.

My soil is a clay loam, good for roses, but I think too heavy for carnations. In composting it for roses and carnations should I use cow manure or horse manure? Should I use sand to lighten it?

J. P. K.

If your soil is decidedly clayey, it will likely need to be lightened; but, as a rule, good rose soil will make good carnation soil. I would advise you to use horse manure by all means, if you want to lighten it. If you have some good, sharp sand it will do no harm to add about one part sand to eight parts of soil. The compost pile should be turned several times, and each time thoroughly mixed to distribute the sand well through the soil, else it will do little good. If you can get soil that is about of the right texture, then I would advise you to get it, as a natural soil is nearly always better than a made soil, unless you take a considerable time for the preparation. When adding the horse manure you will of course add much more bulk than you would of cow manure. Of cow manure we use about one part to five parts of soil, while of horse manure you can use double as much without harm.

CARNATIONS IN ENGLAND.

At the Horticultural hall, Vincent square, London, on October 23, the Royal Horticultural Society held its usual fortnightly meeting. There was an exceptionally large attendance of exhibitors, also visitors. Carnations stood out nobly from many stands in the large hall. Blooms of a good quality, considering

It is a little early to begin propagating carnation cuttings in general. While it is quite possible to root them readily any time from now on, it is not advisable, because in the first place it is not necessary in order to get fine plants, and in the next place, they would become a burden and a nuisance before spring if you tried to keep them growing as they should until planting-out time. Carnation propagating usually commences with us about December 1 and continues up to well into April. Cuttings taken any time between December 1 and April 1 will make splendid stock, though the last batches may lack somewhat in size when housed in the fall. January and February cuttings are perhaps the most satisfactory.

Of course you understand that they are rooted in pure sand. When rooted they are potted into a rather light soil to encourage root action. The same soil that you use in your carnation beds will do if you will add a couple of shovelfuls of sand to each bushel of soil. The temperature should be about the same or a couple of degrees lower than that in which the blooming plants grow. These latter questions will be treated more fully as the time approaches.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MRS. LOTZE.

The accompanying illustration is prepared from a photograph of a new chrysanthemum grown by G. A. Lotze, Glen Burnie, Md. It is a creamy white, Japanese incurved, and was scored ninety points, commercial scale, and eighty-nine points, exhibition scale, by the C. S. A. committee at Philadelphia October 27. This chrysanthemum has been named for the originator's bride, Mrs. G. A. Lotze. It has made a most favorable impression on the Baltimore growers who have seen it.

EARLY CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

My early mums, Touset, were late in showing bud, which came terminal. Stems grew to four and five feet, but flowers were only fair, some of which were pink. They were planted in June, and I allowed them to get dry several times. Is this the cause of my trouble?

J. P. K.

Permitting the plants to get dry does them no good at any time, and it certainly did not help the plants any if it did not actually harm them. Still I do not think that it is entirely responsible for the poor flowers. Early varieties should be planted in May to have them give the best results. Again, it is possible that Touset does not care for J. P. K.'s soil and location. It has not done well in this section, as early buds make a very long, ragged neck; but I understand that it is a fine variety in the middle west.

C. H. T.

OUTDOOR CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

How can I grow chrysanthemums outdoors, in different colors, for cut flowers and autumn decorations? H. C. H.

The best way to grow hardy chrysanthemums is to plant out young stock in April. These are much better than getting old stools, and it is wonderful the growth they make by fall. Plant in rows three feet apart and twelve inches in the row, and pinch them back several times, and they will make splendid bushes. They can be lifted in September if desired, and potted or benched inside, and will well repay any trouble expended on them.

The aster-flowered and single varieties are much the best for cutting, as the stems are long and the flowers comparatively large. There are many varieties to select from, some of the best being as follows: Blenheim, Constance, Ethel, Mrs. Vincent, Queen of Whites, and Prince of Wales. It is largely a matter of the color needed.

There are some splendid things in the new single varieties, and I believe they will, in a few years, be popular. The best are Mary Richardson, Felix, Kitty Bourne, Linton, Mrs. E. Roberts, Nancy Perkins, Herbert Henderson, Crown Jewel, Amber Queen, Belle of Weybridge, and Earlswood Gem.

CHRYSANTHEMUM MRS. LADD.

E. A. Stroud, proprietor of Overbrook Gardens, Overbrook, Pa., is the originator of the yellow seedling chrysanthemum shown in the illustration on page 1614 and certificated October 27 by the Philadelphia committee of the C. S. A., A. B. Cartledge, John Westcott and Wm. K. Harris, who scored it eighty-seven. It is named Mrs. Westray Ladd and is a seedling of 1905, parentage Cinna x Appleton. The first bloom was cut October 15, from the first crown bud.

CHRYSANTHEMUM ONGAWA.

Chrysanthemum Ongawa is a seedling of W. R. Church crossed with Gen. Hutton, certificated by the Cincinnati committee of the Chrysanthemum Society November 3, scoring eighty-eight points. It is, as one might surmise from the name, one of Nathan Smith & Son's seedlings. It has the style of growth of the seed parent, Church, and the form is intermediate between Church and the pollen parent, Hutton. The color is called a golden chamois. The plant is quite dwarf, not exceeding two feet, which, with the large size of the flower, makes it useful for several purposes.

The REVIEW several times has commended the choice of other names than those of persons, for new varieties, but the fact that Mr. Smith has about exhausted sleeping-car nomenclature and is husbanding his remaining resources is shown by the fact that he is exhibiting his new sorts under number, asking the committees to apply the names to them only in case they are certificated; he doesn't want to waste a good name on a starter that gets left at the post. Doubtless it will be appreciated if some friend will come to the rescue with a few suggestions.

FLOWERS BY MAIL.

I am sending you four chrysanthemums, numbered 1, 2, 3 and 4. Will you tell me their correct names? There are insects on the back of the foliage. Please tell me what they are and how to get rid of them.

M. R.

Your flowers unfortunately were crushed flat when they reached me, so I could not distinguish even the color of the flowers except No. 4, which I would say is Polly Rose. The foliage was crushed and no insect or any other marks could be seen. I would suggest that about the only thing to send blooms safely in by mail is a cigar box, lined with wax paper.

PREPARING TO PROPAGATE.

As the time for propagating approaches, every provision should be made to have things in readiness for this important part of the work. I say important because if the young stock does not get a good start, with everything in its favor, one of the best elements to success is wanting.

The propagating house should be looked over and made as nearly as possible air and water tight. The ventilators should be put into good working order and the piping inspected and repaired where necessary, so that there may be no trouble after the benches are filled.

Secure a generous supply of the propagating medium, whether it be sand or any other suitable material, and store it in some place where it is not exposed in order to keep it free from decomposing matter. It is necessary to have a good supply, so that if bench fungus makes its appearance it will not be necessary to use the material a second time.

Rarely do we find a house of Maids or Brides which are not more or less mixed. Now is the time to go over the benches and mark the mixtures, so that they may be avoided when taking the propagating wood. By carefully attending to this the mixture can soon be eliminated and I am certain that a house or bench of a variety without mixture must be more pleasing and satisfactory, especially if we intend to put the young stock on the market, than to have a batch of something of the quantities of which we are ignorant.

With the bench in readiness and plenty of suitable wood, which should now be in abundance, the next duty is to carefully select the wood best fitted for the purpose, and this selection should be left to the most careful and experienced help, as on the quality of the wood depends in a great measure the success of the whole season.

RIBES.

ROSE MRS. ROOSEVELT.

The much-discussed question whether seedlings from La France ever have been obtained is again to the fore owing to the appearance in commerce of the hybrid tea rose, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt. The raiser states that it is a seedling from La France, but it is of more vigorous growth, and the bloom has greater durability. When this really handsome novelty is examined and studied, one can observe a relationship with La France, and it is an open question whether the fertilizing pollen was obtained from that variety. The plant is not so strong a grower as the alleged parent, but it is sufficiently strong, and has a bushy, erect growth. The plant flowers freely, has well-formed, fragrant blooms, remaining in perfect condition for a considerable length of time, and showing no center. They open in all kinds of weather, the buds are of a tender rose color, long and finely formed. It is one of the best varieties of the rose we have received from America.—Rosen Zeitung.

OBITUARY.

Wm. Doogue.

William Doogue, superintendent of public grounds for Boston, died at his home in Dorchester, November 2, after a long illness.

Mr. Doogue was born in Stradbally, County Queens, Ireland, June 24, 1828, and emigrated to the United States when a mere lad. He settled first in Middletown, Conn., and at the age of 17 years was apprenticed to Affleck, Whittamore & Co., which in its day had one of the largest nursery and greenhouse plants in New England. After Mr. Affleck's death

At that time there were neither tools, plants nor houses to work with. All stock for bedding had to be purchased. In 1885, after a number of appeals, he secured a plot of land between East Chester park and Northampton street, and had a large block of greenhouses built where he could grow the stock needed for the Public Gardens and other grounds. This location had to be vacated in 1893 and land was secured near the juncture of East Cottage street and Massachusetts avenue. The greenhouses were removed in 1894 and are still located there. Mr. Doogue's floral displays in the Public Gardens have attracted widespread attention, the bulbous show in April and May being always specially good, and on the occasion of visits from the Masons, Odd Fellows, Christian Endeavorers, G. A. R. and other bodies he always arranged elaborate complimentary displays. The deceased leaves three daughters and two sons. One of the latter, Luke J. Doogue, is employed in his father's department, and is a possible for half a century. Sprung from English ancestry, he was born in 1828 at Jamestown, N. C., where his early life was spent. In early youth he was sent north to attend a Quaker school at Providence, R. I., and later he engaged in teaching at various places in New England.

Upon his arrival in Minneapolis he formed a partnership with Cyrus Bede in the land and loan business, and continued in this line of business until 1862, when he was elected city treasurer. The same year he became president of the State Bank of Minneapolis. Some years later he was elected secretary and treasurer of the board of education and continued in the capacity for a number of years. Later he engaged in the florists' business and built up what was a large and flourishing institution until advancing years impaired his ability to give it the attention demanded. He retired several years ago. In 1858 Mr. Mendenhall married Miss Addie G. Swift, of Falmouth, Mass. Mrs. Mendenhall died a few years ago.

Hans Reck.

Hans Reck, who was in the employ of James Beach, Bridgeport, Conn., committed suicide, October 28, by taking carbolic acid. Mr. Reck was about 25 years old, unmarried, and lived with his widowed mother. The motive for the rash act is attributed to a friendly admonition regarding his personal habits, administered the preceding evening by a young lady acquaintance.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Ladies' Auxiliary.

Mrs. Chas. H. Maynard, of Detroit, fearing that someone might be overlooked in mailing circulars, requests the publication of the following:

"While at the S. A. F. convention at Dayton, O., a few ladies, seeing so many with whom they were not acquainted, took it upon themselves to call a meeting on Friday, August 24, to consider a pin for identification. Mrs. W. J. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., was chosen chairman, and four ladies to confer with her, Mrs. E. A. Scribner, Detroit; Miss Tillie Meinhardt, St. Louis; Mrs. John Sibson, Philadelphia, and Mrs. Charles H. Maynard, Detroit, and it was voted to leave the selection of the pin with them.

"On September 11 another meeting was held at the home of the chairman, Mrs. W. J. Vesey, at Fort Wayne, where the auxiliary question was put under the same committee. Mrs. Scribner was appointed treasurer and Mrs. Maynard secretary. It was voted to call a meeting at Philadelphia next summer at the date of the S. A. F. convention. In the meantime we wish to get as many ladies to join as charter members before January 1 as possible. Fee for joining, including pin, $3; annual dues thereafter, $1. First year to end January, 1908. We wish your hearty co-operation in forming a society of our own, where we can get to know each other socially and educationally. We have quite a list of members as a start, and prospects are good for a large society. Applications for membership and pin may be sent to the secretary, Mrs. Charles H. Maynard, 219 Horton avenue, Detroit, Mich.

Chrysanthemum Mrs. Westray Ladd.

Mr. Doogue became one of the firm. In the early sixties the deceased separated from the firm of Whittamore & Co. and removed to Boston, establishing himself as a florist and decorator at the rear of his residence on Warrenton street. He did an excellent business here, and his success as a decorator led to his selection in 1878 as city forester of Boston.

H. N. BRUNS.

In the few years since the world's fair H. N. Bruns has achieved a position as a leader in the trade in Chicago, for it is only fourteen years since the "valley millionaire," then 23 years of age, first landed on American soil. He was born near Hamburg, Germany, in 1869 and began his career in horticulture with his fourteenth year. Before he had attained his majority he had acquired a varied experience in the private places and commercial establishments in Hamburg, Dresden and Berlin. Then he went to Paris and in a short time learned French and much of French methods.

Coming to America in 1892 he was, with many others, attracted to Chicago by the advertising the city received by virtue of the approaching world's fair. Not long after he had mastered Chicago he started in business for himself, leasing the Hughes place on West Van Buren street. Here his early experience at Hamburg led Mr. Bruns to turn naturally to lily of the valley, first for his own retail trade but later as a specialty which became the principal part of his business. He became the "valley millionaire" some years ago, after he had removed to his present stand at 1409 West Madison street, when he handled more than a million pips a year; this year his importations, following a summer's trip to Hamburg, will reach about two million pips. In addition to the great quantities forced for his own trade and for the Chicago market, Mr. Bruns does a large business in cold storage pips, shipping to customers many hundreds of miles away, and doing a constantly growing trade without salesmen, solely by advertising.

Mr. Bruns always has been able to find time from his private affairs to lend a hand to whatever joint enterprise the craft had in hand. He has been one of the regular attendants and active workers for the Chicago Florists' Club and it was the natural and logical thing that when his name was proposed for the presidency of the club the selection met with such unanimous approval that he is the only nominee for the office at the election scheduled to be held tonight.

Mr. Bruns has a wife and three children, a boy and two girls. He is a Mason and a Shriner. He has the habit of accomplishing that which he undertakes, and enjoys the esteem of all whom he meets, either in business or social relations.

"As you doubtless know, Messrs. Boots & Shoes have the formal opening of their new store on Saturday of next week. It occurs to us that you may like to know of our facilities for making such floral pieces as are popular for expressions of good will on these occasions. We do much of this work and can supply any kind of a set piece you may desire, or can arrange a suitable piece if the matter is left to our discretion. In any case the flowers and work will be of the best, and excellent value given for any sum you may place at our disposal. Please forward your business cards with your instructions."

Anything to make clear your intent will do, but it must be written on printed stationery and in a neat and intelligible manner. City merchants no doubt have time to decipher orders written on wrapping paper, but they have no time for requests for business submitted in such a manner. Every florist should have as good stationery as he can afford and it is worth while to patronize a public stenographer when you have important business letters to get out. We know one florist whose reputation for good business methods is enhanced because he sends out neat letters. Every morning a stenographer who serves a number of people calls at his place, takes down his letters, goes back to her office and in the evening delivers his letters for his signature, with copies for reference, all nicely typewritten. It is especially worth while when the letters solicit business, but in addition a good letterhead and a neat letter have been known to get a man a good deal more credit than he really was entitled to.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

PRESENTATION PIECES.

A custom which florists may well encourage is that of presenting floral offerings at the opening of new stores. This practice has already made a strong beginning and, while it is the means of perpetrating a large number of monstrosities in the form of strange designs, still it is a custom which makes for the florists' profit, and, after all, it is profit that we all are in business for.

At a recent opening of a department store in Brooklyn more than fifty testimonials of good will were sent by those they patronized, and the total ran into thousands of dollars. One set piece alone brought to its maker $200, and there were a dozen which represented an expenditure of $100 or more. Of course this was an exceptional case, but wherever a new dry goods, clothing or almost any other kind of store is opened there is more or less floral display.

This is a business which florists may easily work up. Wherever a new store is known to be opening it is usually possible to ascertain the names and addresses of the firms that have sold the stock of goods. These may be written to and will usually respond more or less liberally to the suggestion that their customer will appreciate a floral offering. If these names are not to be had, then get a copy of the trade paper representing that particular line of business and write a letter to the principal advertisers. You may be sure that among them are the firms who have sold the new stock. Address them something as follows:

PETOSKEY, MICH.—E. T. Hammond & Co. have acquired the greenhouse property and business of the late S. J. Long. Mr. Hammond has been in the employ of Mr. Long for some time.

ORANGE, N. J.—The monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held November 2. Orchids and chrysanthemums were out in force. The topic of the evening was "Our Fall Show." Favorable reports were received from all sources promising a successful exhibition.

EXPRESS RATE PETITION.

The following is the full text of the petition filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington, entitled:

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists vs. United States Express Co.

The petition of the above named complainant respectfully shows:

I. That complainant is a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the United States by virtue of an Act of Congress of March 4, 1901, having its principal office at the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, and is engaged in the development and advancement of floriculture and horticulture throughout the United States. That one branch of its duties is to protect the interests of its members in regard to transportation rates and facilities; and this proceeding is brought on behalf of its members located at certain points in the states of New Jersey and Pennsylvania who are engaged in interstate shipments of flowers to the city of New York, in the state of New York, over defendant carrier's express line.

II. That the above named defendant is an express company engaged in interstate commerce as a common carrier by express over various lines of railroad in different states of the United States, more particularly between points in the states of New Jersey and Pennsylvania and points in the state of New York, and as such common carrier is subject to the provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce, approved February 4, 1887, as amended by the Act of June 29, 1906, entitled "An Act to Amend an Act Entitled 'An Act to Regulate Commerce,' approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, and to enlarge the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission."

III. That in the course of their business members of complainant association located at various points in New Jersey and Pennsylvania make shipments of flowers from such points to the city of New York. That quick handling of these shipments is so essential, that the use of defendant's express line, even at higher rates than those of railroad companies, has been and is absolutely necessary. That on or about the first day of May, 1906, defendant arbitrarily and unjustly increased its express charges on flowers from the points named to New York city. That the following table shows the places, the express charges prior to May 1, 1906, and the advanced express charges of defendant, in cents per 100 pounds:

From.	Charges prior to May 1, 1906.	Charges since May 1, 1906.
Somerville, N. J.	50c	$1.00
Chatham, N. J.	50c	1.00
Allentown, Pa.	60c	1.00
Philadelphia, Pa.	75c	1.00
Hillside, Pa.	75c	1.00
Dorranacetown, Pa.	75c	1.00

That said advance in charges by defendant was altogether unwarrantable and unjustified by the circumstances of the case, and the present charges are unjust and unreasonable of themselves and generally. That complainant's members at said points are willing to pay express charges largely in excess of what carriers by railroad would be likely to charge on such commodity between the same points, but it alleges that the above-named advanced rates are so unjust and so much in excess of what they should be that their exaction is very nearly ruinous. That prior to May 1, 1906, the empty boxes or cases which contained the flowers were either returned free or at a nominal charge by defendant, from New York city to said points, but that since said date defendant unreasonably exacts the same charge per 100 pounds for the return of the empties as it exacts for the flowers themselves. That this additional burden placed by defendant on such shippers is unjustified and should be changed. That these flower shipments are, in a majority of cases, delivered by complainant at the railroad stations, and the defendant is not required to call for them at the greenhouses. That the markets in New York city are bunched in a very circumscribed area, so that in cases of delivery to places of business defendant is not required to cart shipments long distances. That the express-carriage of flowers does not call for any special service other than promptness of delivery, and much of the cost which defendant has to assume in collecting and delivering ordinary merchandise is eliminated.

IV. That by reason of the premises defendant has been and is subjecting complainant's members at said points in New Jersey and Pennsylvania and their shipments of flowers to the payment of unjust and unreasonable express charges, as above set forth, and has been and is subjecting such members, the places in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and the traffic in flowers, to unjust discrimination and unreasonable prejudice and disadvantage, in violation of the provisions of the Act to Regulate Commerce, as amended, and more particularly sections one, two and three thereof.

Wherefore, complainant prays that the defendant be required to promptly answer the charges herein; that after due hearing and investigation an order be made requiring said defendant to wholly cease and desist from the aforesaid violations of the provisions of said Act to Regulate Commerce, as amended; that a further order be issued fixing reasonable and just rates for the transportation of flowers by defendant between said points in New Jersey and Pennsylvania and the city of New York, N. Y.; that the Commission also prescribe such rules or regulations, in lieu of those now existing over defendant's line, as will in the future operate to prevent the continuance of any unjust discrimination or undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage to said New Jersey and Pennsylvania points and to complainant association's members, in the matter of the transportation of flowers from said points to New York city, and that such other and further orders may be entered as the Commission may deem necessary in the premises and complainant's cause may appear to require.

FREEMONT, ILL.—John Bauscher has furnished the city council an itemized proposition for planting flower beds in the four parks of the city for 1907.

TOLEDO, O.—A. L. Griffin, of Clyde, will open a flower store at 901 Jefferson avenue November 10. He is doing nicely these days, having recently acquired a wife.

TOLEDO, O.—The Perennial Gardens Co. is constructing six large greenhouses on its five-acre tract in Miami. The company will grow hardy stock roses, palms, etc.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market continued active until almost the close of last week, when some slackening in demand was noticeable. This week opened with largely increased supplies all along the line, and there was a decided decrease in the demand on Monday and Tuesday. Shipping trade was thought to have been affected by the November elections, as well as by general increases in production. Fancy stock was in demand on Tuesday among the retailers exhibiting at the local show.

Chrysanthemums moved unexpectedly well last week. The supplies were considerable, but all stock was cleaned out at good prices. This week there has been a noticeable increase in receipts, and prices are weaker, but the market still is cleaning up fairly well. Such sorts as Bonnaillon and Eaton now are the leaders. The small stock is past. We seem now to be at the height of the season.

In roses all sorts other than American Beauty are more plentiful and weaker in price. The cuts of Beauty have not increased, and prices have stiffened, possibly in anticipation of another boost for Thanksgiving, which now is not far away. Quality is all that could be asked in Brides and Maids. Richmond has been good for some time. Not many Liberty are seen, and Chatenay is not nearly so abundant as last year.

For the first time in a month Monday's closing hour found the market with carnations still on hand. Receipts in this department probably have doubled in the last week, and some growers say the increase has been considerably more than that. Quality is excellent, Enchantress being especially good. With a little brisk weather to put shipping quality into the blooms, the market again will be in position to do business with carnations. The price naturally has weakened, but it is now down only to quotations; lately the wholesalers' price lists have been a delusion in this particular; they have quoted what they thought must be the price, but not infrequently the market for best stock was above the printed lists.

There was a flurry in valley last week, but enough stock now is to be had. Lilies are fully equal to the demand. Violets are abundant and good. Prices have declined slightly, but with good weather the stock is moving well. A few sweet peas are seen, and Amling says bouvardia will be along within a few days. A few good pansies are seen.

The growers still are holding back on smilax and asparagus. Adiantum is a little short. Other greens are abundant.

Weather in October.

So far as mean temperature goes, October was right in the average for the last thirty-six years. It was a wet month, the only October in seven years when the rainfall has exceeded two inches, but we still are 4.32 inches behind on the year. There were only five clear days, eleven partly clear and fifteen on which the sun did not shine at all. No wonder production of cut flowers was light. The first killing frost of the season was recorded October 10.

Various Notes.

The funeral of Judge Gary on Friday made quite a little work for the retailers. He was the man who sentenced the anarchists and of national reputation.

At the horse show last Saturday night there was a class for business horses, pairs, among the entries being the delivery rigs of C. A. Samuelson and the Fleischman Floral Co. They were beaten out by Mandel Bros., but it certainly was a fine advertisement to put fine rigs out for the inspection of upwards of 6,000 society people.

George Asmus states that the plans are all made for the new building which the Schiller estate is to erect next spring opposite the leased stand on West Madison street occupied for so many years. The flower store will be modern in every respect.

Bassett & Washburn have run a glass partition clear to the ceiling, separating the office from the store, so that one can be kept in temperature comfortable for the people and the other comfortable for the stock.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., is delivering box, plants for pots and window-boxes to local retailers, each shipment bearing conspicuously the certificate of the New Jersey inspector.

The Eaton Floral Co. continues its frequent changes in window decoration and usually has a number of people in front admiring the handsome display. They appear to be doing a good business, as is Miss Carlson, a few steps west on Jackson boulevard.

At E. H. Hunt's a dozen big Bostons have been placed on brackets raised six feet or so on the posts along the main aisle of the store. They add pleasingly to the appearance of the busy room. Mr. Dickinson says the supply department is much busier than usual so far before the holidays.

Percy Jones has three boys in his employ that, one time or another, most of the retailers have expressed a willingness to hire, but Mr. Jones manages to keep them steadfast by liberal treatment. There are of course, between shipments, times when they have absolutely nothing to do. He has put in a couple of telegraph instruments and a battery and in these idle moments the boys are teaching themselves telegraphy. Mr. Jones is an ex-railroad man.

A. Dietsch expects to spend the winter in the City of Mexico and plans to get away as soon as a decision can be reached in the matter of his mortgage for $7,000 on the M. Winandy property, which creditors are trying to have set aside. It is a personal obligation, not one of the A. Dietsch Co., which has an unsecured claim. The total of Winandy's obligation, Mr. Dietsch's lawyers say, total $112,000, and there is little prospect that those unsecured ever will realize any considerable sum. The greenhouses are being conducted by the trustees, Peter Reinberg, Carl Ickes and E. C. Day, but are not paying any special profit.

John Weiland expects to get into his new store at Evanston before Thanksgiving. He has it nearly ready and has given the A. Dietsch Co. an order for a conservatory 50x95 to be put up at once on the lot back of the store.

Leonard Kill says he never has seen an autumn when roses have sold as well as in the last six weeks, but he finds the high price of carnations is having a bad effect; the buyers who last season were using large quantities of carnations now ask for none at all and he fears the result when carnations again become plentiful. Mr. Kill says the prospects for winter crops were never so good as now at Peter Reinberg's.

Wietor Bros. are cutting the Hill rose, Rosalind Orr English, in fair quantity, but say little about it because Wienhoeber and one or two other customers regularly take all they can get of it. In the Wietor soil it seems to have a deeper color than with some growers and certainly is a fine thing.

Charlie Duerr, who is known to all in the trade in Chicago, and to many others, met with a big loss October 28 in the burning of his plant at Granville, O., near Newark, where he has been located eighteen months and doing well. There were five houses. The boiler-shed was burned and the ends of the houses. Mr. Duerr says his loss is about $1,500.

Mrs. W. E. Lynch was taken ill on Sunday and appendicitis is feared.

The enterprising young men who guaranteed the expenses of the wholesalers' employees' ball received a net profit of $6 each.

M. Evert, at Rogers Park, is preparing to rebuild four houses as soon as the chrysanthemums are cut, and when completed will plant them with lettuce.

The banquet takes place at the Auditorium this evening. A large attendance is expected. A brief meeting of the club for the election of officers will precede the toasts.

During the season of special demand for white roses J. A. Budlong has been fortunate in having a big cut of Brides. The new varieties of chrysanthemums growing in this establishment now are coming on the market. Ben Wells is one of the big new ones which meets with special favor.

Peter Reinberg sent each member of the city council a pair of tickets to the flower show, with an invitation to pass judgment on his Mrs. Marshall Field rose exhibited Wednesday.

George Bayer, of Toledo, has begun his annual shipments of chrysanthemums to Kennicott Bros. Co. Mr. Bayer has done Bonnaffon to perfection ever since it first came out and sees nothing to beat it as a money-maker.

C. W. McKellar had a shipment of orchid plants in flower, which arrived Monday, and Tuesday nearly all were a part of the retailers' displays at the Coliseum.

Weiland & Risch are beginning to get good crops from their carnation houses. Enchantress and Boston Market are their leaders.

Kruchten & Johnson are handling Wanamaker chrysanthemums which leave Eaton no room for boasting as to its size.

Printing offices are rushed these days, and the A. L. Randall Co. has had trouble in getting its new catalogue, but began mailing the books on Monday.

Vaughan & Sperry report largely increased receipts of Hudson river violets. The weather, permitting street wear, has been a considerable aid to the sale this week.

John P. Degnan, with the E. F. Winterson Co., says the firm proposes to be a considerable factor in the Christmas green business again this year.

Poehlmann Bros. are cutting the Kate

Moulton rose in moderate quantity. It is a most pleasing color, and as they grow it the neck is strong.

The Benthay-Coatsworth Co. reports business fully up to production.

The J. B. Deamud Co. reports some big orders for mums the latter part of this week.

W. W. Randall and wife were surprised by a party of friends last Thursday evening, the occasion being the wedding anniversary that calls for tinware.

Fred Strail seeks to be relieved from his debts and has filed a petition in bankruptcy, scheduling liabilities of $3,013 and assets of $600.

J. P. Foley has been on the sick list for a few days.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business was not so good as the week previous; still it can not be called dull by any means. Funeral work was not so plentiful, but a good deal of social work was reported with the uptown florists, while transient trade downtown was brisk. For this week a number of large weddings should keep the trade busy a good part of the week.

Chrysanthemums are finer every day, as the midseason varieties gradually take the place of the early bloomers. Extra fine yellow and white have the call. Pink varieties are dragging. Prices are holding up well. Strange to say, the mums have not yet crowded the market on other stock, as they usually do at this time of the year. Roses are holding their own so far. Fancy stock in Bride Maid, Richmond, Carnot and Ivory is still demanding a good price, but firsts and seconds are dragging. Carnations are holding good prices in fancy grades. These are selling up clean each day, especially so with Enchantress and any variety in white and red. Nelson Fisher is about the best pink. Lawson is poor so far this season. Extra good valley is scarce in this market. The small batch of poor stock is hardly salable. Violets are fine in color, but still too short-stemmed. Only Californias are in the market. Smilax is plentiful and so are all other greens.

Various Notes.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, spent Thursday in St. Louis. Mr. Ammann is sending Kuehn some well grown roses. He will miss the club meeting this week, as he will go up to Chicago to see the big show.

Among those who are reported in Chicago this week are Harry Young, F. C. Weber, O. G. Koenig, Theo. Miller and Fred H. Meinhardt. A number of others would like to have gone, but one election and the club meeting and chrysanthemum exhibition required their presence here.

Henry Felter is reported to have a fine lot of pot chrysanthemum plants, also cut blooms which could be used for exhibition.

George Ostertag, superintendent of parks, is having some new beds laid out for fall bulb planting in City Hall park. These beds attract a great deal of attention in early spring.

Miss Newman, at Olive and Spring, had tasteful window decorations last week. Miss Armstrong, her assistant, has recovered and is back in her position.

The Schoenle Floral Co., on the south side, had a number of good-sized decorations last week. When it comes to work Mr. Schoenle is there with the best of them.

Eddie Gerlach, manager at Kuehn's, reports a busy week in all lines, mums and carnations taking the lead in demand. The wire department, too, was kept busy making special designs for both local and outside trade.

James W. Dunford, at Clayton, is sending in a fine lot of cut mums to Bernings, which are much looked after by the local trade. These should take off some of the prizes at the club.

Fred C. Weber's special conservatory is ablaze with blooming plants. This is one of the attractive spots for the fashionable buyers in that section.

Walter Sanders, who manages his father's place on Delmar avenue, reports a good trade and a fine stock of pot chrysanthemums. Their nursery trade was large this fall.

George Angermueller handles a fine supply of American Beauties and show chrysanthemums. He says there is a big demand for fancy carnations.

Smith & Young, of Indianapolis, are sending to Ellis a fine lot of Brides and Maids. Steineke's carnations and Gross's violets at this place have a big demand.

W. C. Smith & Co. had quite a run on wild smilax last week, also on small ferns and kentias, disposing of nearly a carload to the local trade.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Trade conditions last week were much better than the few previous weeks, not only in business done, but also in stock. All of the dealers have done a nice business and with the arrival of early varieties of chrysanthemums the market has been relieved considerably. It is true that sales on Beauties have suffered to some extent. Some fine mums are now being cut by local growers.

Carnations have suffered, and some concerns which have thousands of plants are cutting comparatively few blooms. Home-grown violets are on the market, but only in limited numbers.

Minneapolis.

William Desmond, formerly with the Minneapolis Floral Co., is now doing the design work for Holm & Olson, St. Paul.

The New York Floral Co. reports a good trade. They put up nice windows of chrysanthemums, carnations, and ferns.

Ralph Latham reports a satisfactory business and contemplates making some additions to his place in the near future.

The Whitted Floral Co. reports active trade. They complain of the difficulty in getting good stock.

Amundson & Kirschner appear to be gradually establishing a nice trade. Business the past week with them has been principally on loose flowers.

James Souden, of the Donaldson greenhouses, Oscar Carlson, of Carlson & Sandberg, also Ralph Latham, will attend the flower show in Chicago.

St. Paul.

C. F. Vogt says that business in funeral work has been somewhat heavy.

Otto Hiersekorn has put up some attractive windows of mums, ferns, etc., and reports a good week's business.

L. L. May & Co. are cutting some of the finest roses in the city.

Holm & Olson are doing a good business in their new location. They have added a designer to their list of clerks, in the person of Wm. Desmond, of Minneapolis.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A distinct improvement has taken place in market conditions since our last report. Flowers are clearing out much better, due in part to colder weather as well as to an increase in weddings and other functions.

Chrysanthemums are selling well, a vast improvement over a year ago, when the market was demoralized. Prices vary from $4 per hundred to the same figures per dozen. Ivory is seen in large quantities and is as popular as ever. Bonaffon, Halliday, Appleton, Eaton, Jerome Jones, and other good standbys are also seen. Carnations hold about the same, from $1 to $3 per hundred, a few fancies making $4. Roses are coming of good quality and sell quite well. Usually during the mum season they are hard to move. Prices hold about the same. Violets are abundant and a little lower at 35 cents to 50 cents per hundred. A few fancies make up to 65 cents. Lilies are not abundant and valley sells well. Tuberoses, antirrhinum, cosmos and other material has a moderate sale. There is no change in prices of green goods.

Various Notes.

A call on H. M. Robinson & Co. found that enterprising firm doing an excellent business in cut flowers. Their stock included some fine mums, carnations, Beauty and other roses, violets, lilies, valley, etc. Trade for the first week surpassed all expectations, much material going out of town.

In spite of occasional pessimistic talk, the state of the Boston wholesale flower business must be regarded as distinctly encouraging. One flower market reports the best year financially it has ever had. The Music hall market has moved into larger and vastly superior quarters. One large commission firm has moved into a palatial central location, one new one has opened up, and two others are in the business, which goes to show that people are buying more flowers. Within fifty miles of Boston is to be found a population only exceeded by one city in America. With the exception of New York, no other city comes within hundreds of thousands of Boston's population, which considerably exceeds 3,000,000 in the radius named. Probably nowhere else in a similar radius are people to be found who are more fond of flowers. Is it any wonder therefore that the wholesale call steadily increases?

Waban Conservatories will roll in the F. F. Galvin's team, November 13, when a good game is looked for.

Henry D. Twombly, of Winchester, is the proud father of a son, born November 1.

William Spillsbury is again handling some superb Princess of Wales violets at Park street market.

Some of the earliest anthericums of the season are coming from Frank T. White, of Holbrook.

Much interest is being taken in the coming meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. The election of new officers promises to attract an unusually large gathering. Arrangements are now perfected, and a prospectus ready for the landscape gardening classes, to be given the coming winter.

Among visitors last week were Geo. Baldwin, Secaucus, N. J.; Geo. F. Struck, Summit, N. J.; Julius Rochrs and Thomas Knight, Rutherford, N. J.; John Ash, Pomfret, Conn.; Alex. Michie, Sharon, Conn.; Thomas Proctor, Lenox, Mass.; T. W. Weathered, New York; R. W. Peterson, Cincinnati; G. L. Freeman, Holyoke; J. R. Fotheringham, Tarrytown, N. Y.; H. Green, Warwick, R. A meeting of the New England Dahlia Society held at Horticultural hall, November 2, showed that the newest special society is growing. Membership is about 100 and interest well maintained.

Farquhar & Co. state that sales of bulbs the present season have far exceeded ed all previous years. The demand for tulips and narcissi has been phenomenal.

A nice plant of Cypripedium Fairieanum, properly classed some time ago as the lost orchid, is flowering in the collection of Oakes Ames, North Easton.

Thomas J. Beuwell, the popular salesman for A. H. Hews & Co., rounded out forty years of service with them the past week. Mr. Beuwell, in spite of some physical disabilities, carries his years lightly and is a much valued employee of the great Cambridge pottery firm.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Business last week was not satisfactory, the supply being in advance of the demand to a considerable extent, particularly so in the case of roses, although poor quality played some part in the case of these flowers. This market is sadly in need of good Brides and Maids. Chrysanthemums are coming in freely and are of good quality. Prices range from $1 to $3 per dozen. Carnations bring $2 to $3 per hundred and clean up nicely. Everything looks promising for a good supply, and now the political horizon is clear we hope for a good, busy season.

Geo. Bennett is cutting some exceptionally good Enchantress and Fair Maid.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Chrysanthemum is surely king, if only for a day. Wonderfully have the prices been maintained, either because of the general excellence of the stock, or by the general demand. For the best $3 per dozen has been asked universally. These were the large ones, and the popular ones. Some new ones touched 50 cents each at times. Totty says his White Duckham brought $1 each at Fenrich's. It also carried off the prize at Madison. We shall see some of his discoveries at the club meeting next Monday.

Violets are none too plentiful. It is rumored some of our growers have turned their eyes to the golden west and are shipping to Chicago, while the intervening cities also are making a bid for their share. This will hardly please the New York violet handlers, and we will have to nip it in the bud. All the cities in the country do not use as many violets as this great city alone. But 75 cents was top last week, and any advance must come when the mums have left the field.

Roses improve in size, stem and color, but there is no change in prices, nor will there be before the end of the month. Thanksgiving will doubtless mark the beginning of winter values. Carnations are not yet at their best, being short-stemmed and small, especially Lawson. An average price for first quality stock is $2 per hundred, except the novelties or fancies, which are already higher than usual so early in the season. Gardenias and orchids are abundant, fortunately, for the demand grows constantly and the outlook for Thanksgiving never was so bright.

SUBJECT TO MARKET CHANGE

Various Notes.

From Milburn to Madison, through Jersey by auto unfolds a beautiful panorama of mountain and dale, and many a lake of glass. Henshaw Bros. was the first stopping place, where five modern houses 24x150 are devoted to roses. Eight acres of ground denote future possibilities, and carnation culture is on the cards. This plant has been established five years. Conrad Siebert is foreman. Here the new rose, Minnie Henshaw, is growing splendidly, a beautiful cerise pink, large, sweet, a strong grower, and wonderful keeper. The quantity grown for the market is all contracted for by one of the big Broadway florists. It looks like a valuable acquisition. The Henshaws are young men of fine character and ability, and will grow rapidly in reputation and success. They are nephews of Grandpa Henshaw, of Staten Island, one of the young old men of American horticulture, like Dr. Hexamer, Chas. Allen, and Edgar Sanders. Maids, Brides and Richmonds are grown here, and the output is handled in New York by A. M. Henshaw. Mrs. W. Henshaw, who has been ill for a long time, is convalescing.

Next come the eight houses of Anderson & Christensen, 18x100, devoted exclusively to fern culture, where scores of thousands of all useful varieties are grown and shipped yearly to every part of the country. The plant has been established for eight years. Here the largest stock of cibotium in America may be seen, in from 3-inch to 12-inch pots. The varieties of ferns grown include all the best sorts, both for specimens and for filling ferneries. Mr. Anderson has just returned from a summer at his old home in the land of the midnight sun.

On the highway leading to Madison appear the great establishments of L. M. Noe, L. A. Noe, and Henry Hentz, and not far away is the home of the Bridesmaid, where Mr. Moore still holds sway, but the shades of evening made postponement of a call at these places necessary. One could spend a week within ten miles of Madison, visiting profitably the homes of the rose growers, and still have duties unfulfilled.

Near Summit is the big house of V.

Hamann, 26x250, devoted to Mrs. Lawson carnation. Nearer Madison we pass John Voight's place on the hillside, and Ben Lapp's, where progress is evident yearly. Lyman B. Coddington's great plants at Murray Hill and New Providence cover a quarter of a million square feet. Here roses are grown. Some of the new houses devoted to Beauties are 50x350, and the stock now is superb. The cut is handled in Twenty-eighth street by H. E. Froment.

Charles, the right bower of Theo. Lang since 1894, is now added to the force of Ford Bros. To look at their stock of Ivory, pink and white, on its arrival Saturday one would have acknowledged the need of extra help, and the wisdom of the record size ice-box here.

Wm. C. Grimshaw, late of Atlanta, Ga., has taken a position with Alex. McConnell.

Van Praag has added to his novelties a large stock of the popular nursery rhyme flower boxes. Out of town florists may realize their value and beauty by the price, which is $1 each. The top of the box is good enough for framing. The novelty ideas in all lines—vases, boxes, trunks, and a dozen other inspirations—is marked this season. Every retailer has something in his window or up his sleeve for this year's Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Alex. J. Guttman is predicting for the growers and the wholesale trade the greatest season ever known. He is one of the New York visitors this week at the Chicago exhibition.

J. K. Allen doesn't allow municipal honors and duties to interfere with his "6 to 6" devotion to his customers. Never before have his out of town shipments been so numerous in his eighteen years of hustling, and he looks like a two-year-old, still.

George Saltford grows in stature and popularity as the violets get ripe. He is prophesying a busy and prosperous winter.

James Hart has added a box and evergreen department to his cut flower business, and the move to Twenty-eighth street proves a wise one. He looks good for another thirty years.

Jos. Fenrich was an interested visitor at the Madison show, and hovered over Totty's big blooms lovingly most of the time.

W. H. Donohoe is busy with weddings and decorations, as usual, and his store on Twenty-ninth street is an evergreen garden at its portal.

M. A. Bowe's windows always demonstrate the touch of his artistic French schooling in arrangement and color blending.

A. Warendorff in the center of the theatre district gives daily thought and care to original and profuse window decoration, realizing as fully as anyone how much depends in New York on this sop to the blase eyes of the transient.

On Friday of this week Wm. Elliott & Sons have a large sale at auction of conifers and hardy roses. They gave the auctioneer a holiday on Tuesday.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week the New York annual flower show is on at the American Institute, West Forty-fourth street.

The Dobbs Ferry chrysanthemum show has been postponed to Friday and Saturday of this week. D. MacFarlane and Wm. Scott are the judges.

Wm. H. Waite is back as superintendent of the old Tilden place, Greystone, Yonkers, N. Y.

No member of the New York Florists' Club can afford to miss the special meeting and display of beauty, adorned and unadorned, on Monday evening. Music, ladies, mums and gastronomic surprises should bring a record crowd. Most important of all, the life of a club depends on its officers. The very best men in the society are none too good for the places which are to be filled, and the best men should be selected always. There is a promise of friendly rivalry for all the honors.

Election day proved unexpectedly good, thousands of chrysanthemums being used in decorations. Business was brisk all day and the success of Hughes gives reassurance to the element to which the leading retailers cater. The prospects are bright for a busy and prosperous winter. The weather is fine and insures large supplies of stock for the extra demand at

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Last week was a satisfactory one, a great number of weddings and debutante teas calling for choice chrysanthemums and roses, while the downtown sections of the city had a good deal of funeral work, caused by the wreck at Atlantic City; all of which, with the regular business, made a fairly busy week. Toward the latter part, Beauties shortened up and brought $4 a dozen locally. The general tone of the market was firm the last days of the week, there being a nice clean-up. Violets are scarce, and on Saturday, with the increased demand, the market was left practically bare. From now until the end of the football season violets will be in good demand, particularly on Saturdays. Chrysanthemums are moving off a trifle better than in former years. There are some fine Timothy Eaton, yellow and white, also Major Bonnaffon and Col. Appleton, and in the smaller varieties, white and pink Ivory and white and pink Baizley. There are a limited number of pompon chrysanthemums, which find a ready sale. The cooler weather is making an improvement in Brides and Maids, and they are showing up much better, as is also Killarney, the best bringing $10 per hundred. Carnations have been selling well, good Enchantress and Lawson bringing $4 per hundred, other ordinary kinds from $2 to $3. A few pansies are coming in, and find a ready market.

Hatboro.

A visitor to Hatboro, to the green-houses of E. Weiss, will see there some of the finest carnations being sent this year to the Philadelphia market. Mr. Weiss has thirteen houses in all, eight planted in carnations and five in Brides and Maids in good condition. The varieties of carnations grown are Enchantress, Robert Craig, John E. Haines, Lieut. Peary, white and pink Lawson, and The Queen, which are disposed of by Samuel Lilley, the able-bodied salesman.

Various Notes.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. report a large demand for their goods, among which will arrive shortly on the steamer Marguerite some baskets, moss, immortelles, crepe paper, mats, etc.

The Bouvardia Humboldti, mentioned in this column two weeks ago, is grown by L. Reuter, of Philadelphia, the grower's name having been omitted through an oversight.

A. Campbell is showing a fine pink chrysanthemum seedling, with a fine flower, stem and color. It scored ninety-five at a previous show.

The chrysanthemum show this week, as promised, has been the best yet, many new varieties being shown.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is showing this week a fine assortment of carnations and chrysanthemums.

E. Bernheimer is still receiving fine autumn foliage, thought to be over a week ago.

DENVER.

The Market.

The market continues in a satisfactory and perfectly healthy condition. There have been some fluctuations from day to day, but on the whole these have been of minor importance. We had a heavy fall of snow last week, which cut off some trade for a couple of days, and another heavy storm this week, which interfered with the usual number of people getting out, but it is a safe assertion that last month was as good an October as the florists have had in some years.

The quality of stock in all lines is good. While the influx of chrysanthemums has curtailed the demand for roses to some extent, it is not so noticeable. Our flower buyers never drop American Beauty roses altogether for chrysanthemums.

quickly and advantageously. Therefore, the selling of surplus or inferior plants by any plan is hardly worthy of the name "marketing," in its highest sense.

Plants.

Granted then that the plants to be offered are perfect, it will, I think, be conceded that the best method adopted, up to the present, is to dispose of them through the agency of the commercial representatives. Advertising in the trade papers constantly and intelligently is of great advantage. Personal letters to one's customers are very effective. Established reputation and a long record of square dealing are of vast importance. But the gentlemanly, persistent, magnetic "drummer" is irresistible. His supreme value is demonstrated by the fact that every successful grower of this country and Europe, in every department of the plant industry, has his accredited representative, whose yearly, or monthly, or weekly visits keep his firm constantly in touch with his clientage.

Character of the Salesman.

Much might be said here of the man required for this important work—of his personality, his habits, his character. All these have to do with his efficiency. And more might be said of the firm he represents—its ability to produce the perfect product, its careful filling of orders received, its generous recognition of patronage, its quick correction of errors, its tact, its promptness, its indisputable honesty. But all these must be conceded to arrive at the fulfilment of our contention, that the best method of marketing the product of the wholesale plant grower is through the agency of the commercial traveler.

Here, too, it would not be out of place, the fact being conceded, to consider what manner of man the salesman should be, that he may be best competent to market the goods his grower has to offer. But this subject has been fully covered in the essays of 1905 on the "Ideal Salesman."

Cut Flowers.

The marketing of the product of the wholesale flower grower is an entirely different proposition. Here we have to consider a perishable commodity, and at once we must admit the necessity of rapid disposal as of paramount importance. Ice-box preservation is uncertain, restricted and preservative but for a day. Shipments from the grower direct to the retailer have seldom proven profitable because of the retailer's frequent inability to dispose of all the daily product of a greenhouse plant of any dimensions, or from the limit of the supply. Personal soliciting by the grower leaves him subject to the needs or whims of the retailer, and prices fluctuate downward as the day advances and the handling of the flowers deteriorates their quality. I think there is but one opinion possible as to the best method of disposing of or marketing cut flowers, and that is through the medium of the wholesale florist.

For over a quarter of a century the advantages of this system, now so universally popular, have been thoroughly established. Here, centralization of the market facilities for purchase is at once apparent, and a depot is established for shipments, accessible at any hour of the day or night.

The grower, therefore, having assured himself of the honesty and ability as a salesman of his wholesale agent, can add, as prosperity makes it wise, house after house to his base of supply, conscious that there will never come a time when a fair recompense will not reward him for every flower that reaches the market.

ready early and late to wait upon the demands of the great retail public. It is to his interest to maintain honest values, to dispose of his stock as rapidly as he can to the mutual advantage of his grower and himself, and to make such returns as have actually been received, promptly and honestly.

The subject confines one to the finding of "the best method" only. Having demonstrated this, what more can be added, except to advise the grower to exercise business acumen in the selection of his representative and having decided upon the best wholesaler, to trust him implicitly; and until a better method is discovered or a better wholesaler discovered, stand by both loyally, ship the entire product of his greenhouses daily, avoiding absolutely the dishonesty of pickled flowers, and so build up the reputation of flowers and methods on such a basis that success and permanent prosperity may be assured.

Commissionman's Responsibilities.

It having been admitted then that the grower may best dispose of his product through the wholesaler, there remains only for our consideration the best methods whereby the wholesaler may complete the expectations of the grower to his profit and satisfaction. The wholesaler must establish a reputation for honesty. He must have the facilities for handling carefully any quantity of stock that reaches him and be prepared for any possible emergency. His ice-box must be capacious, his room for display ample, his employees reliable, his personal attention to every detail persistent, his reputation must be unsullied, his returns prompt and absolutely correct, his shipping conveniences abundant. He must not only be ready to meet the local demand, but by judicious advertising must induce the confidence of the best trade in adjacent cities and towns. He must create a demand for out-of-town shipments by personal solicitation and correspondence. He must as rapidly as possible in his own city secure orders for a regular daily allotment to be assorted and delivered promptly on arrival and must hold his trade by every legitimate method, making the satisfaction of these regular customers his first consideration.

Granting all this, the complete "marketing" of the product of the wholesale flower grower is a foregone conclusion and in no other way can the certainty of complete disposal be assured.

FORCING SPIRAEA.

Kindly inform me when to plant the Gladstone spiraea for Christmas flowers.

W. W. S.

We believe it is impossible to force any of the spiraea of this type by Christmas. They come along quickly in the spring, as their natural flowering time approaches. For Easter we allow ten weeks. Your bulbs, or rather roots, have scarcely yet arrived, and it would take twice ten weeks to force them into flower at this time. A dormant bulb or root must have a short interval of rest before starting a new growth. Let your spiraea rest till the first part of February. We have other stock up to that time.

A FLORIST'S SHOWGROUND.

We have a piece of ground 200 feet deep and 1,000 feet long, running east and west along a main turnpike and trolley road, where thousands of persons pass daily. It is our desire to lay this piece of ground out in driveways and hedges with hardy and greenhouse plants. There are a dwelling and several greenhouses at the western edge, which extend about 300 feet of the 1,000-foot distance, and the remaining 700 feet is where we desire to plant hardy plants in abundance, such as hydrangeas, roses, peonies, phloxes, etc., that will do for cut flowers and make a beautiful display in due time. Can you give us any information how to lay this ground out to the best advantage, and what varieties of plants to use? All plants are to be bought. Any information you can give us will be gladly received.

to any retail florist. In this case one broad path, running from east to west through the center of the block of land to be planted, should be all that is needed. Coarse cinders make an excellent path. It might be well to have it sufficiently wide to allow a team to pass down it. The shrubs and other flowering plants could be run north and south in perfectly straight rows, which are much more satisfactory than beds, and permit of the better cultivation of the land.

The varieties of shrubs, etc., for cutting or show purposes are so numerous that it is hard to make a selection without knowing more specifically what their uses are to be. Either for cut flower purposes or selling as plants, the following shrubs are especially valuable: Lilacs in variety, Deutzia gracilis, D. crenata and D. Lemoini, Philadelphus coronarius and the newer Lemoini varieties; Azalea mollis and A. pontica; Viburnum plicatum, V. Opulus and V. tomentosum; Spiraea Van Houttei, S. prunifolia, S. Bumalda Anthony Waterer, S. arguta opulifolia; Forsythia Fortunei; Daphne Cneorum; Hydrangea Otaksa and H. paniculata grandiflora; Lonicera fragrantissima, L. Tatarica and L. Morrowi; Weigelia rosea and W. Eva Rathke; and Hypericum Moserianum.

Of course, hybrid perpetual and hybrid tea roses, rambler roses in variety, peonies, digitalis, hollyhocks, phloxes, German and Japanese irises, delphiniums, oriental poppies, Achillea Ptarmica The Pearl, Anemone Japonica in variety, Boltonia latisquama and B. asteroides, Aster Novae-Angliae, and other forms, Canterbury bells, Campanula persicifolia, sweet williams, Aquilegia coerulea and C. chrysantha, Gaillardia grandiflora, Coreopsis grandiflora, Helianthus rigidus Miss Mellish, H. multiflorus plenus, and H. mollis; Heuchera sanguinea, Physostegia Virginica, Veronica spicata and V. longifolia subsessilis; Helenium autumnale superbum; Lychnis viscaria splendens; Pyrethrum uliginosum; Rudbeckia Golden Glow; Astilbe Japonica multiflora; Aruncus astilboides; Clematis recta; Platycodon Mariesii; Malva moschata; Lupinus polyphyllus; Dietamnus Fraxinella; Stokesia cyanea; Tritoma grandiflora; Lilium auratum, L. speciosum, L. candidum, L. Henryi; Galtonia candicans; montbretias, early and late blooming tulips, and narcissi, more especially the cottage, Darwin and other late tulips, etc.

In annuals, asters, stocks, larkspurs, Shirley poppies, mignonette, coreopsis, sweet peas, candytuft, sweet alyssum and many other sorts may be used. Dahlias should receive some space and gladioli as they must be kept dampened, if not soaking in water, all of the time. What are the general points about the propagation and care of these vines and usual wholesale and retail prices? J. C. H.

On receipt of above we fainted away, being entirely ignorant of any air-plants that could be of any use to a commercial florist. We consulted Bailey's "Cyclopedia of American Horticulture," thinking that able and comprehensive work would give us all that was worth knowing about these mysterious products of the vegetable kingdom. We did not expect the "wholesale or retail price" to be quoted, and this is all Professor Bailey has to say about so called air-plants:

"Air-plants: In common speech any plant which grows on the trunk or on the top of another plant is called an air-plant. The proper term is epiphyte (that is, growing on a plant). In horticulture the term air-plant is usually applied to epiphytal orchids, tillandsias and the like. Most of these grow upon an old bark, perhaps deriving some of the nourishment from the bark, but most of it from the air and rain. They are not parasites—do not derive their support from the juices of the host."

That is all there is, word for word, about air-plants. The writer of the above, to make clear the difference of an epiphyte and a parasite, might have instanced the mistletoe and dodder, which do draw their support from the juices of the host-plant and are, therefore, true parasites. We know of no other air-plants, either terrestrial or aquatic, therefore cannot say where you can buy them in round numbers, how to propagate them, or their price wholesale and retail. We suspect our correspondent has seen some advertisement by some fraud florist or firm of horticultural quacks. W. S.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Business continues good and chrysanthemums have been cleaning up nicely every day. The first pink and white Ivory made their appearance the first of the week and are more than welcome, as it is the best variety for general use and none of the newer sorts has been able to take its place as a shipper and a useful flower for the small florist and his trade. Violets continue to improve and prices are advancing. H. R. Carlton, of Willoughby, is sending in some fine Gov. Herrick that find ready takers. Isaac Kennedy is sending in the best grade of Brides and Maids reaching this market, and the west side florists gobble them up before they reach Euclid avenue.

Various Notes.

J. M. Gasser has broken down under too close application to business and the constant worry over labor troubles, which he greatly magnified, and consequently brought on such a state of mental worry, bordering on a total collapse, that his friends interposed, and at the suggestion of several physicians he has been prevailed upon to take a complete rest as the greatest hope of restoring his health. He left last Saturday for a private sanitarium at Walnut Hills, Cincinnati, where a complete change of scene it is hoped will restore him to health in a few months, when he will either return to active work for the Easter season or pay a long visit to relatives in Texas.

The Carl Hagenberger Floral Co. had its formal opening last Saturday at the new store on East Fifty-eighth street. Beautiful weather and some extra select stock helped to make the new firm a success from the start, which was a foregone conclusion to those who know of the push and energy of Misses Westman and Getz, members of the firm. Carl Hagenberger, who is associated with them, now has a string of stores, including Madison, Painesville and Cleveland, backed up by his extensive plant at Mentor.

E. Heidenblut is much pleased with the advent of the new Tomcon, or three-cent street car line opened on Rhodes avenue last week, and in consequence he is planning extensive improvements in the spring, among other things being an addition of several new houses to grow stock for the wholesale trade.

One of the Baur brothers, of Erie, Pa., who has been at the greenhouses of the Gasser Co., has resigned and taken a position as store man with Smith & Fetters, where he will put a finishing touch to his knowledge of that end of the business.

M. Bloy, grower and manager for the Ohio Floral Co., has acquired an interest in and taken the position of general manager for the extensive plant of the Gasser Co.

MEMPHIS, TENN.—The business of the Memphis Floral Co. is showing the result of Otto Schwill's enterprise in the matter of the new store. They are doing much more than last year.

FORT ATKINSON, WIS.—Louis Prochaska received a carload of coal from West Virginia recently on which the freight charges were $156.16. The first cost of the coal, fifty-one tons, was $69.

PACKING PLANTS.

I wish you would tell us how to pack plants and cuttings for shipment both in summer and winter. I either pack too tight or too loose, or get the plants too hot. Have never had the satisfaction of receiving a reply of "Plants arrived in good condition," and I do not know what the matter is. J. G. A.

This is such a large and intricate subject that our friend cannot expect the subject to be dealt with in any comprehensive way, although we should all be glad to get some points from the packer for some firm which does a large shipping business. The expert packers are among the most valuable men in any establishment. They have served no apprenticeship to that special part of the business, but have picked it up by practice and experience, and are sure to be endowed with quick wit and good judgment—in other words, brains. It is a rare occurrence when receiving an invoice of plants, large or small, from large firms, east or west, that we could not truthfully reply, "Plants arrived in excellent condition."

We can here give only some general ideas on packing. One difficulty about packing plants is that in many orders there will be a great variation in number and size of plants, and there is where smartness comes in. The quality of paper for wrapping your small plants is worth considering. We used to receive plants from Peter Henderson & Co. that were wrapped in a fine quality of brown paper. It was soft and flexible but tough. After some searching we found the same quality in our own city. It's about the weight of newspaper, and it looks far better than old copies of the New York Journal or Police Gazette.

Packing in summer is a simple matter.
Plants can be stood upright in a box, the sides of which are as high as the leaves or flowers of the plants, and when filled nail two or three narrow boards on top so that the expressman can put other packages on top. If not, an extra charge is made. Whether packed in summer or in a closed box for winter shipment, there should never be any chance of the plants shifting or moving their position.
If your plants do not fill the box, then fill up the vacant space with paper, dry moss or excelsior.

In wrapping small plants, like carnations, chrysanthemums or roses, I allude to 2-inch sizes, then four plants can be wrapped in one parcel a little better than singly. Rooted cuttings that will reach their destination in forty-eight hours should be wrapped in parcels of twenty-five and their roots surrounded with a little slightly moist sphagnum moss, not wet moss.

The condition of the plants when packed has much to do with success in shipping. Plants should never be dry when packed; neither should they be very recently watered. Look up the plants to fill your order, and if on the dry side, water them. In four or five hours the ball of soil will be in proper condition to pack.

To revert again to the small plants in a closed box: After you have the first layer of parcels covering the bottom of the box, it is well to put in three or four layers of paper, or a thin layer of excelsior.
This will prevent heating. As above said, always pack tight enough so that there is no possible chance for the plants to shift position, for a box that is nailed tight on all sides is tossed about in every direction.

I use a little illustration how not to do it. Some eighteen years ago when that brilliant geranium, F. S. Raspail, was a new and bright variety, we shipped P. R. Quinlan, of Syracuse, 100 plants from 2½-inch pots. I trusted my head man to pack and send them off (poor fellow, he now wears wings, I hope). He wrapped each little plant

It receives its name of praying mantis

The insect is also known as rear horse,

Its habits are predaceous, and it depends largely on its resemblance to twigs and leaves for protection. It waits patiently for insects to come near, when it promptly pounces upon them and devours them. The females will even devour the other sex. Their young are more delicate in appearance, and when quite immature, are green. The female deposits her eggs in large, conspicuous clusters, which may be found but are not suitable to occupy our northern flower beds, because under ordinary conditions it is about the first part of July before they are in bloom. To do well outdoors, they should have a warm border to which has been added a lot of peat or leaf-mold and a liberal amount of sand. Now, if you have them in flats, or a number of the little bulbs in a 5-inch or 6-inch pot, they should at present be in a coldframe, and an inch of dry sand covering the soil. And in addition to that three or four inches of hay or straw, not so much to keep out frost as to prevent a continual freezing

THE Steckler Seed Co., New Orleans, is making alterations and repairs on its warehouse amounting to $1,800.

C. S. CLARK, Wakeman, O., has acquired the Campbell property adjoining his warehouse and will increase his facilities.

THE seed warehouse of Rogers Bros., at Chaumont, N. Y., has been sold to a corporation that will carry on the business in the future under the name of the People's Milling Co.

THE shortage in tomato seeds promises to be especially felt because canners already are practically sold out on the 1906 pack and may be expected to require record quantities of seeds for 1907.

REFERRING to the query of W. H. W., as to seeds of perennials, it may be stated that Arthur T. Boddington, New York, last summer issued a list of seeds of hardy perennials containing the names of nearly 400 varieties.

RENNIE & THOMSON, Providence, R. I., announce that they have secured quarters at 135 and 137 Washington street, where they will do a general seed and bulb business. Mr. Thomson was for eight years with R. & J. Farquhar & Co., Boston.

REPRESENTATIVES of leading American firms who visited the trial grounds of Watkins & Simpson, London, at Feltham and Twickenham, Middlesex, express the opinion that there are no finer testing grounds in all Europe, and none where a larger list of novelties is tried out each year.

C. F. WOOD, of Wood, Stubbs & Co., Louisville, was at Lexington, October 23, attending the meeting of the State Horticultural Society, and offered a resolution condemning the government seed distribution. The State Grange also adopted similar resolutions.

CATALOGUE ILLUSTRATION.

There was a time when the woodcut, with all its stiffness and lack of naturalness, was considered the finest thing in catalogue illustration, but that day has passed. All the best 1906 seed catalogues contained more or less halftones, and the 1907 books will be largely illustrated by this process. The halftone, however, has its disadvantages, one of the greatest of which is the difficulty of procuring the right kind of "copy," for a part of the detail in a photograph is lost in making the reproduction, and unless good paper and presswork are used a much greater loss of character is encountered in the printing process. The retouching of photographs to bring out the detail has proved only partly successful, for usually the work of the "artist" was plainly visible in the printed reproduction and served to counteract the very purpose of the halftone process, for it

When Montgomery Ward & Co. estab-

the season to procure many good photographs, they were at a loss to secure the right kind of cuts for their catalogue.

It would have been easy enough to have clipped woodcut illustrations from other catalogues and reproduced them in zinc at a cost of a few cents each, or to have bought stock cuts, but the result would have been far below the standard of the house. More as an experiment than anything else, their engraver was given some clippings and told to reproduce them in wash drawing. The result was so good that their entire book, with only one or two exceptions, was illustrated in wash. The cuts were true to nature, clear in detail and permitted the use of lighter paper and less expensive presswork than would have been necessary with halftones from the best of photographs. In addition there was absolute uniformity in the cuts throughout the book, and the illustrations practically are safe from reproduction.

The process of wash drawing is an old one as applied to magazine and other illustrating, but was new so far as seed catalogues were concerned. It was therefore natural that the first work should be improved upon, and such has been the fact. Not every artist is able to make a drawing of a cabbage or a watermelon, even from the best of copy, but those who are able to do good work are being kept busy this fall, so popular has the new style of illustration become. It is in line with the very evident demand for better books. The battered electrotype has had its day.

COLORADO SEED CROPS.

D. V. Burrell, Rocky Ford, Colo., under date of October 31 writes as follows:

"As to how seed crops are turning out in this district, I will say that the larger portion of our growing is for our own trade, only a few hundred acres being grown under contract for the wholesale trade. Our yields have been very satisfactory, and we expect to make full delivery on nearly all items.

"Conditions at this time are not favorable to a larger growth of the contract seed growing business here. The sugar-beet crop is practically sure. The average yield is about sixteen tons to the acre, and the contract price is $5 per ton. With five sugar-beet factories in operation in the valley, and more to be constructed the coming season, it means that farmers will not grow seeds at the present low prices, with an average, net, on beets of $45 per acre clear of all expenses. Present wholesale prices will have to be increased considerably

GENERAL SEED ADVERTISING.

J. H. Ford has this to say in a recent number of White's Class Advertising:

"The successful advertising of seeds for mail orders is a difficult proposition. To know what papers to use and what to keep out of, I believe, can be only learned by experience. Publishers all believe their own publications are good advertising mediums, and they can, as a rule, give some good reasons why they ought to be such. We must, however, take into consideration the location of the paper and the particular field that it covers.

"A paper that is profitable for an Iowa seed house to use may be of no value at all to us here in northern Ohio. This we have found to be the case, and, consequently, we have cut out a number of good papers which we confidently believe are equal in every way to some that pay us. We say, pay us. By this we mean those which bring in more money than the cost of the advertisement the first year. It is seldom that the net profits on a year's advertising will pay the cost of the advertising.

of careful selection of mediums and close attention to inquiries.

"In 1906 we used twenty-one papers, mostly selected from a list of fifty-nine used in 1905. We will reduce this list to about ten papers and add a few for experimental purposes in 1907. We are of the opinion when actual orders cannot be secured at less than a cost of $1.50 each, the paper might as well be dropped after a trial of two years. It sometimes happens that papers doing extra well one year will not make good another; therefore, do not think it wise to condemn a paper on one trial.

Training the Plants.

As soon as the plants show a tendency to run they should be trained so as to keep them from becoming unduly tangled and in order to fill all the space upon the trellis, says L. C. Corbett in a recent bulletin of the Department of Agriculture. The trellis can be made of light edging seven-eighths of an inch square, tacked to the side of the bench when the cucumbers are grown on wood benches and set up in the form of the letter A. Galvanized wires, No. 16, can be run lengthwise of the house and stapled to the supports, which should be placed about six feet apart. Upon side benches which are elevated it will be necessary to train the cucumbers to the framework of the greenhouse. For this purpose screweyes about eight inches in length can be placed in the sashbars at intervals of four or five feet and the parallel wires to which the vines are to be tied stretched twelve inches apart lengthwise of the house through these screweyes and firmly fastened at the ends. The vines should then be loosely tied to the supporting wires with raffia or soft cotton yarn.

When the fruits become heavy, as in the case of the English varieties, it will become necessary to support them to prevent their weight breaking the vines. Heavy fruits will cause the supporting wires or bands of raffia to break or girdle the vines unless they are supported independently. The American varieties seldom attain sufficient size to require this precaution. Fruits of these varieties, as soon as they are eight to ten inches in length and two inches in diameter, are harvested for market. The vines would not advise the making up of the hotbed, and starting of the plants, before the first or second week in March, for cabbage, tomatoes, etc., and for sweet potatoes, not before the middle of April, as these require a higher temperature than could be maintained in a hotbed much before this date; besides, with the proper conditions these start quickly, and will make large enough plants by the time they can safely be trusted outdoors.

Hotbeds are often made all over-ground, but we prefer to have the soil excavated to a depth of from two and one-half to three feet, to the full width and length of the frames. This method economizes material, and insures a longer retention of heat. The material should consist of fresh stable litter, to which, if convenient, may be added leaves to about one-third the bulk. The material should be got together a few days previous to making up the hotbed, and turned over to insure its being well mixed, otherwise part of it may be wet and the other dry, which would produce unevenness of heat. When ready, the material should be put in, in layers, trodden as firmly as possible. The depth of the material should be at least three feet.

As soon as the bed is completed, the sash should be placed over it and about three inches of soil spread over the surface inside the frame. Allow it to stand and ventilate for a few days, until the more violent heat has worked off, after which the seeds may safely be sown. These we prefer to sow in flats, which can be readily removed to the potting shed, and handled over when the plants become large enough for transplanting.

In starting the sweet potatoes it is necessary to have a light, sandy soil. This should be placed under the tubers to a depth of about five inches, and over them to a depth of two inches. The smaller tubers will not require to be cut, but the larger ones may be split up through the middle and placed outside down. They succeed best when kept rather on the dry side until they have started growth.

Ventilation must be carefully attended to through the day, and at night, when cold nights occur especially, the frames

Current Comment.

The decoration day, which we call in New Orleans All Saints' day, has been observed this year with as much attention as before. The weather was beautiful and, the season having been quite favorable, flowers were plentiful. The only scarcity was among the private gardens, and that made it even better for the many who had grown flowers for the market. On that day a score of men and women, who are not regular florists, bring to the markets large lots of chrysanthemums. Some are good and some are poorly grown, but every one found a purchaser, and it would be hard to find any one who did not entirely sell out everything he had to offer. On Tuesday night a carload of boxes of carnations, roses and mums came from Chicago and was divided among many florists. Many ferns were received also directly from the source of production, and after all the trade in general must have been well satisfied on the occasion. Prices were from $1 to $3 for outdoor chrysanthemums. The finest ones, as good as any coming from the north, found a better price.

Superintendent Baker, of the Audubon park, tendered his resignation at the last meeting of the board of commissioners. The park is losing an expert gardener and an active, industrious and patient officer. His resignation is a surprise.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE bushel box as a package for fancy apples steadily is growing in favor.

THE Santa Fe railroad will plant 700,000 eucalyptus near San Diego, Cal., for tie timber.

THE Estella Nursery Co., Wood River, Neb., established last spring, reports a good fall season.

W. L. HART, secretary of the T. S. Hubbard Co., Fredonia, N. Y., has gone to Phoenix, Ariz., to spend the winter.

CITY ENGINEER FRENCH, of Salem, O., condemns the poplar, as he is having trouble with the roots getting into his sewers.

THE Le Clare Nurseries Co., Rochester, N. Y., has been incorporated with $25,000 authorized capital by J. C. A. and F. Le Clare.

THE government irrigation projects in the southwest are expected to lead to the establishment of several nurseries in the new semi-arid region.

THE Northwestern railroad is this fall planting a great deal of shrubbery at the station grounds along its line in Illinois and Iowa, beds of soft-wooded stock having been virtually abandoned.

As a result of a recent court decision the nursery property of Pierson Bros., Waterloo, N. Y., will be sold under foreclosure of a trust deed securing about forty creditors to the amount of about $36,000.

ROLAND J. MORRILL, of Benton Harbor, Mich., states that the recent cold snap killed all the peach trees in his 140-acre orchard, and that such is the general condition of orchards in the southwestern part of the state.

THE Western Nursery Co., Delta, Colo., is prospering. Elmer E. Young is president and A. J. Vorse manager. Capital is made that it is a home institution, the directors including H. E. Perkins, D. P. Cook and J. S. Charlton, all well known locally.

PROF. LOWELL B. JUDSON, of Ithaca, N. Y., assistant professor of horticulture in Cornell University, sent out by that institution to investigate the citrus industry of California, Texas and Florida, visited Corpus Christi and Alvin, Tex., en route east from the coast and now is in Florida.

ORLANDO HARRISON, president of the American Association of Nurserymen, is quoted as saying: "I have little faith in fumigation, and I know of instances where it has injured the trees. We prefer most decidedly to dip the trees just before planting in the mixture of salt, lime and sulphur, the same as the spray mixture, then take the trees by the roots and dip the tops. Then every fruit grower will plant his trees with a greater degree of certainty and faith, and have more confidence that his trees are free from insects and diseases for a short time at least."

RAMSEY ON PECANS.

F. T. Ramsey is enthusiastic over the possibilities of pecan culture and made a statement of general interest and application over Texas, though he specifically referred to the magnificent pecan bottoms on the Llano and San Saba rivers and their larger creek tributaries. There are immense groves of pecan trees in the west bottoms skirting those streams. Mr. Ramsey says:

"I think it proper to call attention of persons owning pecan trees to the fact that they ought to pay more attention to the extra fancy pecans that are to be found here and there up and down the streams mentioned. Many extra fancy pecans sell for 50 cents a pound, but the greatest value of these trees is in the buds and grafts that may be secured from them. Owners of them ought to give persons who are paying attention to pecans an opportunity to inspect them, and they ought to top all their trees that bear inferior nuts and in June begin budding the trees with the fine varieties. In the big rise last summer some old pecan shells came down with the drift that were possibly the finest and largest nuts to be found anywhere. The owner of the trees doubtless does not realize what he possesses."

THE RUSSIAN POPLAR.

Jens Jensen, general superintendent of the west side parks at Chicago, has given a boost to tree-planting by issuing the following interview:

"I am convinced," said Mr. Jensen,

"that the Russian poplar is the only tree that will survive Chicago conditions. The insects shun it like poison. The leaves have a peculiar bitter taste that even the oyster shell bark louse doesn't like. If this bug had to live on Russian poplar, he would die. His gorge rises every time he thinks of it."

"Our parks are paradises for tree lice. The larvae have been feeding on our trees, boring their way in and eating the heart out of the tree. Then a windstorm comes along and the tree breaks."

"At the government experiment station in Minnesota they have been cultivating Russian poplars extensively. The tree has many points of superiority. In the first place it keeps its shape. The branches do not struggle or sag. This poplar could be planted even in the downtown streets."

"There is no reason why every residence street in the city shouldn't be lined with Russian poplars. If every citizen would plant one of these trees, you hardly would recognize the city next spring. People would come miles to see the sight, and Chicago again would assume the title 'Urbs in Horto.'"

EMBELLISHMENT OF WAYSIDES.

[A paper by J. A. Pettigrew, read before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, April 17, 1906, continued from The Review of September 27 and October 4 and 11.]

The white willow (Salix alba var. coerulea), introduced from Europe, was, undoubtedly, a favorite with the early settlers, as fine trees are to be found throughout the coast of New England.

The variety coerulea is the one most suited, I think, for street planting. It is not particular as to soil, and, if a little care is given to the training up of a leader, it forms a handsome tree. The willow does not lend itself to neat and precise or formal work. Its value as a street tree lies in its adaptability to adverse conditions, its early budding forth in spring, and in its holding its bright-shining green leaves until late in the fall.

The tulip tree (Liriodendron tulipifera) is another good tree for suburban and wayside planting. It is impatient of restraint or hard usage; but, under proper conditions, it is one of the finest trees of the forest.

The Sturdy Oaks.

The red oak (Quercus rubra) and the scarlet oak (Quercus coccinea) are both grand shade trees for the streets in suburban districts, or for the wayside. The prevalent notion has been that these trees are of slow growth, which accounts for their not having been used for street planting. This idea is erroneous, especially as regards the red oak, which I think will outstrip a hard maple in growth. On the Boston parkways, the red oak has been extensively planted for shade. The growth, since the trees became established, has averaged two feet each season, and in some of them a growth of from four to six feet has been made in one season. The oak will not thrive under paved street and sidewalk conditions, but no better trees can be planted for roadsides, or even for

The pin oak (Quercus palustris). This oak is a very graceful tree in its young state. Its lower branches drop with a curved sweep to the ground, consequently it should be planted only in such positions as will allow the lower branches to be retained. As a street tree in ordinary locations this cannot be done, and the most beautiful feature of the tree is thus lost. Without its lower branches, this oak is much inferior in appearance to the red or scarlet oak. It loves moisture, however, and may be utilized on low grounds.

Care Needed in Planting.

The planting of street trees requires as much care as does their selection. It is not enough to merely dig a hole and crowd the roots into it. Any expectations based on such planting are doomed to end in disappointment. In laying out for street planting, let the first stakes be set at the street crossings. When the abutting streets also are to be planted, place two stakes at each corner, about thirty feet from the point of intersection of the curb line, on each street. Then space off the intervening distance, setting the stakes equally distant apart, but not less than sixty-five feet, as the shortest distance.

Street trees, generally, are planted too closely together. Sometimes this is done with the intention of cutting out alternate ones, as the growth of the trees require. This, however, is seldom done, and the trees grow up too thickly, thereby overcrowding and injuring each other, destroying also the individual beauty of the trees and the symmetrical arrangement which an avenue of trees should have.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business among the retailers shows little improvement over last week. The weather continues warm and dry. Business with the wholesalers, however, continues to be good. There is just about enough stock produced to be all used up in the stores and by the various shipping orders.

Chrysanthemums are the seasonable flowers, and the prices realized by the growers are somewhat in excess of those of last year. As I have stated before, the quality of the stock produced is not equal to that of former seasons, but as there are fewer growers than formerly the flowers are in good demand. There is no change in roses or carnations. Prices have remained stationary, and the demand continues fair. Violets, owing to the continued dry weather, remain scarce, there being not over half the usual quantity at this time. Other kinds of outdoor stock, such as dahlias, gladioli, sweet peas, gaillardias and coreopsis, are getting, owing to the lateness of the season, of poor quality, and a week or two will finish them.

A few Paper White narcissi are seen and valley is in good supply. Maiden-hair fern, with a majority of the growers, is getting short of stem. Smilax is plentiful, and is appearing in good, heavy strings. Indoor mums are moving slowly, but are bringing good prices. The best yellow and white varieties cost the retailer from $2 to $3 per dozen. Funeral work has been quiet for the last two weeks. There is a little doing in the line of weddings, with quite a few decorations on the tapis.

Various Notes.

P. C. Meyer & Co., of Burlingame, are cutting some extra fine Bonnaffon. They will have a splendid lot for Thanksgiving.

Kien & Co., of Elmhurst, have six houses planted to carnations. Enchantress, Flora Hill and Lawson are the principal varieties grown.

Charles Abraham, of the Western Nurseries, reports a good fall trade in ferns, palms and general nursery stock.

near Burlingame, and will erect several greenhouses within the next two months.

A visit to the greenhouses of John H. Sievers & Co. shows five large houses planted to various kinds of carnations. The stock of Hannah Hobart looks particularly healthy, and promises well for an abundant crop of flowers in the near future.

Fred C. Davis will leave during the coming week for a three weeks' outing to Portland, Ore., and vicinity. This is his first vacation in five years.

The dealers say that there is a small demand for bulbs for garden planting this fall. The ideas of the planting public seem to tend toward other classes of stock.

STREET TREES.

Good Varieties for California.

The planting season is again near at hand and it is evident, from the progress made last season in the way of planting our public highways to ornamental trees, that there will be even greater work done in the coming fall and winter. There is such a difference of opinion among people interested, and such a small amount of judgment shown by many of them, in what has already been done, that dealers should make a study of this branch of the business, and use their influence in persuading the general public to plant suitable trees. We have such a varied climate in this state, and such an assortment of evergreen and deciduous trees to select from, that there should be no trouble in directing what is the most advisable for this purpose.

I have seen several avenues planted during the past season with Grevillea robusta. This I consider one of our most beautiful evergreen trees. It attains a height of fifty feet and although it is not usually of rapid growth for the first two seasons, its progress is fast subsequently. It is not so hardy as the common pepper tree, Schinus Molle, but it makes a more symmetrical tree, and stands pruning much better. The young trees should be well staked, when first planted, and the ground kept moist and well worked during the first season. The various kinds of acacias have been heavily planted in the state for many years, and they are still in good demand.

One of the most beautiful of the family is the A. linearis. This is of a most graceful weeping habit, and although of not quite such a strong growth as several of the better known kinds, it eventually makes a large tree. Like the tree mentioned previously, it stands trimming well, and can be planted from twenty to fifty feet apart on the sidewalk. In many parts of California the Texas umbrella tree is in great favor. It makes a magnificent specimen where the climate suits it, but in any other locality it is not satisfactory. It flourishes in our interior counties, where the heat seems to greatly encourage its growth.

The subject of palms for sidewalk planting has been mentioned several times in these columns. This might also include dracenas, although they have not been used as much as formerly during the past few seasons. Washingtonia robusta and Chamærops excelsa I consider the only suitable palms to plant in this climate. The former is the quicker growing of the two. They, in common with almost all our hardy palms, are fond of considerable moisture during the summer season, and when they are well treated in that regard, they make magnificent specimens in a few years. They are both easy to transplant at any size, and little check is given them by so doing. Date palms are often seen planted on sidewalks, but they are not suitable, unless the walk is wide, and they are given a chance to spread. *Brahea filamentos*a for the same reason is not considered a satisfactory variety. Both these and the date palm are most difficult to make grow after transplanting, especially when they are lifted from the ground when they are somewhat large plants.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Business has been good, largely due to funeral work. Carnations are scarce, while mums are plentiful. The prices rule about as follows: Carnations, 50 cents per dozen; roses, $1.50 to $2 per dozen; chrysanthemums, $2 to $2.50 per dozen; violets, $1 per hundred.

S. S. Peckham is shipping his mums to Boston. He has a fine lot.

Peter C. Keith is cutting the finest yellow mums ever brought into this market, yet states that he expects better stock next year.

MONTREAL.

Current Comment.

Business has been brisk the past week, there being a good demand for good mums and Beauties. The stores are all making good window displays. Hall & Robinson had a fine showing of bridal bouquets and new style hats for bridesmaids. Their decorating staff has been busy with weddings. They had two large ones last week.

Miss Murray has a fine display of orchids and valley, of which she makes a specialty. Her trade on Beauties has been large. One order for a Quebec wedding used 250. She also had the decoration for the opening of the new Mt. Royal Club. It was of palms and chrysanthemums, using over 500 of the latter.

Miss Cairns has been showing some fine violets and yellow mums. Her trade has been exceptionally good, especially shipping trade.

S. S. Bain had two large weddings last week.

Harris & Hopton are displaying some exceptionally well grown chrysanthemum

DETROIT.

The Market.

Rushing, was the general answer to queries regarding business among the storemen last week. With the advent of cooler weather and election over the outlook is fine for a good season. A number of weddings, receptions, and other decorations have already been booked for November.

Mums are in good demand. The shipments coming in are not large and not near enough to meet the demand. The prices range from $8 to $18 and $20 per hundred for some fancies. Thos. Browne has been sending in some exceptionally fine Pitcher. A few mum plants are on the market, but nothing out of the ordinary. Roses are fairly good. Short stock is plentiful. The better grades keep pretty well cleaned up. Carnations are arriving in slightly larger quantities, but still hardly enough to go around. The best bring $3 per hundred without any trouble.

Various Notes.

Thomas Browne is still laid up as the result of a bad fall sustained several weeks ago.

A visit to B. Schroeter's greenhouses found the stock in three houses of that most popular of carnations, Rose-pink Enchantress, in splendid condition. S. S. Skidelsky, the disseminator of this variety, predicts a tremendous sale of cuttings and expects the same to be exhausted by spring. He has testimonials from many of the best growers in the country, among them M. A. Patten, who intends growing a whole house. The stock sent out last year proved so satisfactory that many will double their stock.

Harry Raekham is just getting on his feet again after a severe attack of typhoid fever, lasting several months.

The Detroit Cut Flower Supply Co. is handling some of the finest Enchantress and Lawson on the market. This stock is grown by Leopold Mallast, of Mt. Clemens. Mr. Mallast's violets look the best in this vicinity.

Visitors: B. Eschner and S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia; A. L. Barnett, New York.

James Hayes has a new foreman, who formerly worked for Frank W. Sachs. He is cutting a nice lot of flowers for this season of the year.

Frank W. Sachs is doing principally a wholesale business this year, and does not have a downtown store.

Kessler's wholesale establishment reports a fine demand for the full crop.

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. Delivery January 5 to 10 and later. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

RUTHERFORD, N. J.

Within easy reach of, yet sufficiently distant from the busy metropolis, is the establishment of Bobbink & Atkins, a young and progressive firm which is making its mark both in growing and landscape work.

Large blocks of decorative stock are grown for New York stores and shipping trade. A shipment of bay trees, both standard and pyramid, was being loaded for the Pacific coast at the time of my visit. The herbaceous department has assumed large proportions, the call for novelties of recent introduction taxing the supply. Take Gerbera Jamesoni as an example, of which thousands have been sold. Florists are beginning to realize the value of this flower, as it can easily be planted with carnations and is a continuous bloomer, very attractive and lasting in flower. Undoubtedly this is to be a profitable branch of the business, for the craft is rising to the fact that by carrying a line of hardy stock it not only stimulates the demand but adds to one's bank account.

To attempt to describe in detail the fine assortment of evergreen and other hardy stock growing upon the 100 acres of well tilled land would take up more space than can be afforded in a trade paper. Certain it is that few realize the tremendous bounds by which this branch of horticulture has advanced in recent years. Walking through line after line of shade trees, with straight stems and perfect heads, specimens marked here and there for removal to help adorn some mansion of the wealthy, suddenly we come upon a field of phloxes which, when in bloom, must have been a gorgeous sight. Hardy and Indian azaleas by the ten thousand, for present and future sales, fill two large storage houses and await the completion of another 265 feet in length. Roses for forcing are grown in large numbers. Both the Baby and Crimson Rambler will undoubtedly be in big demand this season. The English ivy, both the large and small-leaved kinds, are grown in large quantities for decorative trade. The bulb department is being rushed with orders. W. M.

WINNIPEG, MANITOBA.—The Winnipeg Floral Co. is making a magnificent display of chrysanthemums in its Portage avenue store. The company has 20,000 chrysanthemum plants in its green-houses.

Last Winter a local grower visited our place for the purpose of buying a stock of some good crimson carnation. We showed him a good bed of Harlowarden and took his order for a quantity. A few minutes later we showed him whereupon he decided that he did not want Harlowarden, but would wait a year and get Pocahontas. Now that's the kind of argument that talks. You would do the same as he did, that's why we want you to come and see it growing. Will promise to show it to you just as it grows. No dressing-up for company every morning; Pocahontas does not need it.

POCAHONTAS

The Market.

After figuring up the general business for October, we are pleased to find that it was greater than last year; while not so very much, still enough to show that the business at large is on the increase, and will be even better for the remaining months of the year. Everything points to a prosperous season's business. Flowers are not coming so much in crops as is usually the case. Since mums have come in, this fact is especially plain, as they have been coming in a steady cut, which gives every evidence of continuing through the season. This being the case, the average price of mums this year will be good.

Business last week was nothing startling, but averaged up first-class, and everyone reports a steady demand. The wholesale houses were, as a rule, sold out by noon every day. There was not a heavy supply, though, and had there been, things might have been different. Roses are in good crop, especially white and pink. Red is in only moderate supply, with the exception of short Liberty. Carnations are coming in more heavily and some fine stock is seen. The best sell along as high as $4 per hundred. Violets are a little more plentiful and sell at sight. The best single and double bring $1 per hundred. Mums are about equal to the demand and are bringing good prices. Some extra good varieties go at $3 per dozen and are sold out clean. Small white are much in demand, and bring good prices for this grade. A good many Ivory are coming in and this variety is the best seller. When it gets down to dollars and cents it is still evident that the medium varieties are the ones that bring the money.

Club Meeting.

On Saturday, November 10, at 8 p. m., the next regular meeting of the Florists' Society will be held. There are many things of interest to be brought up, and a well attended meeting is looked forward to. Several applications for membership will be acted upon.

Al. Heckman has opened up a retail store on Central avenue near Laurel street. He has, until last week, been with Wm. H. Gear. Mr. Heckman is the son of A. C. Heckman, who for many years has been conducting a retail store in Covington, Ky.

Prepare for Thanksgiving and the Holidays WATCH! PROSPERITY! LOOK!

Election is now over, the country settled to its normal condition. Great Prosperity is in sight for us all; why not for you? A little fortune lays in front of your door; grab it now when you have a chance. Look at others; see how successful they are. Why? Because they are wide-awake, they watch every opportunity and take advantage of bargains. A big demand is in sight now and for the holidays for the much-admired Decorative Plants.

Araucaria Excelsa, Araucaria Excelsa Glauca and Araucaria Compacta Robusta. Where have you thought of buying them? Surely from a man who makes a specialty of importing araucarias and who can offer you bargains. Godfrey Aschmann is the man. He has had the reputation for the last ten years of being the great IMPORTER and DEALER in araucarias of America. Prices are slaughtered one half. Never have been offered so low in the history of araucaria cultivation. Why is that? Simply for the reason to obtain room for the cultivation of our great Easter stock. About 6,000 araucarias, together with an immense stock of ferns, palms, rubbers, Gloire de Lorraine begonias, azaleas and thousands of other plants which must be sold by Christmas.

TAKE NOTICE!

Araucaria Excelsa, Glauca, Compacta, Robusta, only spring importations are offered raised in pots all summer and can be shipped safely.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5½-in. pots, about 15 pots, 15 to 18 inches high, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 years old, 60c; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 18 to 23 inches high, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 inches high, 4 to 5 tiers 3 years old, 50c; 5½-in. years old, 75c; 6-in. pots, 23 to 25 inches high, 5 to 7 tiers, 4 years old, $.00; 6 to 7-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 5 to 7 tiers, 4 years old, $1.25; 7-in. pots, specimen plants, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta—Have several thousand of them; can supply all wants. These plants were never so fine in shape and condition as this year. The pet of the greenhouse. 6-in. pots, 3 tiers, 20 to 25 inches across, 12 to 18 inches high, 3 years old, $1.00 to $1.25; 6 to 7-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 18 to 25 inches high, 4 years old, $1.50 to $1.75; 7-in. pots, specimens, 6 to 7 tiers, 25 to 30 inches high, 5 years old, $2.00 to $2.50.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca—This variety on account of its beautiful green-bluish tiers, dwarf habit, fine compact shape, gives it a striking appearance, and anybody seeing them, must undoubtedly fall in love with them at sight. 6-in. pots, 3 tiers, 20 to 30 inches across, 14 to 20 inches high, 3 years old, $1.00 to $1.25; 6 to 7-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 20 to 30 inches high, 4 years old, $1.50 to $1.75; 7-in. pots, 5 tiers, 30 to 35 inches high, 5 years old, specimen plants, $2.00 to $2.50. These plants are as broad as long and the finest you ever saw.

Cocos Weddelliana, 15c.

Areca Lutescens, 5-in. pots, 24 in. high, made-up with 3 plants, 35c; 4-in. pots, 20 to 24 in. high, made-up with 3 plants, 25c each.

FERNS, all raised in pots and not on benches as follows:

Nephrolepis Barrowsii, 7-in. pots as big as a bushel basket, 75c to $1.00 each; 6-in. pots, large, ready for 7-in., 50c; 5½-in., 40c; 5-in., 35c; 4-in., 25c.

Boston Ferns, 7-in., very bushy, only 75c; 6-in., 50c or $5.00 per dozen; 5-in., 30c to 35c; 4-in., 20c.

Jerusalem Cherries (or Solanum), 6 to 7-in. pots, very bushy, full of berries, from $3.00 to $6.00 per dozen.

Dracaena Bruni (imported), 30 in. high. 6-inch pots, 50c; $5.00 per dozen.

Cyclamen, will bloom for Christmas, 5-in. pots, 20c; 4-in. pots, 12c.

Chinese Primroses, 4-in. pots, ready to shift into 5-in., will bloom for Christmas, $8.00 per 100; 5½-in., $2.00 per doz.

Begonia Gloire Lorraine, 6-in. pots, 50c; blooms in December, 3-in., 2c.

Begonia Flambeau, sells on sight, 4-in., ready for a shift into 6-in., 20c.

OUR LITTLE PETS

From Aschmann, in Philadelphia, we bought An araucaria, a pet for our little girl. Now we have two pets, the pride of our thought: The little girl so sweet, a head full of curls, And the araucaria with its everlasting green—A more joyful home you never have seen.

Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. pots, made-up, one large size plant about 45 to 48 inches high in the center and three smaller sizes, 25 to 30 inches high around it which gives them a good appearance, $2.00 to $2.50 each; 6-in. pots, single plants, 36 to 45 inches high, 5 to 6 good leaves, 4 years old, $1.25, $1.50, $1.75 each; 6-in. pots, 32 to 36 inches high, 5 to 6 good leaves, 4 years old, $1.00 each; 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4 years old, 30 inches high, 5 good leaves, 75c each; 4-in. pots, made-up plants, 3 plants in a pot, 18 to 25 inches high, 25c, 30c, 35c.

Ficus Elastica or Rubber Plants, 6-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 40c to 50c.

Areca Sapida, just imported from Belgium, something new, very attractive, looks like a Kentia, 25 in. high, 50c each.

Asparagus Plumosus Nannus, 4-in. pots, large bushy, 10c to 12c.

Asparagus Sprengeri, 4-in. pots, 10c.

Nephrolepis Scottii, 8-in., as big as a wash-tub, worth $2.00, now $1.25; 7-in., as big as a bushel basket, worth $1.25, now 75c; 6-in., 50c; 5½-in., 40c; 4-in., 20c.

Ferns for dishes, 3-in., 6c; 2½-in., 5c.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima, 5-in. pots, 30c.

Begonia Erfordii, new improved, blooms all winter through, 4-in., 15c.

Azalea Indica, just arrived, selected by myself on my recent trip to Belgium. Have all the leading varieties, such as Deutsche Perle, Simon Mardner, and Vervaneana. These three sorts are good for Christmas-forcing. Later varieties: Empress of India, Oloff, Wolters, Niobe, Bernard Andrew Alba, Mme. Van der Cruyssen, and many others. Price as follows: 35c, 40c, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each.

Hydrangea Otaksa, only pot-grown is fered, sure success for Easter-forcing. 6-in. pots, 25c; 7 to 8-in., 50c.

Horticultural Books

We can supply any of the following books at the prices noted, postpaid, and any other book at publishers' price:

Pronouncing Dictionary.

A list of plant names and the botanical terms most frequently met with in articles on trade topics, with the correct pronunciation for each. 35 cents

The Florists' Manual.

By WILLIAM SCOTT. Covers the whole field of commercial floriculture. Articles are arranged alphabetically so that reference is quick and easy. It tells you just what you want to know in just the way you want to be told. $5.00

Smith's Chrysanthemum Manual.

By ELMER D. SMITH. Revised edition. A complete practical treatise, concise directions for every stage of the work of propagator and grower. The result of 22 years' experience. Fully illustrated. 40 cents

Greenhouse Construction.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT. A complete manual on the building, heating, ventilating and arrangement of greenhouses, and the construction of hotbeds, frames and plant pits. Lucid descriptions and 118 diagrams and illustrations make every detail clear to the amateur and professional gardener and florist. Cloth. 218 pages. $1.50

The Chrysanthemum.

By ARTHUR HERRINGTON, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing.

By ALEX. MONTGOMERY, JR. The most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose. Of much interest to every rose grower and of utmost value to growers of grafted roses. Containing practical description of the process of grafting with full details of planting and culture; also directions for treatment to carry the plants a second year. 25 cents

Cabbage, Cauliflower and Allied Vegetables.

By C. L. ALLEN. An explanation of the requirements, conditions, cultivation and general management pertaining to the entire cabbage group. The chapter on seed raising is probably the most authoritative treatise on this subject ever published. Insects and fungi are given due attention. Illustrated. 128 pages. Cloth. 50 cents

Insects and Insecticides.

By CLARENCE M. WEED, D. SC. A practical manual concerning noxious insects and the methods of preventing their injuries. Profusely illustrated. A generally useful handbook on noxious insects. It covers the whole field of insect pests very thoroughly and is especially valuable for its complete and up-to-date methods of fighting insects. The work is intensely practical. All the important insect pests are described and remedies for them, and methods of preventing their injuries described in detail. Cloth. $1.50

Greenhouse Management.

By PROF. L. R. TAFT, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers on the forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses, and the propagation and care of house plants. It treats of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists and amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, etc. Of special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts and fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

THE RECORD ROCK GARDEN.

I have seen many good rockeries and have constructed some, but the one at Swaylands House Gardens, Penshurst, Kent, is beyond anything of the same kind known to me, says a writer in the Gardeners' Chronicle. Mr. Hosier, the gardener, told me that nearly $400,000 had been spent on this rock garden alone. It was begun in 1891 and was finished about four years ago, and more than 8,000 varieties of plants have been placed upon it.

NEW POPPIES.

Papavers Marion and Santa Clara are a pair of poppies with double flowers, annual varieties, well fitted for florists' work, as in table decoration, where one of two colors are desired. The plants have nothing in common with those ephemeral varieties of the P. somniferum and pæoniflorum class, but form a new type, a new race. The plants remain in good bloom for a period of six weeks when in their first flowering period, and if the seed vessels are removed a more abundant second flowering takes place, and the plants retain their succulent, leathery foliage till frost ensues. The flowers are furnished with long and stout footstalks which carry them well above the foliage, and may be cut from the second flowering without injury to the plant. Marion has large snow-white blooms, and Santa Clara is of a tender lilac tint. The raiser is H. W. Mütze, of Dahlen, near Steglitz, Germany.—H. T. J.

IXORAS.

These are among the old favorites, which seemed destined to drop out of culture, and it is a source of satisfaction to find that they are likely to come to the front again. We do not want large specimens, but small, useful plants. During the last season H. B. May has had a fine lot of plants. Grown without so much heat and shade as was formerly given they are found to last fairly well. The same plants will hold their flowers well for over a week, when used for decoration, and the colors show up well under subdued light. The best florists fully appreciate their value; the prices preclude them from being used for ordinary work; but since some of the plants which were at one time considered choice have now become so common, it is necessary to look for something fresh for choice work, and in the ixoras we have just what is wanted.

Of the varieties, Dixiana appears to be one of the best. Aurantiaca, Fraseri, Williamsi, and amabilis are also useful, and there may be others. It would hardly be profitable to grow the ixoras in large quantities, but florists like to know where to send for anything choice when they have special work on hand.

I believe there are other old introductions, which, if grown under more modern conditions, would be worth taking up.—Horticultural Advertiser.

I CONSIDER the REVIEW of vast importance to the trade and a credit to its publishers.—J. W. HANFORD, Salisbury, N. C.

MT. AIRY, MD.—J. P. King began business here three years ago with little experience, but has been successful from the start. He now has 14,000 feet of glass.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds was short last week. Violets have been scarce and hard to procure and naturally prices advanced. The weather conditions were responsible. Isaac Hamberger's firm had its opening, and a large number of designs and cut flowers were used. Chrysanthemums are coming in large quantities, bringing all kinds of prices, and they find a ready demand. Col. Appleton is fine this year, while T. Eaton, Robinson and Golden Wedding are doing fairly well. Carnations still are scarce, and greens of all kinds are a little more steady. Ferns of all kinds find their way into the market and there is a great demand for them.

Flower Show.

The schedule of prizes for exhibits at the annual chrysanthemum and horticultural exhibition in the new Baltimore Florists' Exchange under the auspices of the Gardeners' Club has been announced. A number of prominent society people are interested in the event, and have offered prizes. Franklin Davis Nursery Co., Samuel Feast & Sons and Vaughan's Co., Samuel Teast & Sons and Vaughan's Seed Store also contribute. The judges are Messrs. Gude, Bisset and Bauer, of Washington. The club will hold a banquet at the Academy hotel the first evening of the show, November 13.

Various Notes.

Baltimore's enterprising young florist, John P. Willheim, deserves a great deal of credit. Starting as merely a poor boy, he accomplished in three years what some florists would not do in a lifetime. He has four houses, two 20x100, one 25x150, and one 15x150 feet. In one house are Mrs. O. P. Bassett chrysanthemums and in another house a number of up-to-date varieties. The third house contains carnations, and the fourth an assortment of plants. He also has thousands of roses planted outdoors. He will also erect a concrete potting shed, and a large new boiler house. In fact, it is one of the most up-to-date places around Baltimore.

Mr. Willheim is making a specialty of Swinburne mums, white, for early, and had a large cut.

The Market.

Business is booming. Carnations are scarce, but as the mums are coming in at a lively rate there is always a chance to supply the demand. Carnation plants from the field sold out clean this season, but on account of too much cloudy weather the flowers don't open fast enough and the plants grow too soft.

Various Notes.

At Suder's greenhouses, on Cherry street, the mums were looking fine and a big lot of imported azaleas arrived in best shape. At the downtown store Mrs. Suder had a rather unpleasant experience. Some hog in human form gained an entrance to the store during the night, and not finding the odd change that is always left for the morning's business, vented his spite on the stock of plants and cut flowers. He cut every fern and palm off at the top of the pot and a bunch of dahlias in the window as well. A bunch of gladioli was scattered over the floor. The loss amounts to about $250.

At George Bayer's those 700-foot houses are a sight. The carnations are in better shape than they have been for the last two years. The cut is light as yet, but big crops are in sight. There is no need to talk about his mums; they always are up-to-date. His violets, under oiled-paper houses, look well. Mr. Bayer uses the paper-covered, temporary houses a good deal to cover lettuce, mums and roses, mostly Maman Cochet, during the late fall.

O. B. Wisner, on Cherry street, has repaired and partly rebuilt the roofs on some of his houses, which puts the place in a much better shape than it has been for years. He reports business as being good, and the entire place shows that he is coming along all right.

George Heintz is taking the baths at Mt. Clemens for rheumatism. On his way to the baths, he was taken sick at Detroit, and had to lay over a couple of days. The latest report gives it that he is getting along all right.

At John Barrows, on Detroit avenue, business is good. His ferns are fine and his poinsettias elegant, but he has trouble with his solid beds and the grub-worms are grubbing away at them too much. But little things like that don't bother him.

G. Bayer, T. Magee and E. A. Kuhnke went to Adrian recently to see what is doing at Nathan Smith & Son's. The mums were somewhat in their off season, the early having been cut, the late not in yet, but for all that the show is fine. It would take too much time to go into details, but if you have ever seen their stock you know what to expect. The roses are in the best condition, as well as the carnations, but the latter being planted late are not as far ahead as they might be. Mr. Smith is putting up six houses with oiled paper for temporary use, and reports business as being good.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Club we held our annual election of officers, George Bayer being elected president in place of Mr. Cushman, who BLOOMSBURG, PA.

J. L. Dillon, whose accidental death was reported in last week's REVIEW, was born in Bloomsburg, July 7, 1851. His father bought the Dimm farm, where he engaged in farming and trucking, his son becoming a partner in the business at the age of 21 years, after attending the public schools of Bloomsburg and the Bloomsburg Literary Institute. Three years later he started in business for himself, building a greenhouse 20x60 feet, the first in Bloomsburg. In 1879 he directed his entire attention to flowers and his business has grown to such proportions that his greenhouses now contain about 150,000 feet of glass.

Mr. Dillon's business interests were varied. He became interested in copper mining and was president and owned the controlling interest in the Keystone Bromide Copper Co., with mines in Rio Arriba county, New Mexico, 1,000 acres in all. He was owner of the Dillon Greenhouse Co., in which a considerable number of men are employed. He was a stockholder of the Bloomsburg National Bank, a director of the Bloomsburg Land Improvement Co., and was actively interested in a number of other business projects.

Mr. Dillon was a member of the Society of American Florists, the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, the American Car-

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

The chrysanthemum season is now at its height, and great numbers are being disposed of. While there are some show flowers to be seen, quoted at fancy prices, the great bulk of the stock is of average size blooms, selling at the nominal figures of $1.50 to $3 per dozen. Quite a number of modest decorations for small dinners are being furnished, and there was a considerable amount of funeral work during the week.

Various Notes.

The government flower shows, at the U. S. Propagating Gardens, under the direction of Geo. H. Brown, is an interesting exhibit, this week, of fine chrysanthemums. There are many varieties, a part of which are show plants, but a large number of good commercial varieties, both new and old, may be seen. Aside from the fine quality of bloom the nomenclature is interesting. There is lily white W. J. Bryan, which may indicate that political party lines are relaxing.

It is a cosmopolitan gathering, for there you see the gay and dashing Gen. Baden-Powell beside that fine old American, Edgar Sanders. Age has not withered the dainty charms of Mrs. Robinson, and Ethel Fitzroy is the same quakerish girl. The many fine varieties that cannot here be mentioned by name, the prominence given to good commercial blooms, and the thoughtful arrangements of Mr. Brown for the accommodation of the public are deserving features.

At the Department of Agriculture, a chrysanthemum show will also be held in the near future. The houses are equipped with electric light, and it has been the custom of Dr. Galloway to throw open the houses in the evening. It is probable that the precedent will be followed this year, as it is popular with the public. The department has a number of its own seedlings for exhibition. A promising yellow of 1905 has been named Mrs. Roosevelt.

The Gude Bros. Co. is making a great cut of chrysanthemums. They are also showing fine American Beauties and other standard roses.

Just across the street from the Gude range, F. H. Kramer is turning out mums and roses at a lively pace. A feature of this place is the fine stock of ferns.

Robert Bowdler, one of the older school of Washington florists, shows a good stock of both cut and pot chrysanthemums at his Center market stand.

The magnificent union station, which is being erected in this city, is convenient to the ranges of Mr. Bowdler, the American Rose Co., and Clarke Bros. A. F.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—The Lockheart store has been moved to 27 North Phelps street.

GREENSBORO, N. C.—The management of the chrysanthemum show, which opens November 15, has secured the use of the Guilford hotel dining-room for the exhibits.

NO greenhouse is a perfect house unless all the materials which enter into its construction are properly made by experienced workmen. All of our material is made by men who know that perfect material is needed to make a perfect house and you can't grow the best stock without a perfect house. Well made material costs less than the inferior kind—less repairing to be done.

I AM overwhelmed with orders, from Boston to Seattle.—J. D. BRENNEMAN, Harrisburg, Pa.

I DO not want my REVIEW discontinued. I would just as soon do without breakfast; so here is another dollar.—WILLIAM FREED, Spry, Pa.

"Always safe and reliable. Ask your friends."

Put your trust in the

CALDWELL Tank and Tower

and your water service will be safe thereafter. Every feature guaranteeing tank durability and tower stability has been incorporated into the Caldwell outfit, giving it a freedom from repairs, and a security from the ravages of storms and gales that is a source of relief and satisfaction to the prudent and conservative florist.

Get the Caldwell tank and tower and you get water when you need it and as long as you need it. Our illustrated catalogue is full of information to help you decide.

HITCHINGS AND CO.
GREENHOUSE DESIGNERS AND BUILDERS.
 Manufacturers of Heating and Ventilating Apparatus.
1170 Broadway, NEW YORK.

The Red Tape Habit

is an exceedingly bad habit—"you don't know you have it until it has you." So don't think you must go through a series of sitting up nights to lay out and figure up that new house of yours—but let us do it with our short cut methods. It saves half the worries—you get just as good a house—better really—and besides you'll have pleasant dealing.

H AND C

IT'S the wrong end of the proposition to think that just because the florist show-room greenhouse isn't intended to actually make growing records, it needn't be as light or as carefully constructed. The lighter, more attractive and bubble-like you can make it, the better, more lasting your customer's impression. He may not know that it's U-Bar construction, but he will recognize the superiority of your equipment—and that is the best of advertising. Send for catalog. The Standard Ventilating Machinery

The original machine with self-oiling cups. The most powerful, least complicated, very compact with ease of operation.

The New Duplex Gutter
 Over six miles in use and highly recommended by all. The only DRIP PROOF gutter on the market.

The Standard Return Steam-Trap
 It has no equal for simplicity or its working. Catalogue free.

Doubtless, you have been waiting a long time for ventilating apparatus at a reasonable cost before equipping your houses, or a line that does the work so satisfactorily that it is a pleasure to have in the house. Our customers are all highly pleased with the service we give them. We are quite certain that our prices will suit you. At least give us a chance to figure with you.

What It Means to Stay in Business

Not what it means to us but to you! Let us explain—for example: suppose it is a case of a "Burnham" Boiler—you buy it with an idea of its lasting a good many years and when parts of it are broken, either by accident or the natural wearing out, you want to feel sure that those parts will be procurable. We are in business to stay—we have stayed for fifty years—and that's a pretty safe guarantee that we will stay another fifty.

BOSTON BRANCH, 819 Tremont Building.

Take a look at that factory—it's the largest plant in the world devoted solely to greenhouse manufacture and equipment—a strong enough argument all by itself.

ALPHA

STRIKE THE KEYNOTE TO PROFITS

- ¶ You yourself—or perhaps one of your staff or a good customer of yours—has been in New York around the Holidays and viewed with interest the decorations. And they must have seen the ALPHA and ANGELUS BELLS which are used by all large stores for decorations.
- ¶ More than likely our salesmen haven't called in your town—they only visit the very largest cities—and we want you to be the merchant to handle these bells.
- ¶ At the suggestion of the FLORISTS' REVIEW we are putting these bells before you. They are no cheap paper affair which lose their shape and looks, but are made of a patented material which will last indefinitely.
- ¶ If your florists' supply house does not furnish you with these it is simply because they sell a cheaper bell for a higher price. IN THAT CASE WRITE TO US DIRECT. Bells for households, for florists and for general decoration have come to stay. Every florist who has used these bells is reordering twice and three times as many this year.

Sample Assortment of two styles for - - - $ 4.00
A Good Selling Assortment, ^{large enough for} Window Display, from $20.00 to 30.00

We are also making Stars, Wreaths, Stockings,
Anchors, etc., of the same material. : : :

CYCAS LEAF HOLDER

PATENTED

WITH these CYCAS LEAF HOLDERS one can adjust two or three Cycas Leaves as shown in center cut above. The device will securely fasten the leaves at the proper angle and prevent spreading. A ribbon may be placed under the catch of the holder, thus enabling the florist to tie an effective bow without destroying or in any way disarranging the teeth of the leaves. The price of the holders is such that no florist can afford to be without such a simple and practical appliance.

Thanksgiving Greetings

To our growers and customers at the height of the most successful year in our history. We lead and others follow. Watch us grow.

Our Cut Flower Business

Has doubled. We have the best growers in the country. Our customers are the leading retailers in the city. We ship to the bon-ton stores of the adjoining towns. Our conservatories are a great convenience. They are always filled with the best plants of every kind. Our great importations of Box Trees, Retinospora and Choice Nursery and Palm Stock have had a wonderful sale. Come and see us. We will not disappoint you.

Our new store, across the way, at 45 West 29th Street is too small, even with its spacious yard, for our immense European shipments this season. We are trying faithfully to give you cause for genuine Thanksgiving while at the same time acknowledging our own numerous obligations.

We have added No. 1 West 28th Street, 75x150, for our large Retinosporas. This is a permanent addition to our grand conveniences.

A Thanksgiving Greeting....

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Roses for Spring.

A most important Easter plant is the hybrid perpetual rose; none more so, for everybody loves the rose. The hybrid perpetual class of roses is not nearly so important a class to the average florist as the hybrid tea and the true tea, but these beautiful everblooming roses do not make so attractive pot plants as the hybrid perpetuals do, especially of some varieties. We have a successful grower of these hardy roses in this neighborhood, producing 6-inch pot plants of Gabriel Luziet, with ten to fifteen flowers and buds, and this with plants dug from the field in November. This successful man is Conrad Forbach, of Pine Ridge, famed also for his splendid results in Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Mr. Forbach gets most of his inspiration from his bright and attractive wife, who is an ardent reader and admirer of the FLORISTS' REVIEW, so there is no mystery about his success.

Handling Hybrid Perpetuals.

For the last three years we have commended a certain method of handling these roses, which it was hard work to get adopted at home, but last year it was faithfully done, with great success. The critical time with these roses is the period from digging to their being started into growth. One important item is this: The wood or canes of these roses should be well ripened before they are dug, and surely this year they should be, for we have had a warm, beautiful summer, a glorious fall, and of late frequent light frosts which arrest growth and ripen the canes.

If you buy of nurserymen have them send the roses by express. The small difference of expense over a freight charge will be made up a hundred fold by the freshness of roots, and remember that a week on the road means a drying out of roots and wood, which is a poor start. Let me say here that our American nurserymen can supply the finest of plants for this purpose.

As soon as unpacked, if the roots are the least dry dip them into a puddle. Puddling the roots of trees and shrubs is a nurseryman's phrase and practice. Use simply a thick mixture of clay and water. Dipping the roots into what may be called mud will cover every particle of roots, and prevent the minute fibers from drying out. As soon as possible get the roses into 5-inch or 6-inch pots, and pot firmly. Few will go into 5-inch pots, and a 6-inch is not an unbecoming size. Do no pruning now, or only a shortening back of the longest growths. Water thoroughly, so that you are sure every particle of soil is wet.

Storing Outdoors.

When the soil in the pots is dried out enough to be slightly firm, choose a spot in your garden where no surface water will lie, and lay down your roses. Make these beds of any convenient size to suit your conditions, and let the tops of each succeeding row overlap the pots of the preceding row. Then dig from the side of the beds sufficient soil to cover the roses, pots, tops and all, four inches deep with soil, and leave them there without further attention till time to bring in to force.

Some will say: "In our climate the whole mass will freeze tight." Quite true, in some winters. When severe weather sets in cover the beds with five or six inches of stable litter, as we do our tulip beds. This is all there is to do till time for bringing into the house, which may vary according to when you want them in flower.

Let me say here that during the time between potting and bringing into the greenhouse, if the tops were exposed to light and air there would be sure to be some evaporation from the stems and a shriveling, while the soil being closely packed around every stem and twig of the plant will restore the wood and eyes to the plumpness and vigor they had in the field before the roots were disturbed.

Forcing Into Bloom.

These roses will make no roots outside, and therefore the starting should be slow; 40 degrees at night should be the highest for the first two weeks. By that time the roots will have started, and heat can be gradually increased, but remember always that these roses will have larger, fuller flowers, of better color, if they are never over 55 degrees than if forced in 65 degrees.

These roses should have at least ten weeks in the greenhouse, and when bringing them in is the time to perform the all-important job of pruning. It is difficult to tell in print just how low or high these roses should be cut—too low and you will save only blind, feeble eyes; if too high, the plant will have a leggy, naked appearance. If it were possible to give any definite height at which the canes should be cut, I would say six inches above the soil for strong, heavy growths, and four inches for weaker ones. Size and plumpness of eyes should be the guide.

The Ramblers.

This plan of covering the tops of roses with four or five inches of soil is also good for the Ramblers, providing the wood is ripe when dug. The Ramblers grown during the summer in pots are sure to have ripened their wood, and do not need the treatment. It is time now to lay them down in a frame and cover with evergreen boughs, or dry straw, to prevent sudden changes of temperature. Covered with sacks or boards, they can rest there till time to start them.

These summer-grown Ramblers never have the deep green foliage, or as well colored flowers as those lifted from the field in November, because the pots are full of roots, and before flowering time they are somewhat exhausted. This condition can be helped largely when starting them in the greenhouse by digging out an inch or two of the surface soil in the pots, and replenishing with some heavy loam, with an equal part of cow manure not too rotten.

Summer Bloomers.

If you have any plants of Maman Cochet, President Carnot, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, or any good summer-blooming teas or hybrid teas, they should be lifted and potted at once. Little pruning is needed with these; only cut away the latest unripe growth that would wilt. Plunge in a frame from which you can keep severe frost, or perhaps, what is safer, winter them on a bench in your coolest house. There is always a general demand for this class of roses for bedding every spring, and always difficult to procure them of any size that will satisfy your customers. Young plants of the varieties mentioned planted out last spring will now be of good size, and will repay good care during winter, for you are warranted in charging a good price for them next May.

Best H. P. Roses for Pots.

If you have not yet bought your hybrid perpetual roses for next spring's forcing I will mention a few varieties especially good for the purpose. There are many superb hybrid perpetuals that are grand as individual flowers, but not full enough to make good pot plants.

Class for Twenty-five Distinct Varieties at the Boston Exhibition.

Among the best for pots are Baroness Rothschild, Magna Charta, La Reine, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Ulrich Brunner and Captain Hayward. There are others, but don't go in for too many varieties—a few sorts and well grown is what pays.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

OX-EYED DAISIES.

I send you several flowers, of which I would like to know the correct name. It is a perennial, blooming mostly in May and June, and lasting well after cutting.

C. D.

This plant is the well-known ox-eyed daisy. It is also called horse daisy, dog daisy, moon daisy, and whiteweed. Botanically, it is known as Leucanthemum vulgare, and Chrysanthemum Leucanthemum. It used to be separated from the chrysanthemums by some authors, because of its broad, flat involucre. Its range extends over the United States and Arctic America, so it is amply hardy. In parts of New England the ox-eyed daisy is a great annoyance to farmers, by taking possession of fields and pastures. In Kansas it has also proved a land-grabber. In Illinois it has not established itself extensively, but in the milder climate of Texas, if allowed to get away, it might become a bad field weed.

JOHN HIGGINS.

THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

CHICAGO.

The most successful innovation in connection with last week's flower show was keeping it open Sunday at a reduced admission, for Sunday afternoon broke the week's record for attendance. Sunday evening the crowd was large and would doubtless have been much greater had the weather been less inclement, so that it may be taken for granted that all future shows in Chicago will preach "a sermon in flowers." A good attendance on Sunday was just what was needed to revive the spirits of the tired management, for, great as was the artistic achievement, it is the dismal fact that last year's financial success was not repeated. Every day the gate receipts fell short, with favoring weather conditions until Saturday, when a cold drizzle cut a great hole in the receipts. With a splendid show, good press work, and all things favorable save the conflict with election day and a forty-eight hours' charity bazaar, it is impossible to explain the decreased attendance, although conjectures are many; but the fact remains that the Horticultural Society, financially, now is about where it has been in most of the years preceding the last.

On Sunday the great value of the retailers' displays again was demonstrated. No premiums were offered for Sunday, and so no fresh stock was shown save by the retailers, whose bright, fresh, rearranged booths looked all the better by contrast with the stock which had stood unreplenished during the entire week. The retailers changed their displays daily, so that there was always something new about them, and they were, as last year, the great artistic success of the show, and splendid advertisements for these enterprising stores: Canger & Gormley, C. Frauenfelder, J. F. Kidwell & Bro., August Lange, A. McAdams, Eaton's Flower Shop, Schiller, A. Simmons, W. J. Smyth, E. Hobbs Co., Ernst Weinhoeber Co., the George Wittbold Co., Central Floral Co., Chas. A. Samuelson.

The Carnations.

The showing of carnations was something remarkable in view of the lateness of the crops this fall. Quality never was better, and the flowers lasted well. The principal exhibitors were Poehlmann

Bros. Co., and they not only showed more varieties, but won more premiums than any other exhibitor. Still it was distinctly a red letter event for the Chicago Carnation Co. Not only was Aristocrat the center of interest, but they succeeded in capturing fifteen first premiums. They had four grand varieties in Aristocrat, White Perfection, No. 49, red, and Rose-pink Enchantress. Sol Garland came to the front with a couple of winners.

S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia, staged a fine vase of B. Schroeter's Rose-pink Enchantress which, next to Aristocrat, attracted more attention than any other variety in the show.

August Von Boesselager, Mt. Clemens, Mich., sent a light pink sport of Lawson.

F. R. Pearson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., staged a couple of splendid vases of Winsor, light pink, which were well thought of.

F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., staged Red Chief, Bonnie Maid, Winona, Rose-pink Enchantress, and No. 30. The first two are to be sent out this season.

Charles Knopf, Richmond, Ind., attracted considerable attention with his new white, Sarah Hill.

Bassett & Washburn had a vase of their red seedling.

Special Exhibits.

The Eden Nurseries, Eden, Pa., staged a fine group of decorative plants and horticultural novelties.

D. Hill, the Dundee Nurseries, Dundee, Ill., made a large showing of its specialties, evergreens.

Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, was given space for a large group of samples.

Peter Reinberg was awarded the Hammond premium on a table of roses freshened up each day. There were about twenty varieties on the table, a vase of each variety Mr. Reinberg grows.

Vaughan's Seed Store attracted much attention with an exhibit showing how seeds are tested for germination.

J. F. Kidwell put up a nice group of kentias, not for competition.

The Selfridge collection of orchids was represented for a day by a group which was probably the most valuable ever shown at a local exhibition. A large number of varieties were represented, all splendid plants in fine flower, and for the time the group was allowed to remain away from Lincoln park it was the most attractive feature of the show.

The Awards.

The awards up to Wednesday evening were published last week. Those of the closing days were as follows:

Carnations.

Fifty White Lawson, Anton Then first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second.

Fifty White Cloud, Bassett & Washburn first.

Fifty Boston Market, Peter Reinberg first.

Fifty Lady Bountiful, Anton Then first, Poehlmann Bros. Co. second.

Among the best for pots are Baroness Rothschild, Magna Charta, La Reine, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Ulrich Brunner and Captain Hayward. There are others, but don't go in for too many varieties—a few sorts and well grown is what pays.

OX-EYED DAISIES.

I send you several flowers, of which I would like to know the correct name. It is a perennial, blooming mostly in May and June, and lasting well after cutting.

C. D.

This plant is the well-known ox-eyed daisy. It is also called horse daisy, dog daisy, moon daisy, and whiteweed. Botanically, it is known as Leucanthemum vulgare, and Chrysanthemum Leucanthemum. It used to be separated from the chrysanthemums by some authors, because of its broad, flat involucre. Its range extends over the United States and Arctic America, so it is amply hardy. In parts of New England the ox-eyed daisy is a great annoyance to farmers, by taking possession of fields and pastures. In Kansas it has also proved a land-grabber. In Illinois it has not established itself extensively, but in the milder climate of Texas, if allowed to get away, it might become a bad field weed.

THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

CHICAGO.

The most successful innovation in connection with last week's flower show was keeping it open Sunday at a reduced admission, for Sunday afternoon broke the week's record for attendance. Sunday evening the crowd was large and would doubtless have been much greater had the weather been less inclement, so that it may be taken for granted that all future shows in Chicago will preach "a sermon in flowers." A good attendance on Sunday was just what was needed to revive the spirits of the tired management, for, great as was the artistic achievement, it is the dismal fact that last year's financial success was not repeated. Every day the gate receipts fell short, with favoring weather conditions until Saturday, when a cold drizzle cut a great hole in the receipts. With a splendid show, good press work, and all things favorable save the conflict with election day and a forty-eight hours' charity bazaar, it is impossible to explain the decreased attendance, although conjectures are many; but the fact remains that the Horticultural Society, financially, now is about where it has been in most of the years preceding the last.

On Sunday the great value of the retailers' displays again was demonstrated. No premiums were offered for Sunday, and so no fresh stock was shown save by the retailers, whose bright, fresh, rearranged booths looked all the better by contrast with the stock which had stood un replenished during the entire week. The retailers changed their displays daily, so that there was always something new about them, and they were, as last year, the great artistic success of the show, and splendid advertisements for these enterprising stores: Canger & Gormley, C. Frauenfelder, J. F. Kidwell & Bro., August Lange, A. McAdams, Eaton's Flower Shop, Schiller, A. Simmons, W. J. Smyth, E. Hobbs Co., Ernst Weinhoeber Co., the George Wittbold Co., Central Floral Co., Chas. A. Samuelson.

The Carnations.

The showing of carnations was something remarkable in view of the lateness of the crops this fall. Quality never was better, and the flowers lasted well. The principal exhibitors were Poehlmann

Bros. Co., and they not only showed more varieties, but won more premiums than any other exhibitor. Still it was distinctly a red letter event for the Chicago Carnation Co. Not only was Aristocrat the center of interest, but they succeeded in capturing fifteen first premiums. They had four grand varieties in Aristocrat, White Perfection, No. 49, red, and Rose-pink Enchantress. Sol Garland came to the front with a couple of winners.

S. S. Skidelsky, Philadelphia, staged a fine vase of B. Schroeter's Rose-pink Enchantress which, next to Aristocrat, attracted more attention than any other variety in the show.

August Von Boesselager, Mt. Clemens, Mich., sent a light pink sport of Lawson.

F. R. Larson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., staged a couple of splendid vases of Winsor, light pink, which were well thought of.

F. Dörner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., staged Red Chief, Bonnie Maid, Winona, Rose-pink Enchantress, and No. 30. The first two are to be sent out this season.

Charles Knopf, Richmond, Ind., attracted considerable attention with his new white, Sarah Hill.

Bassett & Washburn had a vase of their red seedling.

Special Exhibits.

The Eden Nurseries, Eden, Pa., staged a fine group of decorative plants and horticultural novelties.

D. Hill, the Dundee Nurseries, Dundee, Ill., made a large showing of its specialties, evergreens.

Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, was given space for a large group of samples.

Peter Reinberg was awarded the Hammond premium on a table of roses freshened up each day. There were about twenty varieties on the table, a vase of each variety Mr. Reinberg grows.

Vaughan's Seed Store attracted much attention with an exhibit showing how seeds are tested for germination.

J. F. Kidwell put up a nice group of kentias, not for competition.

The Selfridge collection of orchids was represented for a day by a group which was probably the most valuable ever shown at a local exhibition. A large number of varieties were represented, all splendid plants in fine flower, and for the time the group was allowed to remain away from Lincoln park it was the most attractive feature of the show.

The Awards.

The awards up to Wednesday evening were published last week. Those of the closing days were as follows:

The Banquet.

The trade banquet which is an annual event at Chicago during flower show week was held at the Auditorium hotel at nine o'clock on the evening of Thursday, November 8. It was more largely attended than in any previous year, a large proportion of those present being guests from outside the city. The twenty-two tables were decorated with stock contributed by the wholesalers, arranged with characteristic good taste by Ed Hauswirth and Ed Enders.

The long table along the east wall was occupied by the chairman, Mr. Vaughan, and the guests of honor. At the chairman's right sat W. F. Kasting, president of the S. A. F.; then Leonard Kill, vice-president of the Chicago Florists' Club, for President Hauswirth, who arrived later; then John N. May, E. V. Hallock, W. H. Elliott, George Asmus, Alex Montgomery, N. J. Wietor, J. T. Temple and J. F. Sullivan. At the chairman's left was Wm. Duckham, president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America; then F. F. Benthley, Wm. J. Stewart, August Poehlmann, John Burton, A. Herrington, J. D. Carmody, Emil Buettner, Theodore Wirth and H. M. Altick.

After a photograph had been taken and a most satisfactory repast enjoyed, the toastmaster called upon W. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, who set the pace for most of the other speakers in sounding the praises of the show then in progress, referring to the hospitality which he said is always to be found in Chicago. He concluded with an urgent plea for united work for the success of the show to be held by a national committee at Chicago in 1908.

Wm. Duckham, of Madison, N. J., president of the Chrysanthemum Society, was introduced with a rising toast to "The Gardener." He praised the show, saying that so far as roses and carnations go it was far ahead of what the east could do at this season, and as an undertaking much in advance of what any other city dared venture financially. He urged the practice of hybridization as affording a sure means of advancing all gardening interests.

W. J. Stewart, of Boston, spoke of the social side of flower shows, with reminiscences of when Chicago was in her floricultural infancy. He urged individual support of trade organizations, not alone as a means of promoting business interests, but for the social features attending united effort for the general good.

John N. May, of Summit, N. J., said we must by all means continue our shows; the good is great; the bread cast upon the waters would return, if not at once, then after many days, etc. He said twenty per cent of Chicago's population should attend the 1906 show. As a means of interesting more people he suggested distributing seeds or cuttings and offering prizes for school children's exhibits.

John Burton, of Philadelphia, said he wanted to say a word for the retailer. Good, as were all other features, he must commend above all the enterprise and liberality of the retailers as exemplified in their splendid displays. He said the artistic and financial failure of the shows in the large eastern cities could be charged in large part to the indifference of the retailers.

John T. Temple, of Davenport, Ia., said he knew the judges had had a hard job and, he hoped, had given satisfaction. He urged the big cut flower growers to diversify their crops to prevent an oversupply of the staple items.

J. D. Carmody then was given the time limit.

Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J., enthused over the national flower show and promised that the east, if by his efforts it be possible, shall contribute largely to its success.

E. V. Hallock, of Queens, N. Y., was introduced to talk for the S. A. F. executive board, but said he would rather preach the value of banquets in making and cementing friendships. He urged all young men to follow the example of the late Peter Henderson, who never missed a chance to mix at conventions or failed to participate in any undertaking for the general good.

J. F. Cowell, of Buffalo, said he wanted to say a word in recognition of the advance in quality noted from year to year in the exhibits at Chicago shows, and said he was sure there is money in it for the growers who employ better cultural methods.

J. F. Sullivan, of Detroit, talked of the benefits the trade derives in keeping before the public, particularly by the profit which comes from newspaper publicity.

J. A. Valentine, of Denver, said that so many of the preceding speakers had praised the management of the Chicago shows that he wanted to say a word for the men behind the guns; for the rank and file in the craft in Chicago who stand ever ready for the call, typical of the western spirit. He said to one located as far west as himself the great sources of inspiration are the trade press, the shows and the traveling salesmen; for the latter he bespoke a courteous greeting.

P. J. Hauswirth told what he proposes shall happen when he becomes secretary of the S. A. F., January 1. He wants to see the membership grow, both annual and life.

George Asmus was asked to tell just why we have flower shows. He said all talk about the good of horticulture was mere noise; the real reason is the fun we get out of them, particularly in having so many friends come in to our little spreads.

J. F. Klimmer was asked to tell why a florist isn't as good as anybody else. He said he is certain the florist is the best man—when there isn't any one else around.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, closed with the request that all the craft turn out at the next gathering, the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Bloomington in February.

Various Notes.

J. A. Valentine returned home Friday evening, escorting a party of ten of the eastern visitors, who spent three or four days in Denver as his guests. In the delegation were C. H. Totty, A. Herrington, Wm. Duckham and R. Vince, of Madison, N. J.; Paul Dailedouze and Henry Dailedouze, Flatbush, N. Y., and Robert Laurie, Providence, R. I.

The lectures deserve a better place than either room in the Annex affords. Such speakers as E. G. Routzahn, C. B. Whitnall, Prof. Blair, Frederic Crane-field and, above all, Miss Sipe, will not fail to interest and hold a crowd of flower lovers if given a comfortable room where they can be heard. Phil Foley, as a substitute, proved entertaining. It is a good feature.

Totty's vase of white sport of Duckham went to the Hartshorne benefit booth Sunday night, as did a number of other exhibits. The White Duckham, over a week old and a thousand miles from where they were grown, brought 50 cents a piece to the fund for Jimmy's widow and kids, which, thanks to the good work of Will Kyle, was increased several hundreds of dollars.

Saturday morning children were admitted for 10 cents, and several hundred were present, C. L. Hutchinson having an entire orphan asylum and a home for crippled children there as his guests.

The change to cold weather came just in time to add to the work of dismantling the show. Heated wagons were necessary.

Manager George Asmus walked with a decided limp Sunday night.

The Visitors.

The trade visitors at the Chicago show last week were more numerous than at any previous exhibition. In last week's REVIEW there was a list of sixty who had registered by Wednesday, and Thursday is the big day for out-of-town trade visitors. By Saturday night the following had been noted as present, many of the gentlemen accompanied by their wives:

TORONTO.

The third annual show of the Ontario Horticultural Association was held in Massey hall November 6 to 10, and now goes down to history as the greatest show ever held in Canada. The floral section of it was fine, more exhibitors and better stock than ever before. But what might be called the special section was the fruit. The show was a success both as an exhibit and as a financial undertaking. The program was enlivened by having the Black Dike band playing afternoon and evening. This was considered by many a big venture on account of the money that was necessary to obtain the band, as well as the rent of the hall.

Especially noticeable was the fine display of orchids this year. The Dale Estate, Brampton, won first for groups of orchids, Exhibition park second, T. Manton third. The Dale Estate also won first for individual plant. In the table decoration as well as in the made-up work the prizes were well scattered. On decorated table J. S. Simmons secured first, using orchids and valley; A. Jennings second, using orchids and ferns; T. Manton third, J. H. Dunlop fourth. Dunlop had a magnificent table, but spoiled the effect in the estimation of the judges by using small incandescent electric lights instead of having the light over the table.

In chrysanthemums, competition was keen and, while there was not as good a display of the later varieties as we usually have, the earlier varieties showed up to good advantage. out at the next gathering, the meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Association at Bloomington in February.

Various Notes.

J. A. Valentine returned home Friday evening, escorting a party of ten of the eastern visitors, who spent three or four days in Denver as his guests. In the delegation were C. H. Totty, A. Herrington, Wm. Duckham and R. Vince, of Madison, N. J.; Paul Dailedouze and Henry Dailedouze, Flatbush, N. Y., and Robert Laurie, Providence, R. I.

The lectures deserve a better place than either room in the Annex affords. Such speakers as E. G. Rutzahn, C. B. Whitnall, Prof. Blair, Frederic Crane-field and, above all, Miss Sipe, will not fail to interest and hold a crowd of flower lovers if given a comfortable room where they can be heard. Phil Foley, as a substitute, proved entertaining. It is a good feature.

Totty's vase of white sport of Duckham went to the Hartshorne benefit booth Sunday night, as did a number of other exhibits. The White Duckham, over a week old and a thousand miles from where they were grown, brought 50 cents a piece to the fund for Jimmy's widow and kids, which, thanks to the good work of Will Kyle, was increased several hundreds of dollars.

Saturday morning children were admitted for 10 cents, and several hundred were present, C. L. Hutchinson having an entire orphan asylum and a home for crippled children there as his guests.

The change to cold weather came just in time to add to the work of dismantling the show. Heated wagons were necessary.

Manager George Asmus walked with a decided limp Sunday night.

The Visitors.

The trade visitors at the Chicago show last week were more numerous than at any previous exhibition. In last week's REVIEW there was a list of sixty who had registered by Wednesday, and Thursday is the big day for out-of-town trade visitors. By Saturday night the following had been noted as present, many of the gentlemen accompanied by their wives:

The third annual show of the Ontario Horticultural Association was held in Massey hall November 6 to 10, and now goes down to history as the greatest show ever held in Canada. The floral section of it was fine, more exhibitors and better stock than ever before. But what might be called the special section was the fruit. The show was a success both as an exhibit and as a financial undertaking. The program was enlivened by having the Black Dike band playing afternoon and evening. This was considered by many a big venture on account of the money that was necessary to obtain the band, as well as the rent of the hall.

Especially noticeable was the fine display of orchids this year. The Dale Estate, Brampton, won first for groups of orchids, Exhibition park second, T. Manton third. by R. Jennings, Brampton, being the only exhibitor. The Hallam cup for the best twelve distinct varieties was won by T. McHugh, Montreal, who also won the special prize given by R. J. Score for the largest bloom in the show.

On twenty-five distinct varieties D. Robertson, Reservoir park, won first, Dale Estate second, J. H. Dunlop third, R. Cameron, Niagara Falls, fourth. On twenty-five any varieties, Sir William Pellat won first, D. Robertson second, Dale Estate third, J. H. Dunlop fourth. On twelve one variety, H. Dale Estate won first, R. Cameron second, Steele Briggs Seed Co. third, North Toronto Floral Co. fourth. On six distinct varieties never before exhibited in Ontario, T. McHugh won first, H. H. Fuddger second, H. Dale Estate third, J. H. Dunlop fourth. On six white, Steele Briggs Seed Co. won first, Dale Estate second, R. Jennings third, Sir Henry Pellat fourth. On six pink, R. Robertson first, Dale Estate second, R. Jennings third, Steele Briggs Seed Co. fourth. On six yellow, Dale Estate won first, Steele Briggs Seed Co. second, R. Jennings third, H. H. Fuddger fourth.

In the carnation classes the competition was light. The Dale Estate, Brampton, took all the firsts, while R. Jennings, Brampton; G. D. Manton, Eglington, and Geo. Allen, Toronto Junction, divided up the seconds and thirds.

In the rose section the competition was much keener and called for some close judging. The awards were:

Ten yellow, Dale Estate first, J. H. Dunlop second. Ten white, Toronto Floral Co. first, Dale Estate second, J. H. Dunlop third. Ten pink, Dale Estate first, Bedford Park Floral Co. second, J. H. Dunlop third, Toronto Floral Co. fourth. Ten crimson, Dale Estate first, J. H. Dunlop second. Ten light pink, J. H. Dun-in all classes, while Carlton A. Marx, of Lampton Mills, and R. Jennings, Brampton, divided the seconds and thirds.

In the made-up design work the competition was not as large as other years, but the work was fine. For the standing floral design J. H. Dunlop won first, T. Manton second and J. S. Simmons third. On presentation basket of chrysanthemums, J. S. Simmons first, J. H. Dunlop second; presentation basket, any flowers, J. H. Dunlop first, J. S. Simmons second; flat basket of chrysanthemums for table decoration, J. H. Dunlop first, Thomas Manton second, J. S. Simmons third; hand bouquet, J. S. Simmons first, J. H. Dunlop second, T. Manton third. A special prize was given to J. S. Simmons for a cushion on an easel. This was without doubt the most attractive design in the show, and was favorably commented on by all the florists as well as by the general public. D. J.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

The twelfth annual exhibition of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society opened November 7. It proved to be a pronounced success, as all former displays made by this society have been. A notable feature of the decorations was the display by Archibald Rogers, of Hyde Park. The general arrangement reflected credit on those in charge. With Landing; F. W. Vanderbilt; Chauncey Marshall, New Hamburg; Fred Heermans, Lenox, Mass.; Ogden Mills; G. L. Haight, Staatsburg; John J. Riker, Portchester; Geo. A. Saltford; A. W. Williams; Adam Laub & Son, Hughsonville; Benjamin Willig, Poughkeepsie; A. Rogers; H. G. Cottam, Wappingers Falls; John Bahret, C. F. Bahret and C. J. Reynolds, Poughkeepsie.

The judges were William Turner, Oceanic, N. J.; Thomas Harrison, Glen Cove, L. I.; R. W. Allen, Hudson.

PHILADELPHIA.

The chrysanthemum show last week, while not so large as in former years, was equally as good in proportion as any held in Philadelphia. A good many of the growers had to withdraw at the last minute, owing to their stuff not being in condition, this being the fault of too much dark weather in the early part of the season.

The arrangement of the plants and cut blooms was fine and showed good judgment. The main hall was decorated with chrysanthemum plants of immense size and color. In the center a fine group of specimen ferns were shown, one of them, Davallia Fijensis plumosa, winning a silver medal for the best fern in the exhibition. At the west end of the hall the H. A. Dreer Co., Riverton, N. J., showed a fine collection of rare and commercial plants, which made a fine effect. The cut blooms of chrysanthemums were arranged on tables in the balcony in their different classes. Some of the best varieties shown were Lady Hopetoun, pink; W. R. Church, red; Viola, pink; William Duckham, pink; Rival, yellow; Merza, white; Rustique, bronze; Mrs. Robinson, white; Col. Appleton, yellow, and Morton F. Plant, a very good pink.

In the carnation exhibits the Cottage Gardens captured a silver cup, as well as first prize for the best American seedling, Mrs. C. W. Ward, a fine pink of immense size and fine stem. The F. R. Pierson Co. showed its new carnation, Windsor, somewhat like Enchantress in color. In the room under the hall the H. F. Michell Co. had a choice collection of pompon chrysanthemums in all shades. NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW.

The executive committee of the Society of American Florists held a two days' session at the Auditorium Annex, Chicago, last week, November 8 and 9.

Those present were President William F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.; Vice-President H. M. Altick, Dayton, O.; Secretary William J. Stewart, Boston, Mass.; executive committee members E. V. Hallock, Queens, N. Y.; Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn.; William H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass.; P. J. Hauswirth, Chicago; also J. C. Vaughan, Arthur Herrington, Alexander Montgomery and John N. May, of the original special committee on national flower show. Many other leading members of the S. A. F. also were present from time to time during the two days' discussion given to the project of a national exhibition.

The discussion was on the resolution adopted at the Dayton convention, to the effect that if a national flower show be held, it shall be held at Chicago in the autumn of 1908. Sentiment was practically unanimous in favor of the proposed exhibition, and the discussion virtually was confined to the details of lop first, Dale Estate second, Bedford park third. Ten any other color, Dale Estate first, Toronto Floral Co. second. Ten Beauties, J. H. Dunlop first, Dale Estate second, George Allen third, Toronto Floral Co. fourth. Twenty-five Beauties, Dale Estate first, J. H. Dunlop second, G. D. Manton third. Vase of fifty roses, arrangement to count in judging, not necessarily grown by exhibitor, American Beauty excluded, Bedford Park Floral Co. first, J. H. Dunlop second, Dale Estate third.

In violets the Dale Estate took first a multiplicity of flowers and plants, there was ample room for the visitors to move about and to get a good general view of the entire exhibit, features that not infrequently are lacking.

Among the winning exhibitors were the following named: Archibald Rogers, Hyde Park; William P. Clyde, New Hamburg; Winthrop Sergeant, Fishkill the organization necessary to insure success.

William F. Kasting was made chairman of the national flower show committee, which is to consist of fifty members, representing all interests in the trade, and which will be announced as soon as the fifty men selected have signified their willingness to take hold and push. It is the intention that every one among the fifty shall be thoroughly interested in the success of the undertaking.

A guarantee fund of $10,000 will be raised. Including the subscriptions obtained when the project was first broached, at Washington in 1905, subscriptions to date amount to $5,100.

The preparation of the schedule was delegated to Robert Craig and Edwin Lonsdale, of Philadelphia. It is to be a thoroughly comprehensive affair, and will carry such liberal money premiums that an exhibition will be assured such as America never has seen. Other members of the schedule committee are Arthur Herrington, John N. May, W. N. Rudd, and E. G. Hill, and the schedule as prepared by the two Philadelphia members will be subject to the approval of the whole committee before it is submitted to the national committee for ratification.

The exhibition is to take place at Chicago the week following the presidential election of 1908.

It was deemed not within the province of the present executive committee to make recommendations in regard to the S. A. F. convention of 1908. This is left in the hands of the executive committee which assumes office January 1, but the sentiment was in favor of holding the convention at the same time as the exhibition, instead of in August, as is provided for by the present by-laws. It was the consensus of opinion that the attendance of those in the trade will be much larger at the November convention and national exhibition than at the August convention. The idea is to also hold a trade display, but separate from the public exhibition.

Committees on hall and various early arrangements were made up. Chairman Kasting will announce details from time to time as perfected. It is the intention to keep the pot boiling from this time forward.

ILLINOIS ASSOCIATION.

The State Florists' Association of Illinois held a meeting at the Coliseum, Chicago, Friday, November 9. President J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, occupied the chair, and members from all sections of the state were present.

The principal business was the discussion of plans for the second annual convention, to be held at Bloomington on the second Tuesday of February, 1907. It is expected that a program of such interest will be afforded that the attendance will be much larger than at the Peoria meeting. The Bloomington members present offered assurances of a hospitable reception.

Resolutions were adopted setting forth the fact that the products of floriculture exceed in value the products of all the orchards in the state of Illinois, and that floricultural interests in Illinois are now greater than those of any other state in the Union. This was addressed to the State Board of Agriculture, with a request that a suitable building be erected on the state fair grounds at Springfield and a suitable sum of money set aside for premiums for a floricultural display at the state fair.

A. C. Beal, of the State Experiment Station, was instructed to prepare full statistics of floriculture in Illinois for presentation to the State Board of Agriculture, for use with the legislature in the endeavor to get an appropriation for experimental greenhouses, and for exploitation in the state, that the people may know how important the greenhouse industry has become.

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE.

Plant Hardiness and Acclimatization.

The responses to the preliminary letter of inquiry issued in the early part of this year have proved so encouraging that the council of the Horticultural Society of New York, at the meeting October 10, decided to proceed with the project and is arranging to hold the conference in New York City about the end of September, 1907.

From all parts of the United States, from several European countries, and from South America and Canada, as well as the West Indian Islands, active interest has been expressed, and at this early date, a number of papers and contributions have been promised. The conference has the endorsement of the United States Department of Agriculture, and the majority of the directors and horticulturists of the state experiment stations have signified their intention of contributing information, or sending delegates.

The great importance of the subjects to be discussed in their relationship to practical horticulture, fruit growing, and the nursery trade is evident to every one.

A special committee of the society in charge of the arrangements for the conference was appointed as follows: James Wood, N. L. Britton, P. O'Mara, H. A. Siebrecht, and Leonard Barron. Communications from those interested should be addressed to the office of the society, room 60, Bryant building, 55 Liberty street, New York City.

LEONARD BARRON, Sec'y.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The executive committee of the American Rose Society held a meeting at the Hotel Martinique, New York City, November 9, 1906. All members reported in person or by letter. The arrangements for the spring show, in connection with that of the Washington Florists' Club, to be held in March, 1907, were reported to be perfected, the agreement having been signed by Peter Bisset and Chas. E. McCauley, on behalf of the Washington Florists' Club and Robert Simpson, president of the American Rose Society. The secretary reported that when at Chicago last month he attended a meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club and was introduced to the meeting on behalf of the American Rose Society, and received from the association courteous consideration, and that he had urged the western people, as far as he could, to join hands earnestly to make the Rose Society a great popular educating association, to bring in the era of "A rose for every home and a bush for every garden," which to the commercial grower meant a standing and expanding interest in outdoor floral decorations of all kinds.

Letters were read from P. A. Lynch, West Grove, Pa.; Jas. J. Curran, Salem, Va., and Patrick Welch, Boston, Mass., encouraging the best efforts possible to make the show at the capital of the nation a great success.

Since the committee meeting in August, S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, had sent in an application for life membership, with the full fee of $50.

A special prize of $10 was reported for an exhibit of three good roses, suitable for dooryard planting, that hold the foliage to the best advantage. Robert Simpson, Clifton, N. J., offered a silver cup valued at $50 for the best collection of crimson roses. H. O. May, Summit, N. J., offered a silver cup valued at $25 for American seedling roses not yet introduced. F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., offered a silver cup valued at $25 for the best collection of hybrid Wichuraiana, and ex-President W. C. Barry advised that his firm would be pleased to offer a suitable prize, to be designated later.

It was moved by Mr. May and seconded by Mr. Farenwald that the chair appoint a committee to prepare a synopsis of the organization and doings of the American Rose Society up to the present time. The chair appointed the secretary and vice-president, Mr. Pierson, as such committee.

HILL'S NEW ROSE.

To the general florist there probably was nothing at the Chicago show which compared in interest to Hill's new rose. This is a seedling raised by the E. G. Hill Co., at Richmond, Ind., and is the result of a number of crosses, so that the parentage is somewhat involved. The color is the red of the American Beauty, and the variety will be not at all a competitor of Liberty or Richmond; rather it will be a rival of Beauty, although the character of growth is quite different. The flower is about the shape of Bride or Bridesmaid at their best, and it has about the same fullness, the size being possibly a little larger than in these standard sorts when in their best shape. It is stated by members of the Hill firm that the variety is as free a bloomer as either Bride or Bridesmaid, and consequently it is expected to prove a profitable sort for everyone to grow. At present the stock consists of a bench 200 feet long. The present plan is to disseminate the variety January 1, 1908.

CARE OF CUT STOCK.

The care of stock after the cut is taken and until it is sold should, if we desire to add to our reputation, receive a great deal of attention. The cut, immediately after being taken and before the wound has had time to dry, should be immersed in water. The water should be at a temperature not to exceed that of the house from which the cut was taken, nor below 42 degrees. The stock should then be placed in a room which should be at a temperature of from 48 to 52 degrees.

By allowing the cut to remain at that temperature for eight or ten hours before shipping, the most satisfactory results are obtained. If they remain any longer in the stock room the water ought to be changed. After being kept in the cooler for thirty-six hours the conscientious grower will refuse to ship them to his customers.

As we approach the holidays there is always an inclination on the part of some growers to resort to pickling, and year after year the same complaints are heard from retailers and commission-men who receive consignments for these occasions which are simply rubbish when received. The damage done to the trade by these transactions is incalculable, giving the trade an unsavory reputation with the public and destroying the confidence and friendship which ought to exist amongst the craft.

Packing.

In packing the greatest care should be taken to place each individual bloom in such a manner that the petals may not be injured nor the necks broken. A small roll of tissue-paper or cotton-battling under the necks of each row of blooms will prevent this. The whole contents of the box should then be kept in place by cleats neatly placed across the box and nailed in position. These cleats must not be near the necks of the buds, else they are apt to do the very injury they are intended to prevent.

The paper next the blooms always should be clean and new. This gives the flowers a much fresher appearance than if newspapers or soiled paper be the material used. The wrapping should always be abundant and sufficient to withstand severe frost.

Routing instructions ought to be plain and legible and addresses written plainly so that the expressman may be under no misapprehension as to the destination of the parcel.

By attending carefully to these conditions, which we will do if we consider the best interests of our customers, which are identical with our own, we will avoid many complaints.

RIBES.

A JOURNALISTIC FEATURE.

The Herald, at Grand Rapids, Mich., on November 4 published an eight-page section devoted entirely to the florists of that city. The front page bore a reproduction in colors of the flower show poster used at Chicago this year. There was a general write-up of the greenhouse industry, which is such an important feature of the business life of Grand Rapids, and there were write-ups of the various individual establishments. In addition, many of those in the trade advertised in the flower supplement, the publisher affording assistance in the preparation of attractive and interesting advertising, each advertisement being illustrated. It was a feature which must have given Grand Rapids people a new idea of the magnitude of the greenhouse business, and one which might well be patronized by florists in other towns where publishers have the enterprise to issue similar supplements.

THE MUMS AT MERSTHAM.

Reason for Not Showing at Chicago.

Since the inability to send blooms of new chrysanthemums as usual this year, growers in America will no doubt be greatly interested with descriptions of the plants that in a year or two hence will be household words among all mum-lovers in the States. We have been given to understand that our blooms are greatly appreciated by gardeners and florists when sent from here, and not until within forty-eight hours of the sailing of the boat were we forced to abandon the idea of sending to the Chicago exhibition.

We have been treated by nature to 7 degrees of frost, heavy rain and fog within one night, and the next day the thermometer touched 70 degrees in the shade. Under climatic conditions such as these, chrysanthemums have damped to such an extent as to make a good showing almost an impossibility this season.

The hot, dry summer brought blooms out rather earlier than usual, and most of the plants to be distributed in the coming season have already flowered and are over. We should not be justified in describing other varieties than those we have grown ourselves, for we know nothing of their growth, habit or other points so necessary to make a flower a success.

White Duckham.

The first and foremost novelty to describe is a pure white sport from W. Duckham. No description of this is necessary, except that it is as pure white as any, and has, no doubt, been shown in America. The plant sported in the north of Scotland, and, strangely enough, the first intimation we had of its existence reached us just before I was leaving home for the Edinburgh show, the same journey on which I had the great pleasure of meeting your Mr. W. Duckham in person for the first time. As we traveled together, the topic naturally was the white sport of his namesake, and Mr. Duckham's anxiety was easily satisfied by letting him have as much stock as possible to flower the following (this) season, and agreeing to C. H. Totty's distributing it in America. Really a romance in itself. No name has yet been decided on, and for my part, White W. Duckham is good enough.

Another sport is a deep butter yellow, Mme. Cadbury. The mention of the color is sufficient, we think. The name is Mrs. A. H. Pirie. A third sport is a pure white Mme. H. Douillet, which should make a good decorative variety with you in America.

The Wells-Pockett Set.

The Wells-Pockett set for 1907 is better than 1906, as far as seen at present. With these famous seedlings, Amy Laidman is a pure white Jap, an immense flower, and is best described as an enlarged and improved pure white Nellie Pockett.

J. W. Blackburn is a deep crimson, a beautiful flower nine inches across with us. It is tremendously double here, and early buds won't do in England. The height of the plant is four feet, the habit perfect, and the flower a splendid keeper.

Mrs. J. C. Neill is an enormous and beautiful yellow, really a greatly improved and enlarged Cheltoni. This has promise of being the best yellow in existence, both for exhibition or decorative purposes. This won the championship in Australia last year.

W. M. Moir is a massive pure white Jap, incurved, and is named after the raiser of White W. Duckham. It is a splendid exhibition flower.

English Varieties.

English varieties are extra good this year. The first to mention is Dorothy Gouldsmith, a lovely yellow tinged with bronze. It has already gained the first-class certificate of the National Chrysanthemum Society. The bloom to which it was awarded was twelve inches from tip of petal to top of flower. This is going to be one of the very best both for color, size and growth.

Harold Wells is an enormous white that spans ten inches across. It is a massive flower on stiff stems, and we look to it to be one of the purest, largest, and best whites in existence.

Mrs. W. Wells is a beautifully shaped flower of exceptionally rich color. The habit is splendid, four feet in height, and the color is quite distinct from any existing chrysanthemum. We believe this will have a great future both as a decorative and exhibition variety.

Several other novelties are promising well. We may mention Norfolk Blush, Rider Haggard, and Wm. Luxford. We cannot fully describe them at present, preferring to wait until the flowers have been shown to perfection. Most of the English seedlings were raised from Australian seed.

might be like next fall, for at present his seedlings are well to the front in England and America. The American growers prefer them to others. By many years' dealing with Mr. Pockett he has proved that we can depend upon his word as well as his seedlings. We must therefore wait and hope, but I doubt if the chrysanthemum world will be disappointed with his description.

Merstham, England. W. WELLS.

SOME OF THE NOVELTIES.

In my opinion the best novelty of the year is the white sport of William Duckham. In the Chicago exhibition this variety kept perfectly for six days and at the end of that time was probably the freshest exhibit in the long-stem and cut flower classes. This, too, after traveling over 1,000 miles before being staged. This variety won the Frick prize for the best new variety, which carried with it the privilege of naming the variety. Consequently the white Duckham will in future be known as Miss Clay Frick.

Miss Miriam Hankey is a lovely pink try this variety, because it produces a good flower from any bud, early or late, and in no case have I seen this variety come with an eye. Hankey I know will hold its own for years.

Mrs. George Hunt is an enormous, incurving light yellow. It may be described most easily, perhaps, as an improved Chrysanthemiste Montigny. This latter variety is so large that I may perhaps be accused of drawing the long bow when I say that Hunt will easily beat it in size and finish, but such is the case, none the less, and in addition it does not damp easily, which is a failing of Montigny.

Mrs. Henry Barnes is another monster and in many ways is a unique variety. It is old rose in color, with a lighter reverse. It is on the incurving order but the petals reflex enough to show the lovely color in the center of the flower. Barnes is one of the strongest growers I ever have handled and when generally distributed will make its mark.

Mrs. A. T. Miller is rather early for the exhibitions but it is a lovely flower, of the purest white, and is sure of a large sale. It has been certificated by the New York committee on the commercial scale and as it grew with me is far ahead of Tousey as a second early white. C. H. TOTTY.

INFLUENCE OF CLIMATE.

[A paper by E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., read before the Chrysanthemum Society of America, at the Chicago meeting, November 7, 1906.]

The responsibility of writing a paper on the subject of chrysanthemums, or any branch pertaining thereto, is no small one. Since the beginning of the chrysanthemum era much has been written on the subject; so much, indeed, has been written and printed, and so much of value withal, that it smacks of pure presumption for me to undertake to speak entertainingly upon any branch of chrysanthemum culture.

Literature of the Mum.

Would you know how to take care of your stock plants? Would you inquire as to the best time to take cuttings, or the best kind of cuttings to take? Would you ask as to the ideal soil, as to the best methods of shipping and marketing, or a complete set of rules for growing, staging and exhibiting chrysanthemums at the annual exhibitions? If so, you will naturally turn to the able and excellent book published by our ex-president, Arthur Herrington, or the older but no less valuable work published by Elmer D. Smith, that old-time expert of Adrian, Mich.

Then look at our cultural notes in the trade papers. What volumes these notes would make if brought together into book form! In justice to the judgment and ability of the writers for these papers, I believe that a compiler of these notes would find it hard to cut anything out, for they are of universal value. With all these facts staring me in the face, it becomes a hard problem to select a branch of this subject on which I may say anything other than repetitions and quotations from abler men.

However, facing the necessity of fulfilling a promise made without the full realization of its responsibility, I have decided to make a few remarks along the line of the influence of climatic conditions upon the culture of chrysanthemums.

When Humidity Influences.

No doubt many of the members pres-

Chrysanthemum Miss Miriam Hankey.

To add a point further, Thos. Pockett, the celebrated raiser, tells us that in the season of 1907-08 we shall see the best chrysanthemum he has yet raised. We are most eager to see what this that will become very popular. It is ideal in growth, strong, stiff stem and foliage up to the flower. I think many commercial growers who cannot handle William Duckham will be pleased if they ent have read the valuable work from the hands of W. Wells, the famous chrysanthemum expert of England. In this book Mr. Wells endeavors to describe the methods which have won him so many prizes and so much honor before the National Chrysanthemum Society of England, yet after a study of this book, with my mind entirely open to conviction and with a desire to learn from him, it is exceedingly hard to find any point of value in our part of the country.

Some of the most able chrysanthemum notes which have been published in the United States in years are coming from time to time from the pen of our honored member, Mr. Totty, yet there are points in his notes which will scarcely fit the ultra-dry atmospheric conditions facing us in the central states.

Mr. Wells very carefully directs his reader to avoid overwatering as one would avoid a serpent. In Indiana it is extremely difficult to overwater chrysanthemums when they are growing vigorously during the hot summer months. Our greatest trouble lies in our benches drying out at the bottom while we are carefully watering on top, so we find that to succeed in producing fine flowers we must daily go to the bottom of our benches to discover whether the water is penetrating the depth of the bench. Mr. Wells grows his magnificent exhibition blooms in pots, sitting upon cement ledges out-of-doors. On the other hand, we of Indiana plant our chrysanthemums in a bench constructed with a view to "keeping their feet cold."

We have become firmly convinced that benches with too thorough drainage are not the best benches for chrysanthemum growing. Of course, we must always avoid letting our soil become waterlogged, but it is difficult in our section of the country, where the air in the summer is intensely hot and dry, and where evaporation from foliage is extremely rapid, it is almost impossible, we think, to overwater chrysanthemums.

Selection of Buds.

The influence of climate upon the selection of buds for obtaining the best results with different varieties is a subject of the utmost interest. It is certain that chrysanthemums do not act in this country, at least in our section, in the same manner as they do in England, or even along our eastern coast. We are convinced that it is much more difficult to properly develop first crown buds in our section of the country than in a locality where the atmosphere is somewhat more humid.

On the other hand, we have less excuse for losing flowers from damping. The English writers tell of their methods of timing the buds. We have repeatedly attempted to accomplish something of this kind, but find that it is utterly impossible to change the date of any particular variety to any considerable extent. The reason we assign is the subject of this paper.

When Control is Greatest.

To explain more fully our view: Where the weather is cool and much of the time cloudy, the conditions for growing chrysanthemums are far more fully under the control of the grower, and he may, by studying individual varieties, control his results. Where the atmosphere is dry and evaporation from the foliage is rapid, chrysanthemums grow and develop more in accordance with nature's laws and are less under control of the operator.

France and U. S. Alike.

How often we have followed the directions given by our English friends, regarding first crown buds, only to see the result of our year's work a great, abnormal flower commonly known as bullhead, instead of the beautiful bloom as described in the catalogue.

It is generally understood that the French growers are unable to produce flowers of size or color to compare with those grown by many experts in England. Also, in spite of the wonderful blooms produced by prominent members of this society in the east, we have understood that they are somewhat behind our English friends.

Now, is it not entirely feasible that conditions in France and the United States, which we know are somewhat alike as to climate, may prove the stumbling block?

It has always seemed peculiar to us that the varieties originating in France are frequently beautiful upon the terminal bud, while varieties which come from England, as a class, are worthless on this bud. It is certain that we get by far the most beautiful color on our terminals, while in England the use of a terminal bud is exceptional.

I am loathe to believe that the growers in this country are behind our English friends in ability; also, I would not do credit to the west did I not say that the men of the west are as well able to grow fine flowers as those in the east. It comes down to a question of local conditions, and I am firmly convinced that the climate is the most potent factor of all.

PRESIDENT DUCKHAM'S ADDRESS.

In his address to the Chrysanthemum Society of America, at the Chicago meeting, November 7, President Duckham said in part:

"Four years have passed since we last met in Chicago, and the commercial progress hereabout since then is perfectly staggering. I had an opportunity of viewing some of it at the time of the St. Louis fair, for I passed through your great city at that time. There seems no end to your development, to the founding of new firms and to the enlargement of old ones.

"But I am not quite sure that the development of a higher culture of the chrysanthemum has quite kept step with the commercial development. We have seen a fine development in culture undoubtedly, but whether it is as large as it ought to be is not quite clear in my mind. We must do better, or in a real sense we are not doing all that might be done.

"However that may be, it is perfectly certain that the growth of the society in membership is disappointing. I suggested in my message last year that personal solicitation was the surest method of increasing membership. I am still of that opinion. There are far too many growers, both amateur and professional, who are not in this society. We need a little more judicious buttonholing. Will you let me make another suggestion? Would it not be possible for us to impose on our admirable committees at Chicago, Cincinnati, Philadelphia, New York and Boston the slight additional burden of increasing our membership list? I hope you will not consider the suggestion delicate.

"Perhaps our chief business after all is to take an account of stock and ask where we stand in relation to the real progress—the development of newer varieties. The newer ones are obviously a great improvement on their predecessors. We are going forward, every one of you will concede; especially does this apply to exhibition varieties. But we are still too much dependent upon Europe and Australia. Furthermore, it seems to me that private gardeners are too much dependent on their commercial friends, and are indifferent, more or less, where or how the newer varieties are obtained. Yet each year how eagerly some of us are looking for striking novelties over those of the preceding year.

"Our progress in America, as far as new varieties are concerned, is almost wholly made by these great houses who have laid such broad and deep commercial foundations. Such men as Smith, Hill, May, and, in the last few years, Totty, have all done much to raise the standard and create a love for the flower we at this time represent.

"It is fully time for the private gardeners to have a bit bigger try at hybridizing and raising new varieties. It is the most fascinating of all works, and once entered upon is sure to be an increasing delight and a practical enterprise.

"In the message sent you last year and the attendance. There were over 70,000 paid admissions in three days. Think of that, and be humble! Nay, think of that, and lay plans day and night to rouse our people to a similar interest! What could we not accomplish if we had a constituency like that?

"The Germans and French have both gone into the growing of the chrysanthemum with great energy, especially the latter, and many fine varieties can be traced to the handiwork of the French hybridist. Therefore, it behooves us to be up and doing."

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

President Duckham has announced the committees to examine seedlings and sports on each Saturday to and including November 24, 1906.

Exhibits to receive attention from the committees must in all cases be prepaid to destination, and the entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week preceding examination, or may accompany the blooms. Special attention is called to the rule requiring that sports to receive a certificate must pass three committees.

ALFRED J. LOVELESS.

Alfred J. Loveless, who was elected president of the Chrysanthemum Society of America at its meeting at Chicago November 7, was born at Langford, Somerset, England, and from early childhood had a great fondness for flowers. After completing his common school education, at the age of 12 years he started work in Langford house gardens, and at 19 years of age was appointed head gardener there, not from his own desires, but through force of circumstances, and the entire confidence of his employer, Sidney Hill, in his ability to take charge. Here he was first impressed with the importance of cleanliness in everything pertaining to gardening, and the lessons learned then have been of permanent benefit to him throughout his career.

After serving two years at Langford house, he felt the need of a change, and much to the regret of his employer resigned to take charge of the flower gardens and pleasure grounds of Killarney house, the seat of the Earl of Kenmare. Here he came in contact with one of the finest collections of herbaceous plants and shrubs in England and here he first learned the importance of color massing in herbaceous borders. After celebrating his twenty-first birthday in Ireland he left to take charge of the gardens of Strathallan hall, Douglas, Isle of Man. Here he remained two years, and having a desire to see America, sailed March 9, 1889, for New York, arriving on St.

Chrysanthemum Mrs. A. T. Miller.

I ventured to say that perhaps during my absence I might see something worthy of comment this year. I had the great pleasure of attending the Edinburgh (Scotland) show, and I must confess I was completely overwhelmed by it, both by the magnificent blooms shown Patrick's day in the morning. The same day he visited the United States Nurseries, Short Hills, N. J., and in the afternoon left for Staatsburgh, N. Y., where he was engaged by Thomas Emmerson to take charge of the palms and stove plants in the gardens of W. B. Dinsmore.

Owing to poor health he resigned his position there after two years and was engaged as head gardener by Senator S. W. Robbins, of Wethersfield, Conn. After three years in his employ he went to England, and on his return was for a few months assistant in the greenhouses of James B. Colgate, Yonkers, N. Y., after which he removed to Lenox to become foreman for J. F. Huss, at Ventfort hall. After serving two years in that capacity he was engaged as superintendent by John Sloane, which position he has now held for eleven years.

Mr. Loveless is master of Evening Star Lodge, F. & A. M., member of Berkshire Commandery and Melha Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. He is ex-president of the Lenox Horticultural Society and an active member of the Chrysanthemum Society of America. He is one of the most successful cultivators of the chrysanthemum to be found in the country.

CHANGING PLANT HABITS.

Retardation and Acceleration.

If plants of the present season's growth refused to be forced again until they had had a month or two of sleep, why not retard those of the previous year? Such was the reasoning that led to the discovery that lily of the valley crowns, Japanese and other lily bulbs, also lilacs, deciduous azaleas, hydrangeas and some other deciduous flowering shrubs might be lifted and placed in cold storage rooms, similar to those used for the preservation of fresh meat, retarding them until it was thought fit to introduce them to heat and force them into flower. This discovery alone had the effect of enabling the market grower to place lily of the valley flowers on the market every day in the year.

Retarding is now practiced in all gardening communities and its commercial value is beyond estimation. It must be pointed out, however, that toward the end of the autumn the plants that have been in cold storage so long begin to lose their vital power, for the sleep cannot be indefinitely prolonged with impunity, and by the time the forcing of the succeeding season's products can be undertaken with success, the retarded specimens have lost their commercial value.

Three Periods of Sleep.

The next discovery in relation to the forcing of plants was made in Denmark by Prof. Johannsen, of Copenhagen. This Danish botanist, after making a prolonged study of the resting period of plants, came to the conclusion that their period of inactivity or sleep might be divided into three stages, as follows: First, the period immediately following the fall of the leaf or a stage in which the plant is going to sleep; secondly, a similar length of time during which rest is absolute, and thirdly, the period in spring when, the sleeping stage having passed, the tree continues to remain dormant only because the weather is unsuitable for growth.

It was thought that it might be possible to hurry the plants through the first two stages of rest into the third and it was obvious that if this could be done they would at once be in a suitable condition for introducing to the forcing house. Prof. Johannsen by repeated experiments found that in plants, as in animals, the effect of ether and chloroform is to cause every indication of sleep and during the last three years the system of etherizing plants to bring them quickly through the resting periods has been adopted commercially with extraordinary success.

Flower Twice in a Year.

A lilac may be lifted from the ground at the end of the summer while the leaves are still upon it and removed to a house, where it is treated for a few hours to the influence of the fumes of ether, and by this simple means such an effect is produced in the tissues as would not have taken place for several months to come if left to nature. It is now easily possible to flower lilacs twice in the same year, once naturally in the open ground in June and again in late autumn or early winter by subjecting the plant to etherization and subsequently forcing it in a greenhouse.

When plants are to be etherized they are brought first into a dry condition at top and root before removal to a structure that can be made practically airtight. When the door has been sealed the ether is applied through a small hole in the roof into a vessel in the house, and the fumes, being heavier than the atmosphere, they hang near the floor. The exact length of time it is necessary to keep the plants under the influence of these fumes varies according to the species, and some are subjected to two doses. Prof. Craig, of Cornell University, in making some recent experiments, found that lilacs and spiræas yielded the best results after etherization and that bulbs of Lilium Harrisii bloomed from one to three weeks in advance of non-etherized bulbs.

Dries Up the Tissues.

The only explanation that science can yet offer of this extraordinary influence of ether is that it has the effect of drying up the moisture in the tissues and it is believed that in the natural rest or sleep which plants undergo there is also a gradual drying process at work which, for want of better knowledge, the cultivator describes as the ripening of the tissues.

BOUTONNIERES IN LONDON.

The wearing of boutonnieres among men is on the increase in London. The fashionable buttonhole this autumn is either a single carnation or a bunch of violets. Mr. Goodyear, the Bond street florist, told the Daily Mirror that undoubtedly more men than ever are wearing flowers in their coats this season. "All kinds of carnations are favored," he said, "and the cost of an ordinary coat bloom is one shilling. The most expensive kinds are the malmaisons; they cost as much as half a crown each." Orchids are still worn, principally with evening dress.

PIPS FOR VARIOUS PURPOSES.

Selecting the Samples.

The season is now at hand for florists to choose their bulk samples of lily of the valley for whatever purpose they are required. These purposes may be divided into five different categories: Early forcing, commencing say at Christmas or just before; later forcing, commencing say at the end of February and continuing until April; retarding for use during the first six months of storage, say from April till September; retarding for use during the last half of storage, say from September till the end of January, and lastly, samples for decorative use, in pots, such as will produce fine, deep-colored foliage and long, upstanding spikes produced well above the foliage.

This time of the year will, I think, be an acceptable one for growers on your side of the water to glean a little information as to what samples are good to buy and to what purpose to put them when they receive the bulk.

My experience of exporting to America is that the majority of importers in that country make a great error in choosing samples, nearly everyone endeavoring to obtain the crowns with long, light, fibrous, bushy roots, expecting thereby to obtain the ideal crown for every purpose. A greater mistake could not be made or one more attendant with disastrous consequences.

Kinds of Samples.

The samples usually submitted to a buyer by the German exporter may be divided into six different sections, as far as roots are concerned, all of which are good and useful if put to their respective purposes, and subjected to the treatment best suited to particular requirements. Short, bunchy roots; short stubby roots; heavy, thick and abundant fibrous roots; light, thin, fibrous or fluffy roots; long, trailing roots, and roots which are little else than one thick, long tap-root.

Then again there are the different soils on which they are grown, which considerably alter their value and characteristics for any particular purpose. These may be divided into six different sections: viz., light loam, heavy loam, heavy clay, black peat, black sandy peat, and rich, heavily manured, sandy loam.

Then, again there is much difference in the flowering owing to a wet or a dry growing and maturing season in Germany.

In connecting the various soils with the different appearances of the roots, it may be here remarked that short, bunchy roots are the product of heavy loam; short, stubby roots, the product of rich, medium clay, or rich, heavy loam; heavy, thick and abundant fibrous roots, the product of rich, heavily manured, sandy loam; light, thin, fibrous or bunchy roots, from light, sandy loam, and roots that are little else than one thick, long tap-root, from rich, damp, heavy clay.

Samples from black peat (which I omitted to mention in the above six sorts of roots) are usually medium to heavy, fibrous roots with little substance in them when pulled between the finger and thumb and usually rot with the slightest oversupply of water when forced. If any other samples are obtainable, to the ordinarily experienced grower, black peat samples should be entirely avoided.

It may be taken for certain that the more bunchy and abundantly fibrous the roots, the lighter and drier the soil in which they are grown, and the thicker, coarser and shorter the roots are, the more a thick, heavy tap-root is in evidence, the heavier and richer the soil in which they were grown. For instance, crowns with abundant, fibrous and bunchy roots, with little tap-root, would never be produced upon heavy, rich clay or loam, but on light, sandy soil only.

Kind for Early Forcing.

Now as to the various purposes to which these different samples are most suited. For very early forcing, such as are required from Christmas onward, valley pips with bunchy and abundant fibrous roots, are the most suitable. Being grown on light soil, they ripen or mature quickest, and are, therefore, unsuitable for anything but early work unless the season has been cold and wet, with little sunshine, in which case they would not ripen sufficiently for early forcing unless by artificial process. After a season of that kind, they would be suitable only for retarding, for up to about August, and would not be so suitable for earliest forcing, for, having ripened later, the foliage would be produced at the expense of the bloom.

Pips for Late Forcing.

For later forcing, from February until April blooming, short, bunchy or stubby roots are the most suitable. Being grown on a heavy, damp soil (of which the nature of the roots is a guarantee) they do not ripen early; neither is their growth at any time so rapid. Consequently they make a coarser, thicker root growth, which causes many buyers to pass them by as useless; but for late work these may be depended upon as in every way satisfactory, usually producing spikes long and stiff and larger bells, probably, and more numerous, than a fibrous-rooted sample when forced early in the season.

Such samples as these also may be used with every success for retarding until the end of the season, as also may the samples in which a thick, coarse, tap-root predominates. Such crowns as these will practically stand twelve months of ice storage as, on account of their slowness in making growth and coming to maturity, when they have made their growth it is of course more solid and firm. They are more adapted to withstand the deteriorating effects of cold storage than the thin, fibrous-rooted samples, and growers will find that, although both roots and pips, on account of their coarse appearance, look like producing a coarse, ungainly spike, this is not the case, and a first-class spike will be the result, as the weakening process of retarding effectually tones down any coarseness there may be.

For Cold Storage.

For retarding purposes during the first half of the year, these samples also may be used to a certain extent; but for this purpose they are better to possess a little more fiber, a medium sample between the late forcing and the bushy rooted, early forcing being perhaps the most suitable, but in a dry year, in the growing districts, such samples as are described above for late forcing or late retarding, also may be successfully used right through the retarded season; that is, from April until the following June.

The long trailing-rooted samples perhaps would be the nearest approach to a medium sample suitable for early retarded use, although this is a sample of which little bulk is usually harvested.

For Pot Work.

Valley, to be flowered and sold in pots, requires a big crop of foliage with a corresponding lot of strong, large-belled spikes, thrown well above the foliage. Perhaps the most suitable for this purpose are the samples with heavy, thick, abundant, fibrous bushy roots such as grown on rich, heavily-manured, sandy loam, but the question of getting the spikes well above the foliage, will demand more skill in growing, than the aid of any particular sample, as such result depends above all upon light, air and temperature during blooming.

Samples to Avoid.

The big bud and the black, peaty samples must also be mentioned; the former are those pips which have a slight swelling or shoulder toward the top of the pip caused by a premature grown bell or bells that have slightly swelled during the dormant state. Such growths appear in full bloom, during forcing, some days before the whole spike is developed. If the growth be acute, it will rot away and not develop further, causing a lot of cleaning of the lower bells when bunching for market and thus causing the spike to be only second-rate, although the remaining bells are usually of exceptional size and quality, as the fact of the premature growth occurring is only the result of excessive vigor in the crown and roots. These big bud pips are found only on the heavy, rich clay or loam-grown samples, and such as have thick, stubby roots. The swelling need never be mistaken for the natural plump form of a good crown, as it will be found on one side only, and will give the crown an unshapely appearance. Some experts can handle these big crowns so as to make a first-class spike after the rotten bottom bell is cleaned off, and of course they are fine where a large quantity of foliage is required, but they are best left to an expert.

With black, peaty samples it is difficult to name their most useful purposes, although some experts can make good spikes of them, but many growers in England avoid them entirely, and like the former samples, they are best left to an expert. In a dry season like the present they will probably be successful for late forcing.

In these notes, I am quoting the experience of one of our oldest and biggest English growers, who is now passing through his thirty-second year and annually blooms some three and a half million crowns, coupled with my own experience, which is gathered from having represented in the United Kingdom and other parts of the world one of the largest German exporters, and I annually sell for my firm four millions or more crowns. By this I think the foregoing notes may be considered about correct, although from my own experience I imagine they will differ materially from the experience of many American growers. In valley growing, no hard and fast rule can be laid down, as so much depends on the methods of culture, and where one makes a success another under similar circumstances makes a failure. H. AMBURGER.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Winter Preparations.

A little forethought and provision now, before cold weather sets in, will greatly facilitate operations later, when the rush is on. Soil will be needed in which to pot young stock. For this purpose there is nothing better than well decomposed sod without addition of manure or fertilizer of any kind. Secure a liberal supply and place where it will be of easy access. There is no need to take up valuable room in a building, but locate the pile in the open, where water will not collect. Build the heap in conical form, cover with leaves, straw or hay to partially exclude frost, and finish with old boards to shed rain and hold the undercovering.

The propagating bench may need overhauling, or perhaps a new one is to be built. In any event, now is a good time to put this end of the business in running order.

Cleanliness is of supreme importance in everything connected with propagation. Whitewash and elbow-grease will accomplish wonders in this direction.

Continued use of the brick-bottomed bench leads me to renew my recommendation of its employment in propagating. It is admitted that the ordinary board bottom will answer, but why not have something better? The best is none too good.

Give the matter of sand for the cutting bench due attention. Make sure the supply is free from foreign matter and store where it will be free from contamination, like the soil, outside with it.

I never could accept the theory that stem-rot obtained its start or owed its existence to certain conditions in the cutting bench, and for that reason have not advocated sterilization of the sand as a profitable operation. Unlike the cooking of soil, no harm will result, but in eliminating any objectionable matter or guarding against any undesirable condition, we have followed perhaps more primitive but less expensive methods, without cause for regret.

Mention of the above in passing is made in connection with the advice to store propagating sand outside. This subject and that of the brick-bottomed bench will be taken up later.

General Notes.

Any stock that is not at this time growing vigorously can hardly be expected to pay its keep this season. This may be the case with some new sort being tried this year for the first time. There are many things a recently introduced variety has to contend with, that need not influence it when under your care from start to finish. Do not judge too hastily. Give the best of care, with the view of obtaining vigor in order that the plants may furnish strong cuttings at propagating time.

I do not advise rooting cuttings this early, if for no other reason than that the parent stock is not as yet mature. As a rule, when the shortest days are past is time enough, there being, of course, the usual exceptions.

In disbudding, the cuttings at the base of the stem otherwise left to furnish cuttings can at this time be removed with advantage. GEO. S. OSBORN.

MAKING A BEGINNING.

I have a house 38x80 planted to lettuce that I want to use for carnations next year. It will be ready for planting about May 20. When would you plant? What varieties would be best in the several colors? I want varieties that will produce. The house has solid beds. M. W. W.

If your house is built so that you have plenty of ventilation and you can get it ready to plant by May 20, I would advise you to plant it at that time from pots. By getting your cuttings in good time you can get them into 3-inch pots by planting time and ought to have splendid stock by fall.

As to varieties, you must learn from experience what you will be able to handle best and what your trade wants. I would advise you to plant several varieties in each color this year and then select for another season what seem desirable. In white Lady Bountiful, The Belle, Queen, Vesper and White Perfection, all are splendid varieties and profitable. In light pink, Enchantress seems to succeed almost everywhere, other varieties in that color being overshadowed by its fine size and good habits. In dark pink Mrs. Thos. Lawson is the most grown. Helen Goddard and Candace are being looked to by many to give relief from the worries that go with growing Lawson. Rose-pink Enchantress will be as good as a medium pink as Enchantress is in its color. In red we grow G. H. Crane and Flambeau. Robt. Craig, Victory and J. E. Haines all are promising, and it might pay you to try some of them. In crimson, Harlowarden and H. Fenn are the leaders. In varie-gated, Mrs. Patten and Variegated Lawson lead.

There are many other splendid varieties, not so well known. Some of them are fully as profitable and some of them might suit you the finest kind. So while I can name over to you the varieties that are most generally grown, it is for you to find out which are the ones that will best succeed under your local conditions and which are best suited to your purpose. If you mean to dispose of your blooms at retail locally, then I would advise you to grow a wide range of colors and to plant white, light pink and bright pink in equal quantities and to divide the other fourth between scarlet, crimson and variegated. You will soon learn your needs along that line, too, from experience. A. F. J. B.

RUST.

We enclose some leaves from our carnation plants covered in places with a blister-like breaking out and a black, smut-like substance. The Adonis are troubled most, but an occasional leaf like these is found on other varieties. The health of the plants so far does not seem to be injured, but we should like to know what it is, if there is danger of it hurting the plants, and if so what to do for it. We noticed a few leaves like this last year, but it got no worse. G. P. K.

The leaves you sent were badly affected with the common carnation rust. While we do not fear this disease these days, as we did a few years ago when we did not know how to handle it, yet it is not a desirable thing to have on one's place. Some varieties are subject to it, while others are seldom attacked, but all are more or less liable to contract it. Adonis has always been a special favorite of this disease.

Rust, like many other diseases, requires moisture to be active and will remain inactive when kept quite dry. It also will attack plants when they are weakened through a check of some kind, or when growth is less vigorous than usual. Pick off what leaves are affected and burn them. Then dust the plants with dry-slaked lime and sulphur in equal portions and do not syringe for several days. After syringing dust them again, and keep this up until the plants are clean. The idea is to keep the foliage and the atmosphere as dry as is possible, keeping an eye open, however, for red spider, etc. A. F. J. B.

THRIPS.

Please state what causes the carnation buds to rot on the inside before the flower opens. P. K.

The most frequent cause of carnation buds rotting instead of unfolding is thrips. They get into the bud before the petals begin to unfold and by puncturing them here and there cause shriveling instead of development. In time moisture gathers inside the calyx and causes the tissue to decay. If you will examine closely you will find that it is not really a bud that is rotting. While in the bud state, if development is normal, moisture will seldom cause decay. The crippled petals will develop as much as the injury will allow, and then decay, but not until practically the bloom has developed.

To find this pest take off a bud that is in the earliest stages, an old, rotted one will not do. Pull the petals apart and look sharp for a small insect a sixteenth of an inch long, as thick as a thread, and of a cream or brown color. They are quite lively and you must look sharp.

Perhaps you will notice white spots on the petals of some of the blooms that do develop. If you do, then you may be sure your trouble is caused by thrips, and you must get after it vigorously as it is a hard customer to get rid of. Get in a supply of one of the tobacco extracts and spray your plants regularly until you are rid of them. Use according to directions in regard to strength and for several weeks apply it every second morning. When you see that the plants are getting clean you can reduce to two or even one application each week. Be sure you keep it up regularly, once each week, even after you have the plants clean, in order to keep them clean not only of thrips but of aphids as well. During the winter is the best time to eradicate them, as they do not breed so rapidly as in warm weather. If by spring many of them are on your plants you will have trouble ahead. So do not let up until you get them all; persistency is the word. A. F. J. B.

LIME FOR BENCHES.

I have given my carnation beds a light sprinkling of air-slaked lime a few times during each season for the last few years, but now air-slaked lime is hard to get in my locality. I can buy a prepared lime, White Rock Finish, which is used for putting on the hard finish in houses, for about the same price as air-slaked lime or good lime, and to buy the latter would require considerable time to slake. Now I don't know whether this prepared lime contains something which may be injurious to the plants, although the dealer says it is good for all growing crops. Have any of your readers used it? H. B.

I do not know what is used in the manufacture of the prepared lime which you speak of and would hesitate to use it extensively until I had an analysis of it. You could use a small quantity and note the effects and in that way find out how it will affect the plants.

All this is unnecessary if you can buy ordinary lime. We do not consider that it pays to buy air-slaked lime, even though you get it for a few cents less on the bushel. A bushel of fresh lime will almost double itself in bulk in slaking and you get more for your money when buying it in that shape. You do not need to wait for it to become air-slaked; that will take some little time, especially if the weather is dry. What really causes it to slake is the moisture that is gathered from the air, and so you can hasten the process by sprinkling as much water on it as will cause it to crumble, but not become moist. In this way you can slake it in a day and it will be practically the same as if it had air-slaked. We have done this frequently. A. F. J. B.

THE MIDLOTHIAN PERGOLA.

Neer this is a pergola, or stand, built to view the sports. —Evelyn, Diary, 1654.

However much the purposes of pergolas may have changed in the landscaping of modern days, the one erected at the Midlothian Country Club, just outside of Chicago, seems to fit the lines of Evelyn, for it overlooks the tennis courts.

Be this as it may, the idea of the landscapist was to make a fitting place for the eye to stop after traveling the length of lawn, framed on either side by trees and shrubbery—and to cut off the view of the vegetable garden.

The plans and planting at Midlothian were by B. E. Gage, of the Peterson Nursery, and the pergola, which added some $600 to the sum of the contract, was one of the best features. Winding walks through the plantations surrounding the lawn pass through the pergola, which is seventy-two feet long and twelve feet high, made of clear cypress, the lattice roof raised on 10-inch columns. The photograph was made four weeks after planting. At the back quick-growing shrubs and trees are planted to afford assistance to the vines, which are to cover the chicken wire back of pergola. At the front of the columns are ornamental light wire trellises, at the foot of which are planted more vines, clematises, honeysuckles, and some climbing roses. Before the plants had made scarcely any growth the pergola was one of the favorite resorts of the club members.

Although in eastern landscape work the use of pergolas is common enough, this is thought to be the most pretentious one in the middle west.

A QUESTION ON BULBS.

Please tell us how long Dutch hyacinths and French Romans for forcing should be buried before bringing into light. S. S. C.

There is a great difference between what is known as the Dutch hyacinth and the Roman hyacinth, and a little explanation of that difference may not be out of place before I answer the specific questions.

The Roman hyacinth and the Paper White narcissus, both important bulbs to the American florist, are grown in the south of France or in Italy, where they can be planted early, where the climate is warm, and the summers are hot and dry, and so these bulbs mature early, and after two or three months' rest it is not difficult to induce them by artificial means to flower again. With the Holland grown bulbs it is entirely different. It is a climate perhaps similar to that of New York state, but not so variable. We know by the pictures of skaters on the canals that it is a steady cold winter. The flat land is intensely rich, and kept so by quantities of animal manure that would be inconceivable to an American farmer, and so the Holland produces a splendid bulb of hyacinth and tulip and the hardy class of narcissus, but his fields of bulbs are green and growing many weeks after the bulbs of southern France are matured and resting. All bulbs, roots or shrubs need some reasonable period of rest. If it is not given an attempt to force them into active growth will be abortive. The difference in time of ripening of the bulbs of sunny France and that of cooler and later Holland will be about the same as the difference in flowering in our greenhouses.

And now for the question: Roman hyacinths are received at the end of July and early August, and if put into flats or pots at once should not be brought into the greenhouse in less than eight weeks. Then they can be forced into flower by the middle of November. The Dutch hyacinths should be potted by the middle of October, buried or in the dark until the middle of January.

If you want an answer to your questions so you can instruct your customers, say Roman hyacinths should be buried eight weeks in early fall, less as we approach their natural flowering time, and Dutch hyacinths twelve weeks. If you are seeking advice for your own cultivation, then a better rule than any given number of days or weeks is to examine the flats or pots and, if there is not an abundance of roots, then don't attempt to force them, for without plenty of roots hyacinths, tulips or narcissi will not force, and the attempt to do so has been the cause of many a seedsman being wrongfully blamed.

Let me say in conclusion that the Roman hyacinth is a valuable florists' flower, and is useful and desirable from November on till Easter. For the Dutch hyacinth there is no demand before early February, and then a few in 4-inch pots fill the demand. There are other and prettier plants in midwinter. W. S.

CEMENT BENCHES.

Some years ago I erected some concrete or cement benches as an experiment, says H. A. Siebrecht in the Rural New Yorker. I put up temporary wooden benches, using wire mesh the full width of the bench, and put on two inches of concrete, putting up also wooden forms for posts or uprights, and running the cement in these forms to support the bench. We left cracks or openings in the concrete for drainage. We used iron pipe bearers every four feet, these resting on the cement uprights or posts. The benches are substantial and durable, lasting for years without repairs. The only trouble is that if great care and judgment are not used the plants standing on the benches are easily overwatered or get soggy, and they are not considered as good for planting out stock as are the wooden benches or the terra cotta or tile tables. However, a great many cement or concrete benches are now being constructed throughout the west, more so than in the east. I have just learned of one large range of glass, six houses, 500 feet long each, having concrete benches. These are constructed in much the same manner; temporary wooden forms are put up with a false bottom, and light steel frames used, the cement or concrete being cast or made in slabs or large pieces; three posts are constructed of cement, one on the back edge, one in front and one in the middle, thus making a very substantial construction. For ordinary width of table, say three to three and one-third feet, one and one-half inches in thickness will be plenty, but for the wider tables, two inches in thickness is preferable. This construction of bench need not necessarily interfere with any piping underneath the tables. As lumber is getting scarcer and higher in price from year to year, either concrete or tile and other material of like endurance will necessarily have to be used, and no doubt a number of varieties of inventions will be brought out by the necessity.

HOUSE OF DENDROBIUMS.

Dendrobium Phalaenopsis Schroederianum is one of the most useful of cut flower orchids, its long, graceful sprays of bloom being splendidly adapted to the purposes of first-class trade. It is an autumn bloom, but the duration is considerable. The accompanying illustration is from a photograph supplied by Thomas Knight and shows a part of the really remarkable display of this orchid recently to have been seen at the establishment of the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J. That it shows only a part of the display is explained by the fact that the camera stood halfway down the house, which contained in all some 1,400 plants. As many as eighteen to twenty flowers were carried on a considerable number of spikes. The plants all were imported last year. Some fine things have flowered among them.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The full tide of chrysanthemums is now on and as a consequence the market is demoralized. Trade has been fair during the week, but a good deal of stock has had to be carried over each day. Mums sell all the way from $3 per hundred to $3 and $4 per dozen, only a select few reaching the latter figures. The quality of flowers is not what it used to be, as Waban Conservatories, Sim and other growers have dropped out of the business. The kinds seen in quantity are Ivory, Bonaffon, Jerome Jones, Appleton, Balfour, Eaton and Nagoya. None of the newer sorts seems to be popular commercially except Jeanne Nonin, of which some fine flowers will be forthcoming later.

Roses are now in oversupply at previous week's prices. Quite a few have to go at $1 per hundred. The quality of Beauty, Richmond, Wellesley and Chatenay is excellent, while Brides and Maid show steady improvement. Carnations run from $1 to $3, a few fancies making $4. Violets are abundant at 35 cent to 50 cents, some extra singles making 60 cents to 75 cents. Sweet peas have appeared at $1 per hundred. Antirrhinums make $3 to $4 per hundred. Callas and Easter lilies bring $1.50 per dozen. The first Paper Whites made $4 per hundred. Cattleya labiata is getting scarce and brings better prices. Some Cypripedium insigne are in, selling at $10 to $12 per hundred. Valley sells at $3 to $5. Green goods remain about the same.

Various Notes.

There promises to be a record-breaking attendance at the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, November 20. Great interest attaches to the election of officers and a lively contest for some of the posts seems likely. Some good exhibits will be forthcoming and other attractive features are being arranged.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society occurs November 17. W. W. Rawson's candidacy for the presidency as an independent will enliven matters. Mr. Rawson was a candidate in 1904, but withdrew in favor of A. F. Estabrook, who has proved an excellent president.

E. O. Orpet lectured on "The Relation of the Honey Bee to Horticulturists" before the Worcester County Bee Association in Horticultural hall, Worcester, November 12.

E. J. Shaylor, of Wellesley Hills, has just received a large importation of new peonies from Dessert and other noted French growers and hopes to have some good novelties to show next season.

Welch Bros. are receiving some splendid Beauty, Richmond and other roses, valley, chrysanthemums, etc., from their numerous shippers. They are sending out more flowers than ever in their history at this season.

Present indications point to a good call for single and pompon chrysanthemums next season. For many purposes they are infinitely superior to the big blooms, and wideawake florists would do well to grow some in both pots and benches.

Another moth pest, supposed to be of Japanese origin, has been located in Dorchester. It is thought that freed from its natural enemies it may prove as destructive as the brown tail and gypsy moths, against which the winter campaign is now commencing.

Our local delegation to the Chicago show was duly impressed with its magnitude and speak highly of the exhibits, more particularly the roses.

A very successful chrysanthemum show was held at Hingham November 9. Miss Abby A. Bradley, A. A. Speare, and R. W. E. Vining were the chief exhibitors. Mrs. Cora C. S. Jones lectured.

The first Paper White narcissi of the season from H. W. Vose, of Hyde Park, appeared at Park street market November 8.

W. H. Elliott is having grand success with Richmond rose this year and is sending in some splendid blooms of that variety.

The big football game November 10 between Harvard and the Carlisle Indians caused a run on crimson flowers, mums bringing $3 per dozen.

E. Sutermeister is at Portland on a visit to his son.

The bowling match to have been played November 8 between the wholesalers and Waban Conservatories was forfeited by the latter, they failing to appear.

We regret to report the death of W. S. Wilson, the Wellesley florist, who died of pneumonia on November 9 after only a few days' sickness. Mr. Wilson visited the market on November 3 and was apparently in his customary health. He was a good grower and will be much missed.

W. A. Hastings, salesman for A. H. Hews & Co., has returned from a successful business trip in the south.

Mrs. George Cartwright, wife of the genial treasurer of the Park street market, is visiting in Philadelphia.

J. J. McCormack has leased the rear of his store to W. W. Nisbet for the wholesaling of all kinds of wreathing and roping.

William Aylward, son of M. Aylward, the Woburn rose grower, succeeds J. S. Manter as salesman for Anderson & Williams.

William Nicholson is marketing good Nagoya, Pennsylvania and other mums. Some of his new ones from E. G. Hill Co. are promising.

Helen Goddard carnation is doing finely with S. J. Goddard, the raiser, and other growers, and sells on sight.

William A. Walke, of Salem, is marketing excellent Lorraine begonias and cyclamens. W. N. CRAIG.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Business has been fairly brisk the last week, there being a good demand for choice stock of all kinds. Beauties are selling well and the quality is much better. Chrysanthemums are holding up well in the fancy sorts. A number of weddings last week made quite a demand for good white. Valley is a little more plentiful, but the price remains firm, some of the best bringing $5 per hundred. Carnations are coming in much better and command a fair price. Brides and Maids are holding their own in the better grades, while the smaller sizes are hard to move at any price. Violets are scarce. Only a limited number find their way into the market, and these find a ready sale, the price being much better.

Various Notes.

The Germantown Horticultural Society held its chrysanthemum meeting last Monday evening. The plants and flowers exhibited were the subject of Secretary Redles' informal talk.

Dr. Wilson, of Art Museum fame, is running the Singerly Greenhouses at Gwynedd, Pa. His grapes command a high price in the local market. His flowers, including Richmond and Killarney roses and adiantum ferns, are handled by Edward Reid.

C. F. Knorr & Bro., Lawndale, Pa., expert tea rose growers, believe that Brides and Maids are fully one month later this year.

The Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society opened its annual chrysanthemum show at Jocelyn hall last Tuesday evening, continuing all day Wednesday. This exhibition is made possible by the liberality of a number of flower lovers at the Hill. The exhibits are always creditable, representing the best efforts of the most skilful private growers in that locality.

Eugene Bernheimer and W. E. McKissick were among the first wholesalers to receive regular consignments of sweet peas. The variety is Christmas, pink and white, now a staple in this market in the fall as well as in winter.

Isaac Mather, of Wyncote, a centurion, cut his straight ticket at last week's election to vote for Joseph Heacock. Quite a compliment.

The annual chrysanthemum show at Horticultural hall at Fairmount park is proving as popular as ever.

On November 7, 8 and 9, J. J. Habermehl's Sons gave a unique exhibit in the Walnut street corridor of the Bellevue-Stratford hotel of flowers and floral art.

M. Rice & Co. report an increase in their business this year so far of one-third over that of last year for the same period.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. anticipate moving about December 1. They have doubled their force.

W. E. McKissick is handling pompons in three different colors.

A. Campbell lost his mother last week. Mr. Campbell has the sympathy of his many friends. PHIL.

Current Comment.

Business is keeping up fine. The daily demand, with an occasional large funeral thrown in, makes stock move lively. Carnations are scarce and will be for a while. Roses are coming in fast, and mums, of course, are it just now.

At Court Kaminski's, on Lagrange street, the carnations are fine but not in large crop. He has some cyclamens that he can be proud of. He reports business as being all right.

John Gratopp, on James street, has the same trouble with his Lawsons which he had last year. They are better than a year ago, but not good enough to suit him. He will tear out a lot and plant lettuce in place of them. The other varieties are nearly all good and will bring a good crop.

At Heintz's, in West Toledo, I saw some of the best carnations and roses in this district. One house, mostly Enchantress that had been planted from pots, is in full crop, with stems that cannot be beaten for this season of the year. One center bench of poinsettias is elegant. A big batch of stevia, of which some are beginning to blossom, is in the best of shape. I understand that George A. Heintz has sold his West Toledo farm to his nephew, Harry, from Jacksonville, Ill., and the transfer will be made when G. A. Heintz comes back from Mt. Clemens, where he is taking the baths. G. A. Heintz retains the store on Summit street and will get his supply of stock from the farm as before.

At Mr. Honberger's, in West Toledo, the Lawsons are also acting badly, while the other varieties are all right.

At Mrs. Suder's Cherry street place one always can come to see a load or two of funeral work in the making.

The Market.

Business was quiet last week and chrysanthemums and carnations are in oversupply, there being a large demand for good Beauties and large mums. The prices are unchanged, except violets, which are of better quality, and find ready sale at $1 and $1.25 per hundred. The stores all seem to be busy, especially with funeral work, there being some good orders.

Newspaper Advertisements That Brought Business Last Year.

ed of orchids and lily of the valley. Hall & Robinson had the decorations, using white chrysanthemums and American Beauty roses.

Hall & Robinson had a novel table decoration in their window for the king's birthday, consisting of a crown of Richmond roses on a base of white chrysanthemums and lily of the valley, with small silk flags. It caught the eyes of the passersby, and one gentleman insisted on buying the whole thing for a banquet decoration, and Mr. Hall had to fill his window with a handsome vase of American Beauty roses.

The Wright Floral Co. has opened a branch in the Hamilton department store, which looks as though all the department stores would open floral departments.

D. J. Sinclair has added a horse and wagon to his staff, which looks as though business is increasing. Mr. Gray, the manager, found this was necessary in order to have prompt deliveries.

White & Co. are drawing some of the uptown trade. Last Monday they had one banquet order which took over 200

Beauties. The boutonnieres were of violets and lilies of the valley.

C. Campbell is cutting some fine mums at his greenhouses at Lachine, also some good carnations. W. G.

THANKSGIVING ADVERTISING.

Thanksgiving is one of the seasons when a little special advertising is in order. In these days of general prosperity, few Thanksgiving dinner-tables will be without their flowers. Many people will follow the injunction set forth in one of the advertisements reproduced herewith: "When the plans for the edibles are complete, decide on what kind of flowers are wanted and call up No. 124." The accompanying advertisements are reproduced to show what some progressive florists did in the line of Thanksgiving advertising last year. It does not take a large or expensive space to make a satisfactory showing if some attention is given to the matter which goes into the advertisement. Give the subject thought before the time to act. Print an attractive advertisement for the week before Thanksgiving and you will see its influence in your sales.

FILLS A LONG-FELT WANT.

Among the many appliances that are continually being placed on the market for perfecting the heating of greenhouses none seems to have been received with greater favor than the Morehead steam trap. The trap will take water from the condensing surfaces of steam heating systems and automatically return it to the boiler as feed water, filling the dual capacity of steam trap and feed water pump. This is accomplished regardless of the position of the returns, whether above or below the water line in the boiler. Once installed it requires no further attention, but at once shows a saving in fuel, labor and repairs, often beyond the expectation of the purchaser. The manufacturers say that some millions of greenhouse glass are now being cared for by their traps and many of the largest growers about Chicago are using them.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Current Comment.

Though the warmth and sunshine have brought out the mums rather faster than usual, the demand has been about equal and the better grades are kept cleaned up. The flower shows seem to be bearing fruit in the increased demand by the public for this flower. Carnations and roses are better both in quality and quantity.

Bertermann Bros. had an opening in the shape of a chrysanthemum show at their store. The window was especially fine, one-half being decorated with American Beauties and the other half had an immense imported vase filled with yellow mums.

E. A. Nelson, who has been suffering from an attack of blood poisoning, is recovering. He had the misfortune to get in contact with poison ivy while fishing.

A. Wiegand, who lately returned from Honolulu, speaks most highly of the climate and scenery of the Sandwich Islands. He stayed in San Francisco a few days on his return journey.

At the last meeting of the Florists' Society it was decided to have a flower show in connection with the annual meeting in January. It is hoped that firms having anything new will send some flowers. The date of the meeting will be announced later. S.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was ideal as to weather, but the market was weak. It was high tide on the chrysanthemum river, and all its tributaries seemed to empty into the New York market. Prices dropped below real values. In consequence, every retail store was decorated, every wholesale house was full, and the street corners were made veritable flower shows by the gentry of the pavements.

Roses are lower and better, which seems an unfair condition, and one that weather alone can remedy. All varieties of cut flowers feel the overabundance of chrysanthemums. Carnations have fallen. Valley and lilies remain in statu quo, but violets and orchids, if any change is apparent, are stiffening and doing better. The best violets touched $1 occasionally last week, and will have no difficulty in holding at that figure as Thanksgiving approaches.

On Tuesday the market still was depressed, owing to the enormous receipts of chrysanthemums, but a great volume of business nevertheless must be done where such large supplies are handled. Orchids are becoming scarcer and prices are hardening. The weather, after last week's warmth, now is clear and cold.

Club Meeting.

The banner meeting of the New York Florists' Club took place Monday evening, November 12, 250 being present, including over 100 ladies. Owing to the illness of the president, Patrick O'Mara occupied the chair.

The nominating committee announced the following candidates: For president, Charles H. Totty and John B. Nugent, Jr.; vice-president, A. J. Manda and Harry May; secretary, John Young and Alexander J. Guttman; treasurer, Charles Weathered and L. W. Wheeler; trustees, John Scott, Walter Sheridan, Julius Roehrs, Jr., M. V. Hallock, John Donaldson and Charles Lenker. The election will take place at the December meeting.

Andrew Wilson and L. Poelson were elected members, and Messrs. Savoy, Meyer, Seren, Darlington and Neihoff were nominated.

Resolutions on the deaths of P. R. B. Pierson and George Burnett were read, and a committee appointed on the death of the father of Philip Kessler.

The exhibits were numerous and excellent in quality. There were many vases of Rose-pink Enchantress, Victory and Robert Craig. The Cottage Gardens exhibited 100 seedlings and novelties. A vase of White Duckham came from C. H. Totty. Appleton, Morton F. Plant and Mrs. Henry Partridge were shown by H. Turner, gardener for Howard Gould. Beacon came from Nelson Fisher. Duckham, Enguehard, Cheltoni, Nellie Pockett, Richardson and Mrs. West were staged by Mr. McDonald, of Somerville, gardener to J. B. Duke. The new rose, Aurora, came from Paul Niehoff, of Leighton, Pa., and two fine specimen Whitmani in 8-inch pots from Barrows & Son, of Whitman, Mass. The report of the committee was complimentary to every exhibit. The exhibitors generously distributed the flowers to the ladies at adjournment.

The musical program under the management of J. B. Nugent was varied and entertaining, lasting until nearly midnight. President Scott came in, lame and late, with his Clan McDonald Glee Club of fifteen members and many a Scotch melody was heard from this splendid organization. The list of lady and gentleman songsters is a long one. Included were Misses Howard, Pollock, Hafer, Tolgay and Cooper. The Misses Burnie gave their pretty dances to the music of the bagpipes. Miss Barnett gave a recitation with great power. Messrs. Russell, Kelley, Lusk, Wilson and the Rickards brothers added song, dancing and instrumental music to the grand ensemble. It was an evening creditable to everybody taking part, and one long to be remembered. The catering was fully up to standard; there was enough and to spare.

Nelson Fisher and Messrs. Patten and Barrows were the eastern visitors, and Arthur Cowee, the gladiolus specialist, made his first visit.

American Institute Show.

The New York flower show this year was multum in parvo—much beauty and merit in few accommodations. The Berkeley lyceum is a doll's house as far as a flower show is concerned, but all the big halls were engaged and so the management was forced to make the best of it. Good prizes rewarded the exhibitors, and large crowds were in attendance all the time. There was no room for decorative or foliage plants.

C. H. Totty made a grand showing with his chrysanthemum novelties. All the familiar names of other years appear in the prize list, and some new to fame.

Peter Duff had the lion's share of space, and deserved it for the magnificent plants he staged. The Cottage Gardens Co. exhibited its grand new varieties, Alma Ward, Mrs. Ward, Beacon, Mrs. Tom Harvey, also Peary, Aurora, Evangeline and Robert Craig. F. R. Pierson Co. had a fine vase of Winsor, for which a greenhouse costing $15,000 was erected as a token of its present and prospective value.

Lager & Hurrell had a table of assorted orchids of the usual beauty and value. Schuneman's violets were on top as usual.

Thomas Meehan & Son and John N. May were there with a great showing of hardy mums, and L. A. Noe, of Madison, carried off the honors and the ducats for his roses.

The judges were Peter Duff, John Heeremans, L. A. Martin and James Ballantyne.

Various Notes.

Special preparations are being made by the retailers to increase public interest in presentation offerings for Thanksgiving, great day of reunions and family feasting. Out-of-town florists are reminded that telegraph orders sent to any of the firms listed in the REVIEW's retail directory will receive prompt and careful attention.

At the flower shows orchids have been the centers of attraction. There is no doubt of the steady rise in their popularity, and many are awakening to the ease with which they can be profitably grown. McManus issues a monthly bulletin that expresses accurately the condition of the market and its prospects.

The Orange flower show was well managed by Joseph A. Manda. Hale had charge of the cut flower department. He has a splendid store and conservatory. His two sons manage the retail business, while Mr. Hale looks after the growing end of the enterprise. George Smith, whose graduation from private gardening to retail work occurred a couple of years ago, has built up here a wonderful success.

Charles Millang has rented the premises at 1 West Twenty-eighth street. Here he will have more room for his large retinospora and other importations. His large stables will also be located here. Mr. Millang had the misfortune to have several thousand bush boxwood badly injured by heating on the steamer.

The sales of evergreens in New York this fall have been enormous. Every large hotel and apartment house in the city is profusely decorated. Large shipments have been made to other cities.

Last Friday Frank Millang had the misfortune to break his ankle. He will be laid on the shelf until Thanksgiving.

George Saltford is justly proud of his record at Poughkeepsie, where he took all the first prizes on violets. But it is only what one might expect from the man who wrote "How to Grow Violets" and taught the whole farming community in Dutchess county an easy way of getting rich.

Reed & Keller are never happy unless they have a new invention on the way. Their last was the cycas leaf holder, a wonderfully popular and practical thing that is selling fast. Now comes a pot-hanger, a simple wire device for hanging pots straight or at an angle, and will be on the market in two weeks.

The sympathy of the trade is extended August Millang in the death of his wife, November 5. That she was universally beloved was attested by many beautiful floral tokens.

Russin & Hanfling are making a specialty of fancy baskets in odd designs, with tin lining, for plants, which will be used largely at Thanksgiving and Christmas. Their factory is right in the wholesale cut flower district.

M. A. Bowe's wagon, horse and driver had an interview with a street car and an ambulance last week. The wagon was destroyed and the driver slightly injured. The accident occurred in front of Myer's store on Madison avenue.

Down at Elliott & Sons the auctions go merrily on, hardy roses and evergreens now having the call. The sales will continue until Christmas.

Joe Leikens, fat and saucy after his summer at Newport, and with his perennial smile, is moving his place of residence this week into his own three-story and basement on East Forty-ninth street. He has just installed some grand palms in his Belmont hotel branch.

Warendorff, of the Ansonia, has charge of the big Goldsmith-Ewing wedding at Sherry's. The canopy used is a bower of Killarney. The decorations are elaborate. Last Tuesday at Delmonico's they decorated for over 500 guests. Mrs. Warendorff, "the mother of florists," has just celebrated her seventieth birthday. She is in good health, and will spend the winter with her daughter in California.

A. Warendorff on Saturday sent out some beautiful funeral designs, a $100 standing heart of roses and white mums being especially artistic.

David Clarke's Sons' big store is crowded with handsome plants from their own greenhouses, and weddings are booked far ahead into the holidays. All days look alike in this busy center of upper Broadway, where the big apartment palaces are thick.

Donohoe has added to his conveniences at 2 West Twenty-ninth street, made necessary by the amount of boxwood and window decorative material he carries for this rapidly increasing trade. Lieutenant Geraghty is kept hustling designing new decorative work for weddings.

A. M. Henshaw, at 52 West Twenty-eighth street, has added space for his increasing business.

A. L. Young & Co. have at last completed their improvements and the enlargement of their space gives them a handy store.

Another retail store has been opened on Fifth avenue near Forty-second street, a gentleman from classic Greece wooing the goddess of chance in this swellest of the swell sections of the city.

Traendly & Schenck will continue their daily mum shows for four weeks, commencing at 8 a. m. Large congregations have been attending and the two presiding elders are as busy as if it were campaigning season all the time.

J. K. Allen already has booked good orders for Thanksgiving. With his big force of helpers and his shipping trade he manages to dispose of his immense receipts to good advantage every day.

F. L. Moore's Bridesmaids, Henry Hentz's Beauties and Queen of Edgely from several growers are handled by Mr. Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, in the Coogan building, but he says these are only a drop in the bucket of their daily sales.

William H. Kuebler's prosperity in Brooklyn is gratifying to himself and his friends. With his two brothers, a livelier trio would be hard to locate.

Henry Crawbuck complains that shipments of wild smilax do not keep pace with the demand. He handles everything in green goods.

M. C. Bonnet, of Bonnet & Blake, is slowly recovering from his long illness and hopes to be soon on deck again, where the growing business of the firm makes his presence needed.

The Geller Florist Supply Co. has added much space lately to its store and has three floors occupied. Many attractive novelties are among their importations.

Perkins & Schumann need more room and contemplate adding a storage gallery to their conveniences.

L. Wertheimer Co., the Japanese importers, have a store filled with vases, novelties and Japanese art well worth a careful inspection.

This is the season of the year when the membership of the National Florists' Board of Trade grows most rapidly. The general commercial agencies are of little help in handling florists' accounts.

Siebrecht & Son are in their new store on East Thirty-eighth street, near the corner of Fifth avenue, and have fitted it up handsomely.

C. W. Eberman has purchased the fixtures in the store lately occupied by Julius Lang, at 53 West Thirtieth street and rented the premises for a wholesale plant business, opening at once.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

CINCINNATI

The Market.

Last week brought a glut of mums. They came by the thousands and of all sizes. As a consequence the price dropped many notches. I am glad to state that there was a good clean-up on Saturday, and Sunday found most of the wholesale houses pretty well sold out. Several large funerals for early Monday morning made a heavy demand, and everything, especially of white, sold out. Small mums were in heavy demand and averaged good prices, in fact the smaller ones sold best throughout the week; it was the larger ones that had to take a back seat.

Carnations are rapidly assuming their proper place in the market, owing to the increased numbers to be had. Last week brought out a good cut and they sold out in fine shape and at good prices. It now looks as if there will be a good supply right along.

Roses sold poorly. The market did not seem to have any go in it and even good quality did not bring buyers for them. Brides were in heavy supply, but Beauties were scarce.

With the present cold snap we can look forward to a shortening of nearly all varieties of flowers.

Various Notes.

A quorum was not present at the meeting of the Florists' Society, which was to have been held Saturday evening. A little social gathering was held. The talk centered about the hunting season, which will open next Thursday. Most of the boys are figuring on getting out the first day so as to be sure of getting something.

Among visitors this week were Dr. Howald, of the Atlanta Floral Co., Atlanta, Ga. B. Eschner also was paying the trade a visit. Mr. and Mrs. Hensly, of Knightstown, Ind., spent a few days here and visited many of the various plants.

E. G. Gillett was away from his office most of last week. His mother, now nearly 80 years old, who has been with him in this city for several months, is very ill and it is not expected that she can survive many days.

John Fries had a mum before the Chrysanthemum Society committee Saturday. It was a white, the result of a cross between Ivory and E. G. Gillett. Nathan Smith & Son, of Adrian, Mich., displayed two.

Several of the local craft were in Chicago to attend the flower show and report it to have been a glowing success.

C. J. OHMER.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

The Market.

There is always about three weeks every year when the chrysanthemum absolutely predominates the flower market, and we are now in the midst of that season. Even American Beauty roses have for the moment been neglected. It is really wonderful the way the prices of chrysanthemums have been maintained, both at wholesale and retail.

All the trade are expecting and already making preparations for a great Thanksgiving business.

Various Notes.

Our chrysanthemum show was held November 13 in our new rooms in the Brent building.

The Livingston Seed Co. is holding its chrysanthemum show this week. This exhibition has become a yearly function with them, and while it entails a great deal of work and expense, nevertheless the results obtained are satisfactory. Success for this season is assured, as they have a splendid lot of mums, in all the best sorts, at their greenhouses.

Gustave Ackerman is adding a new house to his already substantial range. Mr. Ackerman makes a specialty of chrysanthemums and lettuce.

The great chrysanthemum show at Chicago attracted much attention here, all the craft following the detailed reports closely. William Graff and A. M. Hills represented Columbus.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. tells us that it has several wedding decorations coming along, especially a large one at the Lincoln apartments, to be wholly of chrysanthemums.

John Peter Menger, who died here last week at the age of 86, was in his younger years head gardener to the Emperor of Germany.

A serious fire occurred November 9 at the plant of the Columbus Pottery Co. The loss was $50,000.

A special winter course has been inaugurated at the Ohio State University in the agricultural department for the first time in the history of the institution. The course will begin January 7 and last ten weeks.

John H. Williams has been making almost a specialty of Robert Halliday chrysanthemums. He retails the blooms at his stand on the Central market at the rate of one, two, three and four for 25 cents. ZERO.

PADUCAH, KY.—Mrs. Luella B. Gilmore, wife of Carl Gilmore, was seriously injured in a runaway accident November 1.

CAMDEN, ME.—Geo. W. Glaentzel has developed a first-class plant and a good business since he started here last spring. He grows cut flowers, making a specialty of bulbous stock.

HINSDALE, MASS.—Large shipments of ferns, evergreens and baled spruce are being sent daily from here to New York and western cities, and the cutting of Christmas trees has begun.

ST. LOUIS.The Market.

The market was much overloaded with almost everything last week and prices were on the downward path. The complaints of slow business were general.

The abundance of chrysanthemums has at last forced the prices down on almost everything, and mums themselves have dropped in price. Extra fine stock goes at $2, while Eatons run to $3 per dozen. Roses were slaughtered, selling for $5 to $10 per thousand. The extra select still hang on to $5 per hundred.

Carnations were too many for the demand for the first time this season. One wholesaler remarked: "The glut is on, the demand slow, so we have got to let them go for whatever they bring."

Violets are not overplentiful, but meet with slow sale. Extra fine lily of the valley is scarce. A few Paper Whites were in last week. They sold well at $4. Callas are coming in. Smilax is plentiful, as are other greens except adiantum.

Club Meeting.

The club held its regular meeting November 8. The attendance was large, attracted by the chrysanthemum blooms on exhibition. Himmer Bros. showed fine blooms of Major Bonnaffon, Col. Appleton and Timothy Eaton. The Bentzen Floral Co. staged Alice Byron, Mrs. Buckbee, Mrs. Perrin and A. J. Balfour. James W. Dunford showed Col. Appleton, Dr. Enguehard, Timothy Eaton and Florence Vaughan. The last named were fine blooms. Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, showed a fine vase of Yellow Eaton. Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., sent a bunch of new varieties, among which Sunburst and Theodore Roosevelt were much admired.

The meeting opened at three o'clock, with President Irish in the chair and all the other officers present. The amendment to the by-laws was adopted by a full vote. State Vice-President William C. Young stated that he could secure better rates to the S. A. F. convention by applying for them early in December, and thought that a delegation of at least forty would attend next year. The trustees were instructed to find a new meeting hall more centrally located.

The president appointed W. C. Young, H. G. Pring and P. Giebel as judges, who made the following report: Twelve white, Himmer Bros. first, on Eaton; J. W. Dunford second, also on Eaton; Bentzen Floral Co. third, on Alice Byron. Twelve yellow, Himmer Bros. first, with Bonnaffon, and second with Appleton; J. W. Dunford third, with Appleton. Twelve pink, Bentzen Floral Co. first, with A. J. Balfour, and second, with Mrs. Perrin; J. W. Dunford third, with Dr. Enguehard. The judges commended Nathan Smith & Son's blooms, which were not for competition, especially Sunburst and Theodore Roosevelt.

The question then came up regarding a big show for next year. After discussion a vote was taken and it was decided to hold such a show and to raise a fund of $10,000. A committee, to consist of Frank A. Weber, A. J. Bentzen and W. C. Smith, was appointed to raise this fund.

The talk of F. A. Weber on "Does It Pay to Advertise?" put the members all in good humor.

Gustave Eggeling, of the Eggeling Floral Co., made application for membership.

W. C. Smith auctioned off the prize-winning blooms, which brought big prices.

Various Notes.

J. J. Kierns, representing H. A. Dreer, Philadelphia, is here this week.

H. C. Irish and W. C. Smith left for Chicago after the club meeting last week. They have returned and report a great show. Charles Kuehn, Vincent Gorley, Frank M. Ellis and George Windler also were visitors at the Chicago show.

Henry Ostertag is taking a great interest in next year's show and says he has already nearly $1,000 subscribed to the guarantee fund.

Frank Vennemann, at Kirkwood, is having fine success with his violets and carnations this year.

Keeper Ratchgood, of Forest park, had a great deal of trouble with fires in the park last week. George Ostertag, the superintendent of parks, spent last week in Chicago on both pleasure and business.

In a marked copy of a Butte, Mont., paper sent by a friend we read an article describing a wedding decoration. There was a misplaced comma which made it read like this: "The chandeliers were hung with smilax and handsomely dressed women, and men passing under looked up with interest."

The free chrysanthemum show at Shaw's Garden opened Monday in a large tent. The crowd came early, and all during the day the garden was crowded.

J. J. B.

CHICAGO.The Great Central Market.

Flower show week was an exceedingly dull one in the wholesale cut flower market. The shipping demand was not active, and the local buying was largely of select stock required by the retailers for their Coliseum displays. This week opened with wintry weather of such disagreeable character that city demand was reduced to stock for decorations ordered in advance. There was no transient trade the first few days of this week. Shipping demand, however, showed much better.

For the last week the market has approached closer to a glut than at any time this season. The chrysanthemum crops are at the top. Growers are not cutting nearly as much as they could, for the market has all that it can consume. Roses are in abundant supply and of splendid quality. Beauties are not quite as plentiful as they were, but crops are just coming on in the other varieties. Red roses are selling well.

For the first time this season there was a waste of carnations last week. The sudden increase in supply, together with exceptionally light demand, left carnations to go to sleep on wholesalers' hands. This week the supply is somewhat reduced by dark weather, and values are more stable, but it appears that there will be no shortage in carnations from this time on.

New York violets are in good supply and selling well. The quality of many of the shipments is superb, although the growers have not yet found any way of shipping the fragrance. Home-grown singles are in light supply.

Calla lilies now have come to the relief of Harrisii and the price on the latter is lower. A few Paper White are available, the advance guard of the great army of bulbous stock which soon will be on the march, and continue in review until after Easter. Valley has been marked up a little in price because of short supplies.

The indoor greens are not in large demand. There is a fair call for wild smilax, and boxwood is in heavy demand. Practically every one is using this green this year, and it no doubt is hurting the sale of bunched indoor stock.

Thanksgiving.

There is every prospect that there will be abundant supplies in all lines for Thanksgiving. The high price of carnations is likely to divert the orders to other items so that there will be enough for all requirements. At any rate he is an exceedingly unwise grower who holds back stock. There are sure to be good prices for a whole week before the holiday and it may be set down as unquestionable that supplies will be so great that pickled stock will have mighty little chance of a sale for Thanksgiving. Don't hold back. Market your stock as ready and you will get the best average.

Various Notes.

On Monday Joseph Ziska completed the purchase of the Weiland and other interests and is now the owner of all the capital stock of the Chicago Rose Co. The corporation will be dissolved but the business continued under the same name, Mr. Ziska giving his attention to the wire work end, and his son, John, looking after the cut flowers. The plant at Libertyville is said to be in first-class shape.

E. C. Amling had the first Paper Whites of the season one day last week.

C. W. McKellar congratulates himself that his table of orchids was about the finest little exhibit at the show last week. From the number of orchids used by the retailers and the interest taken by the crowd it was easy to see that popular appreciation of the orchid is developing rapidly.

It will be recalled that A. R. Ratsch signed a warrant for the arrest of a Mrs. Griffith, who was charged with obtaining money under false pretenses through an advertising scheme. The woman was discharged as innocent, and now threatens suit for damages.

L. Coatsworth and his family returned from Canada November 8.

P. J. Hauswirth again is a grandfather, his daughter, who resides with him, having welcomed a little girl November 3.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is growing no Liberty this year. August Poehlmann says that Liberty stops blooming just when red roses begin to be in demand, but that Richmond begins to give its best cut just when the flowers are wanted.

Calvert & Son, at Lake Forest, are sending the E. F. Winterson Co. some fine cosmos grown under glass.

Peter Reinberg has placed an order for 5,000 cuttings of Rose-pink Enchantress.

Scheiden & Schoos are showing blooms of the fine red seedling carnation at their stand in the market.

The large number of eastern growers who were in Chicago last week said that Chicago is unapproached by the east so far as roses and carnations are concerned, but that the eastern markets have better chrysanthemums.

Peter Reinberg's team ran away on Wabash avenue last Saturday and smashed up the wagon, but no one was injured.

E. F. Winterson sold over 6,000 wholesale tickets for the flower show. He is known as the quiet committeeman.

Sinner Bros. are cutting a good quantity of fine callas.

At E. H. Hunt's W. E. Lynch says the cut flower department is fairly active, and any visitor can see that the supply department already is in the holiday rush. The new catalogue is not yet out, and will add perceptibly to the activity when it is mailed.

Frederick Sperry, of Vaughan & Sperry, says he is more than pleased with the quality of the Hudson river violets now being received. This has come to be a leading specialty with this firm.

Bassett & Washburn say they had a first-class shipping trade all last week and that Monday of this week was one of the best of the season.

N. J. Wietor was busy with his notebook at the flower show last week, recording names and descriptions of the new sorts of chrysanthemums he wants for their stock next year. Wietor Bros. already have probably the largest list of varieties of any western grower, and they will add all the good new ones of the present season. Besides the cut flower business, they do an enormous trade in cuttings of chrysanthemums.

A. L. Randall Co. has changed its 'phone number for incoming calls to the cut flower department to Central 1496. The office 'phone remains 1497 and the supply department 'phone 5614.

Lubliner & Trinz are making so much money in the flower business that they are investing in outside ventures, a string of 5-cent theaters.

Joe Roerster, of George Reinberg's, says he finds supply and demand better balanced this year than usual.

Weiland & Risch say they have been fortunate in cutting lightly during the past ten days of slack demand and large supply of mums.

Bert Budlong and Phil Schupp, of J. A. Budlong's, had their heads together over some of the novelties in carnations and mums at last week's show and will add several new things to their list. They find the newer mums to be doing well and selling well this year.

M. Becker, who grows carnations and lettuce, is a busy man every working day in the year. His range is well looked after, and Mr. Becker, after thirty years in the business, is as active as ever.

L. Becker is confined to his room with a stubborn malarial fever, which has kept him from his usual duties for three weeks.

Winandy Bros., the greenhouse builders, have had an unusually busy season, and anticipate a heavier one in 1907.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says he is looking for a fine Thanksgiving demand, with good supplies of stock to meet it.

John Zech, of Zech & Mann, says bulbous stock will be along presently, probably all that any one will want for Thanksgiving, especially in Paper Whites.

The Benthley-Coatsworth Co. reports that its exhibit of Killarney at the show has greatly stimulated the call. Few had seen it with such long stems.

Fred Weber, 3700 North Robey street, has a fine showing of lettuce in his range of 100,000 feet of glass. He also grows cucumbers, and is said to be the first to introduce the wire trellis in this section.

J. B. Deamud Co. reports some large orders for mums when they were most welcome.

Kruchten & Johnson say their business is increasing right along.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Notwithstanding that business was brisk last week, there was a glut of mums. White chrysanthemums keep well on the move, pink fairly well, but yellow are being lost in considerable quantities. As is usual, there are altogether too many yellow mums grown and hardly enough white. The grades bringing from $2.50 to $3 per dozen, retail, sell best.

Beauties sell readily and tea roses keep well cleaned up at prices ranging from $3 to $8 per hundred.

Carnations are still scarce, the best easily bringing $3. Some fine cosmos and single violets are daily arrivals.

Annual Outing.

A carload of the members of the Detroit Florists' Club participated in the annual outing to Mount Clemens November 9. A special car was provided, making its first stop at the Sullivan greenhouses, where all was found in good condition. The chrysanthemums are exceptionally fine.

The first stop at the Bath City was at Breitmeyers', where everything was in tip-top shape, and a house in La Detroit, in the new section, spoke for itself. At Robert Klagge's, just across the way from Breitmeyers', the crowd received a warm reception. Here a fine house of Richmond and La Detroit loomed up above all others.

Stevens' plant is in fine condition. Some of the best stock on the market is shipped by this firm. James Taylor is still busy steam-fitting, having changed from steam to the hot water with a forced circulation. The stock looks well. Anthony Ottens' was next visited. His houses are mostly devoted to a fine crop of lettuce. James Carey has a fine assortment of stock and served an appetizing lunch. August Von Boeselager's place is neat as a pin. His carnations are looking fine.

All told, stock in Mt. Clemens looks exceptionally good, the only noticeable feature being the few violets seen.

Club Meeting.

Vice-President E. A. Scribner occupied the president's chair the evening of the Detroit Florists' Club's last meeting. Secretary Sullivan being also away, this vacancy was filled by Robert Rahaley. About twenty-five per cent of the members were present.

John Hall was unanimously elected to membership. The name of Hubert Pearce, of the Detroit Cut Flower Supply House, was proposed.

The opening of the question-box brought forth many interesting discussions. A question as to whether bulbs planted outdoors should be mulched now or left until cold weather sets in, was answered as follows: If planted now, then mulch at once, but if planted some time ago do not mulch until cold weather. In answer to the question, "Are Darwin tulips all right for forcing?" it was decided that they are not of much use. It was also decided that Narcissus poeticus ornatus should be grown only in limited quantities.

Angleworms had the floor for some time. Some of the members favor weak lime water for destroying them; while others thought soot and water better. Though not as quick to act, there is no risk in its use. It is a good fertilizer. In order to dissolve soot in water, place the soot into a bag to which a weight is tied, then put same in water for about three days, or dissolve in boiling water.

The question of fertilizers was dwelt upon. Cow manure is thought still the best. In using wood-ashes for carnations, it was deemed best just to sow them on top of the soil, say twice in the season, the first application along about January.

A committee consisting of John Dunn, Jerome K. Stock and Hugo Schroeter was appointed to look into the matter of a pictorial album for the retail trade.

A chrysanthemum show is to be held the next meeting night, November 21. The secretary was instructed to interest as many outsiders in the show as possible. Any grower having anything new, not only in chrysanthemums, but any other flower, will confer a favor by sending some blooms so that they will arrive at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange for the Detroit Florists' Club, Wednesday, November 21.

Various Notes.

Mr. Lewis, of Pontiac, received a vote of thanks for some well grown mums exhibited at the club's last meeting. Among them were some fine White Bonaffon and exceptionally fine Liger.

Breitmeyers' beautiful store looked like a fairyland last week, with its countless varieties of chrysanthemums, the occasion being their annual fall mum exhibit. Besides mums, some fine orchids, roses, carnations, etc., were shown.

As is usual at this season all the florists are making a special effort at decorating the interiors of their stores and windows.

B. Schroeter has had some fine orchids on exhibition, also a vase of Rose-pink Enchantress, besides many other flowers. H. S.

HIGHLAND, ILL.—Maurice F. Widmer, who has recently assumed charge of his father's business, and Miss Caroline M. Speckart, of St. Louis, were married October 24.

LISBON, O.—John W. Scott has installed a seventy horse-power steam boiler to heat his plant, also built a large boiler-house and added one greenhouse 12x60 for bulb forcing.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—The Schrote greenhouses on Springside avenue at Austin street were damaged $800 by fire that started in the boiler-room November 4. The place formerly was conducted by a Mr. Rosein.

CALLA, O.—Amanda Mellinger and Ralph Slagle were treated to a kitchen shower recently, the inciting cause being the fact that the two will soon unite their fortunes in a matrimonial venture, in which they have the best wishes of the entire community.

FRANKLIN, PA.—The following notice appeared in a recent issue of the Evening News of this place: "A son whom they had never seen arrived yesterday to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Bell, at Niles." John Bell is a member of the firm of W. T. Bell & Sons.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW is printed Wednesday evening and mailed early Thursday morning. It is earnestly requested that all advertisers and correspondents mail their "copy" to reach us by Monday or Tuesday morning at latest, instead of Wednesday morning, as many have done in the past.

A MARTYR TO THE PROFESSION.

By a Constant Reader.

Of William Scott so many boast
It is to him they speak the toast;
His fame has spread both far and wide
He's known on this and "the other side."
The letters come from every part,
Each to learn the missing art.

If something ails your valley pips
At once his name comes to your lips;
Quick you write to find your falling
And swift he tells where you are ailing.

Each week you read with eager ways
To find the way each flower pays,
And soon the harvest begins to come,
Be it with fuchsia or chrysanthemum.

Where'er you go he's on the top;
Be it at shows or at the shop,
They all seek him for kind advice
To find the way to kill wood-lice.

He's not a man to create new freaks
Like those of which O'Mara speaks,
But he knows the kind that bring the coin,
So others have learned with him to join.

He's set a mark for his name to stay.
To be as great each of you may;
Just keep to the right and follow his pen
And you'll be the greatest of all great men.

NATIONAL COUNCIL.

The National Council of Horticulture held a meeting at the Auditorium hotel, Chicago, November 9, and canvassed the subject of extending the scope of the press bureau. Greater funds are available this year than for last season's successful trial, and it is proposed to do more and better work. The general direction will be in the hands of Prof. H. C. Irish, president of the St. Louis Florists' Club, and the details in charge of Jas. H. Burdett, of Chicago.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

Smith's Chrysanthemum Manual, revised edition, by Elmer D. Smith, published by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., 40 cents.

The first edition of Smith's Chrysanthemum Manual sold so well that its author was encouraged to undertake its revision and expansion to the total of 98 pages found in the present volume, which is a distinct improvement over the first book, not only in cultural matter but in mechanical execution. Many of the important chapters have been rewritten, giving more complete details, with additional illustrations. It is a book which every chrysanthemum grower will want. It will be sent postpaid if 40 cents is mailed to the REVIEW.

GRAVE DECORATION.

Could you give me any information or instruction as regards decorating a grave. Our undertaker saw a grave decorated in California that, when the casket was placed on the lowering machine, the decoration gave way and after the casket passed down the decoration sprang back in place again; in other words, the grave was covered entirely.

W. M. N.

The grave referred to probably was decorated with spruce or evergreen boughs held in place over the open grave by having their stem ends placed under planks around the edges of the grave, and these in turn were hidden by placing other evergreen boughs over the planks. When the bearers stand at the grave-side lowering the casket their weight tends to hold the boughs rigid across the opening, so that the boughs spring back into place after the casket has passed through them. The boughs should be long enough to meet at the center of the grave. When desired, loose flowers may be laid on or at the edge of the grave.

R. J. HAIGHT.

OBITUARY.

Edward Littig.

While returning from a football game November 3 Edward Littig, Davenport, Ia., tried to climb into a buggy, became entangled in the wheels, and before the horse could be stopped was dragged some little distance and had sustained fatal injuries. His left foot was literally torn off at the ankle, he sustained a fracture of the skull, his knee cap was fractured and his body was considerably bruised. He was removed to St. Luke's hospital, where he died the next morning. Mr. Littig was about 25 years of age. He was a graduate of Harvard University, and until recently was a member of the firm of Littig Bros. He is survived by his parents and several brothers and sisters.

William Tricker, Sr.

William Tricker, Sr., one of the best known residents of Media, Pa., died October 27 at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Garrett Bond, at Village View, near Media. Mr. Tricker was 74 years of age. About three months ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis from which he never fully recovered. Deceased was a florist and for many years conducted the only greenhouses in Media. Mr. Tricker is survived by three sons and two daughters: William H., John and Edward, Margaret and Eliza. Mrs. Tricker died about a year and a half ago.

R. W. Wilkins.

R. W. Wilkins, a well known florist, died November 8 at his home a few miles from Tampa, Fla., death occurring at the age of 58 years. Deceased leaves a wife and four children.

Charles Webster Clark.

Charles W. Clark, who was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., May 9, 1861, died at his home in that city November 3. He was a member of the New York avenue M. E. church. He leaves a wife, Cassie, a son and two daughters.

Bertha H. Engelmann.

After an illness of several months, Bertha Henrietta Engelmann, wife of F. A. Engelmann, entered into rest at 6:30 p. m. November 8, aged 48 years and 5 months. Deceased was born at Leipzig, Germany, and was always of a loving and kind disposition, making friends wherever she went. She is survived by her husband, F. A. Engelmann, florist and gardener to E. C. Dameron, of Clarksville, Mo.; two sons, Wm. A. Engelmann and Alfred Engelmann, formerly with the Berne Floral Co., Mansfield, O., and a daughter, who will take her mother's place in the home.

ELDORA, IA.—Chas. F. Vorbeck, gardener at the State Industrial School, recently returned from a trip to Germany.

DES MOINES, IA.—The Iowa Seed Co. celebrated its thirty-sixth anniversary November 9 and 10 and issued a neat souvenir containing a history of the house.

SALEM, O.—John Miller has purchased the greenhouse on the Baelz property. He will dismantle it, and use what material is available for an addition to his other greenhouses.

"WE AIM TO PLEASE" AND WE DO IT

Whether you are Grower or Buyer, you make no mistake when you intrust us with your business. Read what our patrons say:

FROM GROWER

"Statement rec'd; check is about the biggest I ever had for one week's sales. You certainly did fine; have cleaned up as much already as usually do in a whole season. Of course you had good stock at the right time."—G. TEILMANN, Oct. 26, 1906.

FROM BUYER

"The shipment of Chrysanthemums came through all O. K. The stock was far superior to what I had anticipated. Please ship, etc." — ALFRED DON-AGHUE, Omaha, Neb., November 1, 1906.

Letters like the above are no novelty in our place. It shows that by close and exclusive attention to handling Cut Flowers we have succeeded in bringing the Grower and Buyer close together. Both are satisfied. Are you satisfied where you are dealing? If not, try us.

FOR THANKSGIVING

We shall have large supplies in every line. Chrysanthemums in quantity, all colors, all prices; Beauties of excellent quality in all lengths; Tea Roses as fine as they can be grown; Carnations, splendid flowers, strong stems—Enchantress especially good; Best Violets from New York; Fancy Valley.

Our Asparagus Strings took first prize at the Chicago show last week.

...THE... Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

BALTIMORE.The Market.

Last week was a busy one among the retailers. Roses are a little scarce, while carnations are coming in better. Violets are as scarce as ever and hard to procure. Chrysanthemums are in full blast, but still selling at fair prices. Greens of all kinds are a little steadier. Calla and Harrisii lilies are not abundant as yet.

Catonsville.

John McCormick, Catonsville, is well known as one of the most successful growers. In Baltimore he has a fine store and business is always rushing.

He has 60,000 square feet of glass, fourteen houses, and a fifty horse-power boiler to supply them with heat. He will erect another house 40x250 feet for roses. The water supply is by a gasoline engine. Mr. McCormick's son takes entire charge of the carnations. They have thousands of chrysanthemums ready to cut and he cuts out of one bench 6x140, 100 American Beauty roses every week. He also cuts 1,500 Bridesmaid roses a day and nearly the same number of Brides and Gates. Longiflorums are expected to be in bloom by Christmas. He has 500 bulbs shipped to him every thirty days. A house of early chrysanthemums has been planted to callas, which are now blooming. He has another house of mignonette, one house of smilax and asparagus, and grows thousands of bulbs.

Various Notes.

Harry Quick has made his appearance in market again.

George Siddons is doing a rushing business.

Charles Cook is about again, attending to market as usual.

Aug. Eberhardt has bought about five and a half acres of land on Maiden-choice Lane, below Wilkens avenue, and will erect several greenhouses.

Samuel Feast & Sons will have another new store on North Charles street, opposite the Fernery.

J. Hannigan, gardener for James A. Garey, is preparing stock for Mr. Garey's golden wedding.

J. C. Reinecke has his roses in full crop.

Morris Bros. have completed planting their thousands of pansy plants.

George Mehl, at Fullerton, has completed his three houses of 10,000 square feet of glass and has installed a twenty-five horse-power boiler and steam pump. He will grow chrysanthemums, carnations and callas.

John Hannan, gardener for Mrs. D. C. Howell, has the finest chrysanthemums around Baltimore.

Otto Guerth, successor to Lehr Bros., reports that trade has been brisk and sometimes he starts out as early as 3 a. m. to secure his stock.

R. B. Clark, Arlington, will discontinue business if he can sell his greenhouses.

The Gardeners' Club held its regular meeting November 12 and the first night of the chrysanthemum show will hold its banquet at the Academy hotel.

J. L. T.

GREENSBURG, PA.—Joseph Thomas has completed another greenhouse, 25x100, for ferns. This gives him 28,000 feet of glass.

NEW ORLEANS.

All Saints' Day.

Since our last report about the business for All Saints' day at New Orleans we have found that although in general the florists were quite satisfied, a few of the large growers were a little pinched by not disposing of a good part of their stock. The fault is in growing too much. They should take into consideration that the flowers have to be sold in one day, and if the greater part are not disposed of at wholesale it is a large task to retail them by the one or two dozens when a man counts his crop by the 20,000 or 30,000. It should be a lesson for next year. Let us grow better flowers. Having in mind the quality and the quantity which can be easily disposed of at a fair price, and with less expense, there will be no disappointment, and every florist will be satisfied of his share.

Various Notes.

New Orleans has five nursery establishments, working on large capital, and up to date in every respect. They should be encouraged by all means, but speaking of them constantly seems to be doing an injustice to others who are certainly worth mentioning. One of them is the old-time nursery of John Lee, located in the downtown district of the city. The old gentleman has been living there on the same place for fifty years. We don't count his ground by hundreds of acres—he has the whole square—but every inch is planted as thick as grass. The north side is protected by large magnolia trees, which must have been planted at the time General Jackson came down to New Orleans to defeat the English. The other side is protected by the Mississippi levee, the place being situated only a few hundred yards from the river. Mr. Lee does not believe in flower pots, still less in green-houses. Everything is raised in hotbeds or in the open ground. He cultivates thousands of Jasminum Grand Duke and J. grandiflorum, Rhynchospermum jasminoides, Magnolia Fuscata and a great variety of shrubs which produce flowers in this climate. The Magnolia Fuscata are grafted. Some of them, from which he makes layers, have trunks measuring two feet in circumference. His place is a regular curiosity, and should be count-

Not far from his place A. W. Stechmann has his garden. Mrs. Stechmann's father was an old florist during antebellum times. The present owner is a regular market florist. He is proud just now of his dahlias, the old-fashioned flower of New Orleans, before people took a fancy for large mums. He has a large patch of beautiful red ones of the cactus type. He says the more he cuts the more they grow, and if frost does not come he will have some for Christmas.

E. Valdejo has been sending to his friends postal cards from Strasburg, stating that he will leave Europe November 17, coming back to New Orleans.

OKLAHOMA NOTES.

Angels' Greenhouses is the style of a new establishment in Oklahoma City. They have erected 5,000 feet of glass and are still building. Angels' flower store is located at 230 West Main street, Oklahoma City.

The Stiles Co., Oklahoma City, has secured a lease on one of the choice rooms in the center of the shopping district and will occupy it December 1 with an up-to-date flower store.

Furrow Bros., of Guthrie, moved to larger grounds the past summer and now have a modern plant of 10,000 square feet.

T. A. Butler, of Shawnee, moved to the outer edge of town for more and cheaper ground and now maintains a flower shop uptown.

Pres., Henry W. Wood, Richmond, Va.; First Vice-Pres., Charles Burge, Toledo, O.; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 25th annual meeting will be held at New York City, June, 1907.

THE reports as to German pansy seed are not reassuring.

THE catalogue people are on the anxious seat over prices of other items besides onion.

VISITED CHICAGO: F. A. Forbes, Plymouth, Ind.; Joseph F. Crater and brother, of J. F. Crater's Sons, Easton, Pa.

WHILE beans are milling rather shorter than was expected, still there will be no alarming reduction in quantities available.

A SHORTAGE of cars rather than a surplus of the green-podded varieties is what is bothering the bean grower at present.

THE results of European crops of aster for seed are likely to give further encouragement to the growing of aster seed in this country.

THE market price of onions is so low that the seedsman who is putting figures on the onion page of his catalogue regrets that seed is so high.

THE salesman who failed to book the order last spring because his contract pea prices were too stiff is now asking his house for a percentage of the money he made for it by the transaction.

If seed of the flat varieties of onion goes as high as $2 per pound, the price that some predict it is likely to reach, it is more than probable that the average onion set grower will cut down his plantings.

CHICAGO.—There is still considerable demand for onion sets at good prices for immediate delivery. Fall shipments are holding on longer this year than usual. All indications point to an exceptionally good year for the set men and there seems to be no doubt but what spring prices will go higher than last year.

THE country merchants who handle seeds in connection with their other lines are generally extending the seed end, and are arranging to carry seeds in bulk in place of the boxes of packet seeds that formerly were considered sufficient for their trade. Their extensions and the effort that hustling men are putting forth in nearly every town of importance will have a tendency to cut into the CLOVER seed is strong on the Chicago market and timothy firm.

THIS is the season of the year when the seed grower is kept busy explaining why he is so long in making shipments.

AFTER all, it appears that there is some little surplus in bulbs, including almost everything but large sizes of Harrisii.

THE canners of peas are preparing for an unusually heavy pack next year. The market already is practically cleaned out of the 1906 pack.

MARKET gardeners at Chicago report that their onions are not keeping well and that a serious loss will be occasioned. The reason they give for it is that the heavy frost which hit this locality in early October was more severe than they realized and that the onions were handled too soon and put into pits and win-

Wash Drawings

For Illustrating Seed Catalogues

With capable artists (ours are the best in the United States on flower and vegetable drawings) this form of illustration gives a better result than can be had by any other process. We have made large numbers of such illustrations for 1907 seed catalogues. Two of them we show here.

Let us make you a sample of our work, illustrating some subject you are PARTICULAR about. Send us the best "copy" you have (a photo or a clipping) explaining just what changes you want. We submit drawings for O. K. before making the plate.

We guarantee satisfaction and predict if you use one or two of our halftones from wash drawings in your 1907 book, they will print up so much clearer than the other cuts that nothing else will answer for 1908.

THE shipments of German seeds are coming to hand, rather earlier than usual.

JERE KIMMEL, of Robinson, Kan., has shipped four cars of clover seed this season.

THE Templin-Crockett Co., Cleveland, O., is offering farmers a "seed incubator," an apparatus for testing seeds for germination.

THE pea crop at Alpena, Mich., is estimated at 5,000 bushels. The John H. Allan Seed Co. shipped seven cars from this station in one week.

THE final round-up of Connecticut seed crops would indicate nothing in surplus, with the possible exception of a little turnip. Sweet corn has cured perfectly and will be fine stock and sample, but the quantity, on account of a much reduced acreage, is very much less than for the past two or three years. Onion has developed shorter than the lowest estimates and is altogether a very disappointing crop.

ARTHUR B. CLARK, of the Everett B. Clark Co., Milford, Conn., is looking over the situation at Sturgeon Bay, Sister Bay, East Jordan, and other Michigan points.

THE Thompson Seed Co., Albert Lea, Minn., has elected the following directors for 1907: O. C. Thompson, W. A. Morin, M. M. Jones, Clarence Wedge, and C. L. Hill.

hands of Superintendent E. W. Coulter the greater part of the time since its inception in the spring of 1892, and he is assisted in his work by W. A. Cline. The branch here handles peas almost exclusively; in an ordinary season 75,000 bushels; this season, a very bad one, that amount was reduced about one-half. The warehouse storage capacity is 25,000 bushels. About 20,000 bushels is retained here for stock seed. The acreage this year was 5,000, and that number of acres has been planted annually for the past few years. The warehouse pay roll is about $1,500 per month, and the cost of the crop averages about $95,000."

EUROPEAN SEED NOTES.

The summer weather has at last broken up and heavy rains are the rule throughout most seed growing districts in England and Europe. Reports are to hand of almost a disaster in the aster crops of Germany. The heavy rains have badly spoiled the harvesting at all sections and the quality and germinating percentage of asters are almost certain to be low. After dressing and getting ready for market the quantity it is feared will not be more than half the original estimate. A sharp rise may be expected in the German aster quotations.

In England the long pod and Windsor bean crops are over-abundant and, as is usual when a heavy crop is harvested, the picking and waste is small. At one time, owing to fly and other troubles, it was feared the bean crops would be short, but the reverse is the case and some low prices are quoted for hand-picked samples. Exactly the same remarks apply to the English pea crops, some big yields being reported. Given good weather conditions there are no better peas in the world than those grown in England, and it is a relief to know a good stock will be available this season, which has not been the case for some years.

STERLING NOVELTIES
FOR 1907

Best and Heaviest Main Crop Peas in cultivation. No Seed Catalogue is complete without them.

Report of the Fruit and Vegetable Committee at the Horticultural Hall, St. Vincent Square, Westminster, London, S. W., 15th August, 1905.

"Messrs. BELL & BIEBERSTEDT were granted Awards for two varieties of Peas. These as a rule are referred to Wisely, but on this occasion the Peas were sent as pulled up, and showed such fine cropping quality that the Committee granted Awards at once. We thought THE BELL was the better flavored."

The BELL

This magnificent New Pea is a Main Crop Variety, with strong halm, dark green foliage, long straight pods, produced in pairs, with 10 to 12 peas in a pod, of immense size and exquisite flavor. We consider this the heaviest cropping Pea in cultivation, and can recommend it as the best Pea for the Exhibition Table. Height 3½ feet.

In Sealed Packets, 1 Pint, 2/6; 1-2 Pint, 1/6, Retail.

EXPERT OPINIONS

Mr. JAC. MITCHELL, Gardener, to the Right Hon. Earl Elgin, Broomhall Gardens, Dunfermline, speaks of it as follows:—

"I have not seen anything to equal The Bell as a Main Crop Pea. The halm is strong, with dark green foliage, height 3½ ft. Pods produced in pairs, containing ten to twelve dark green Peas of the largest size and splendid flavor. It is one of the heaviest cropping Peas we have. I consider it the best Exhibition Pea in cultivation."

Mr. R. STUART, Gardener to the Right Hon. The Earl of Lauderdale, Thirlestane Castle, Lauder, writes us as follows respecting our new Pea, The Bell:—

"Your new Pea, The Bell, has done well with me, and I consider it a valuable acquisition to the exhibitor. The large, handsome pods of intense green color, cannot fail to take the eye, many of them measuring fully six inches in length, and contain from ten to eleven large-sized Peas, of fine color and excellent flavor."

This splendid variety is a good cropper, produces its pods in pairs, and has filled well. This is important in a season when other Peas have been filling up badly. It is of healthy constitution, the halm remaining strong and robust."

THE SCOTSMAN

This grand new Pea is a companion to THE BELL, with strong halms, dark green foliage, long, crooked, dark green pods, produced in pairs, with 10 to 12 Peas in a pod, of immense size and excellent flavor, heavy cropper, well suited for Exhibition purposes: height 3½ ft. In Sealed Packets, ½-Pint (each), 2/6. Stock limited.

In the bulb trade all the seed shops are exceptionally busy with the retail bulb orders and an exceptionally good trade is being done, better than for many years. In Holland quite a panic of advance in prices has occurred. Scarlet tulips of all descriptions are almost unobtainable, Belle Alliance in particular being almost off the market. J. B.

GERMAN SEED CROPS.

Erfurt Report.

We have been having ideal October weather from the seed growers' point of view, but this most welcome Indian summer might have come a little sooner with benefit to certain crops, which bear traces of the wet period which preceded it.

The final results of most crops can now be fairly well estimated. Carrots, parsnips, endives, parsley and celery are all good. Tomatoes, leeks, kohlrabi, kales and the cabbage tribe generally middling to good, while cucumbers have done badly. Of cauliflowers the Erfurt sorts have given a good crop, but such sorts as Autumn Giant, Algiers, Early London, and Walcheren are short and prices have advanced. Beets are a good crop generally, except some sorts of Swiss chard. Lettuces show a fair average, the eos having done better than the cabbage varieties. In onions the Tripoli sorts are mostly under average, while the other kinds are middling to good. The choicer sorts of radish in most cases failed altogether, but the commoner kinds have yielded well. Spinach gave an abundant harvest, but stocks being low, prices have not dropped and little is likely to remain on hand. Peas produced a large crop, but wet weather when getting in spoiled the sample and caused waste in picking. Broad beans yielded freely, while French beans are giving varied results, some good and some poor, but considerable stocks of certain leading varieties are still on hand. In herbs, sage is more plentiful and cheaper than last year, and thyme, marjoram, savory and lavender, have come out satisfactorily.

As regards flower seeds, the results of most greenhouse plants and perennials give no cause for complaint. Pansies, owing to the moist summer, are a poor crop, and prices are considerably higher than last year. Myosotis and double wallflowers are all under average. Stocks promise about an ordinary yield.

Among annuals, nasturtiums, phloxes

ed some crops, causing various kinds of diseases that destroy quantities of the plants of delicate nature, as numerous varieties of asters and some sorts of cucumber, etc. It also made in a very extensive way the flowers wither away without setting a seed, as with the pansies, etc., and rather seriously injured the development, maturity and vitality of the tender kinds of seeds, facts that should receive due consideration on the part of the buyers of such seeds, when they do not find the latter germinating in the usual good manner.

In spite of unfavorable results, prices of peas have set in exceedingly low, far below their cost of production, probably due to the surplus stocks of previous year's crop, and, moreover, there is very little demand for this article as yet.

Radish has not done so bad, and spinach is an average crop.

Flower seeds all are good and partly pretty good, but of asters the yield of the delicate varieties will be very small, also dwarf and tall nasturtiums.

IRONDEQUOIT.

The accompanying illustration was from a photograph of a wagon-load of muskmelons grown by Van Aken Bros., Coldwater, Mich. The variety is Irondequoit, a sort not listed in a large number of seed catalogues. It is nearly round, being slightly flat at each end. The outer skin is a beautiful yellow, finely netted. The flesh is dark orange, the flavor excellent. It is a particularly good sort for home consumption. Van Aken Bros. were especially pleased with the results of their crops of this variety. It yielded heavily and the fruits ranged in weight from five to twelve pounds. They were sold in their home town.

PLEASE find enclosed $1 for your tip-top paper.—WM. WALKER, Louisville, Ky.

LILIUM TRADE IN ENGLAND.

The Japan liliium bulb trade has lately taken a very pleasant turn for the European importers and lately some heavy sales have been made both in England and the Continent, with the consequent result that prices have stiffened considerably. One feature of the trade is continual inquiries for retarded longiflorums for immediate delivery. Although this trade for immediate delivery is out of season now, it has had the effect of causing retarding firms, especially the German houses, to considerably increase the quantity they originally intended for retarding for 1907. This, of course, has the effect of using up a much bigger quantity of stock in sight and thereby making prices rise rapidly.

Much complaint has been heard of the quality of the larger sizes of Japan bulbs. Previously in booking orders, no mention was made as to the number of growths on each bulb, with the result that the Japanese when packing the larger sizes used in many cases bulbs of three crowns, or rather three bulbs attached to each other, which with the slightest rough handling broke apart. These bulbs entirely fail in the object required. Instead of producing one or two extra strong stems with extra first quality blooms, they produce three, four or five stems of weak growth and only second and third rate blooms. In buying big sizes growers should take care to specify the number of crowns to each bulb, as many of the English buyers are now doing. J. B.

SOME EUROPEAN NOVELTIES.

J. C. Schmidt, Erfurt, Germany, is sending out Verbena Aubletia compacta, a new, distinct species of very compact growth and an abundance of beautiful bright reddish-lilac flowers. It is about ten inches in height and carries the flowers freely above the foliage. Coleus salicifolius Parrot, latest variegated hybrids, have long, narrow, more or less pronged leaves standing closely round the branches, which give to the plant through their singular colors and wonderful designs a handsome and attractive appearance. It is expected that they will rank popular as market plants.

Henry Mette, Quedlinburg, Germany, is sending out three new asters, named Early Flowering Hohenzollern, Queen of the Market and Large-flowered Dwarf Queen. The Early Flowering Hohenzollern commences to flower about the end of June. The colors are crimson, dark blue and light blue. The plants are of globular habit, attaining a height of one and one-half to two feet and bearing on long, strong stalks flowers of five to six inches across, useful for all decorative purposes.

Bell & Bieberstedt, Leith, Scotland, are offering two new peas, The Bell and The Scotsman. The Bell is a main crop variety with long, straight pods produced in pairs with ten to twelve peas in a pod; one of the heaviest cropping peas in cultivation and good for exhibition. The Scotsman has dark green foliage and differs from The Bell in having long, crooked, dark green pods, also produced in pairs with ten or twelve peas in a pod, of immense size and excellent flavor. Both varieties received awards of merit from the Royal Horticultural Society of England in 1905.

Watkins & Simpson, London, offer a new runner bean, The Marvel, the pods of which are from six to eight inches Haage & Schmidt, Erfurt, offer Impatiens Holstii, delicata, an exceedingly large flowering new hybrid impatiens. The petals are much broader than the ordinary Impatiens Holstii and form almost a round flower, often measuring more than one and one-half inches across. The color is a delicate light rosy pink with a darker colored center. Quite a number of colors of Impatiens Holstii hybrida also are offered.

Though poor airing is not the only cause of fungus diseases, such as stem-rot, leaf-burn, etc., nevertheless it is one which contributes largely to these troubles, and the idea is to keep the air in the house as sweet and fresh as possible. A little night air should be left on until such time as it is necessary to shut the house down to save fire and maintain the proper temperature. But when the house is closed, just as soon as the sun strikes it in the morning, and the temperature begins to rise a little by sun heat, a little air should be admitted to dry up the condensation which has gathered during the night.

On bright days when a cold wind is blowing it often taxes the ingenuity of the most expert to maintain the proper temperature and at the same time avoid cold draughts. In this case a good deal depends on the exposure of the house. If it is sheltered from the north and west the task is comparatively easy.

In selecting the location for a lettuce house it is well to bear this point in mind, thus saving a good deal of trouble and annoyance and giving every advantage to the production of good crops.

In closing down the house the operation should be performed gradually, so as to retain as much sun heat as possible but at the same time avoid heavy condensation, which would arise if the house was closed down too suddenly. The fire should be started so as to meet and maintain the retained sun heat. It is poor policy to allow the house to cool down and then have to push the fire to keep it at the proper temperature. The old theory of not burning coal while the sun shines is a slipshod method which experience will teach the operator to be at variance with his best interests.

Watering.

Watering is another operation which requires care and sound judgment. Our observations lead us to believe that there are far more lettuce crops spoiled by too much than by too little water. Where solid beds are used, and this is really the only profitable bed to grow lettuce in, the natural moisture from below will carry the crop through with the assistance of a surprisingly small quantity of water. When the bed does become dry, a bright day when plenty of air can be applied should be chosen for watering, and it should be done thoroughly, so that the water will go down far enough to meet the underground moisture. Such a watering will often hold the plants for several weeks, although the immediate surface of the soil will soon dry off sufficiently to prevent an oversupply of moisture in the house and insure against dampening.

If the watering is done carefully it can be done without wetting the plants much. Of course the outer leaves will be wet to a certain extent, but the water can and should be kept from the hearts of the plants. Where sub-irrigation is practiced the danger of this is eliminated, but good crops of lettuce have been grown without the assistance of sub-irrigation.

Where raised benches are used water must be applied more frequently. This constitutes one of the chief objections to raised benches for the cultivation of this crop, as they dry out so quickly that it is hard to maintain an equable moisture in the soil; and having nothing to fall back on when the soil dries out, it is often necessary to apply water when the conditions are unsuitable to prevent the plants from suffering and becoming wilted through dryness.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Last week business was quite active. The demand for American Beauties seems to increase, while it is almost impossible to get the good blooms. Brides and Bridesmaids are more plentiful and the quality good. Some fine Golden Gates are seen in almost every store. Chrysanthemums are everywhere. There are few good pink. Chrysanthemums in pots sell slowly and are cheap. Violets are poor and the supply is short. There seems to be a great demand for blooming plants in pots, but the supply is poor. We noticed quite a few Deutsche Perle azaleas in bud and bloom in one greenhouse. This is quite early for left-over plants. Some fine Easter lilies can be seen in one of the Walnut street stores. Fancy fern leaves are scarce, but smilax is plentiful. Large numbers of cases of wild smilax were shipped from Chicago last week.

Various Notes.

Eugene Brus, at the Shawnee Mission, which is three miles southwest of Westport, has two large houses in violets. The flowers are of rather a small variety and single, but the perfume is sweet. Mr. Brus takes the glass out in summer and it is nailed in without putty in the fall. The plants are grown in solid beds. He seems to have splendid success. He also grows large quantities of lettuce. His water supply is from a spring. This means quite a great deal for him, as the weather has been so dry that many florists and gardeners have been hauling water for some time.

Anderson & Hammarlund, at Forty-seventh street and Belinder avenue, are cutting some fine Richmond roses. They are also growing Bride, Maid and Chateaufort. The soil at their location seems to be first-class. Their carnations are also good. They were planted late on account of the houses not being completed until late in the season. They grow Lawson, Queen Louise, Lady Bountiful and Flamingo. Samuel Murray takes their entire cut of both carnations and roses.

Miss Dalley's windows are quite full of choice flowers. She handles the entire stock of Mr. Broman, of Independence.

Miss J. E. Murray had some handsome chrysanthemums in her window last week and reports business to be fine.

Jacob Tobler has the sympathy of all the trade on account of the death of his son.

The W. H. Humfeld Floral Co. was quite busy last week, having had much funeral work, besides wedding decorations.

Mr. Abrahamson, of E. H. Hunt, Chicago, was a visitor last week.

BUSY.

SAGINAW, MICH.—The Roethke Floral Co. is erecting a new store and greenhouse.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—Julius Niednagle, who has been in business here for seventeen years, finds his increasing business requires the services, this fall, of ten men. He has ten houses, with 50,000 feet of glass.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—W. F. Kasting is building a machine for turning out his cement bench rapidly, and at much decreased cost. He finds a large demand and a necessity for improved methods of manufacture to keep pace with orders.

The Florists' Manual

We note your advertisement in a recent number of the REVIEW of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual, and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. Please rush this order, for we feel, with Mark Twain, that we "would rather not use violence."

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Vice-Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas. C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 32d annual convention will be held at Detroit, Mich., June, 1907.

THE nurseries all find use for all the help they can get hold of this fall.

THE nursery stock in the vicinity of Rochester suffered from the cold and snow October 31.

L. L. MAY & Co., Lakeland, Minn., are building a storage and packing shed 150 x 200. Last week they shipped two cars of stock to Elizabeth, N. J.

THE Specimen Tree Transplanting and Construction Co., New York city, has been incorporated with an authorized capital of $10,000. Directors: J. L. Lockwood, Jr., New York; G. B. Pettit, Brooklyn; A. S. Hopper, Paterson, N. J.

THE office of the Xenia Star Nurseries, Xenia, O., will be moved to Dayton about January 1, and it is reported that the firm will close out its business at Xenia, owing to the fact that its lease on about 500 acres of land is nearing expiration and no extension can be secured.

THE Rio Grande Nursery Co., of Brownsville, Tex., has been incorporated with an authorized capital of $10,000. The incorporators are Norman G. Kittrell, of Houston; H. G. Stillwell, J. C. Fernandez, Parker Longworth, of Brownsville; Arthur A. Parkhurst, of Colorado Springs, Colo.

EDWARD Y. TEAS.

Edward Y. Teas was born in Union county, Indiana, March 8, 1830. At 12 years of age, with his older brother, John C. Teas, now of Carthage, Mo., he began a small nursery, at first only aiming to grow sufficient trees for their own orchard, but finally drifting into a general stock for sale. At that early date the fruits common in Indiana were generally of New Jersey, Pennsylvania or Virginia origin, or introduced from these states. The varieties most popular in New York and New England had not yet generally reached Indiana. For about ten years from 1845 the Teas brothers supplied the nurserymen of Rochester, Geneva and other eastern points with scions of the best varieties of western and southern origin, and quite a correspondence was carried on with Patrick Barry, of Rochester; W. T. and E. Smith, of Geneva; John J. Thomas, of Macedon; Charles Downing, of Newburg, and others.

In 1844, J. C. and E. Y. Teas grew the first batch of Catalpa speciosa seedlings ever grown anywhere. One thousand of these seedlings sold to Suel Foster, of Muscatine, Iowa, demonstrated in that colder section the superior hardness of Catalpa speciosa over the common C. bignonioides, which had until this date been the catalpa of commerce.

E. Y. Teas named and first disseminated Garber's Hybrid, raised by J. B. Garber, of Columbia, Pa. Mr. Teas also named and distributed Smith's Hybrid pear near the same date. This pear was quite popular in the south for some years. Mr. Teas first disseminated the Lucretia dewberry, the first really popular dewberry ever introduced. He personally selected in Paris, in the winter of 1859-60, seed from which he produced the Early Amber sugar cane, a variety that had a wonderful culture in the west and northwest during and after the civil war. In 1872 he originated the President Wilder currant, which many believe today to be the best currant in cultivation.

Mr. Teas is a charter member of the American Association of Nurserymen, also of the Indiana Horticultural Society, now in its forty-seventh year, and of other lesser organizations. His aim always has been to grow and sell stock true to name. Although now in his seventy-seventh year, he is busy as ever in searching for new and desirable plants for beautifying American homes.

NUT GROWERS' CONVENTION.

Seventy-five members, representing ten states and the District of Columbia, attended the fifth annual convention of the National Nut Growers' Association at Scranton, Miss., November 2 and 3. After receiving the reports of officers, papers relative to the general culture of nuts and of intermediate crops were read, by Prof. John Craig, of Ithaca, N. Y.; J. F. Wilson, of Georgia; Dr. Y. R. Lemonnier, of New Orleans, and H. N. Starnes, of Georgia.

The committee on nominations of officers for the ensuing year reported the following, who were elected by acclamation: President, F. H. Burnette, of Baton Rouge, La.; first vice-president, J. B. Curtis, of Orange Heights, Fla.; second vice-president, H. C. White, of DeWitt, Ga.; secretary and treasurer, J. F. Wilson, of Poulan, Ga.

The next annual meeting of the association will be held in Dallas, Tex.

UTAH INSPECTION.

Horticultural Inspector John P. Sorenson, at Salt Lake City, has made the following report to the county commissioners of the work done in his department during the month of October:

"In the month of October the nurseries commenced to dig trees for fall delivery. The inspection for root diseases was commenced also when the trees were dug up so that the roots could be examined. About 800 trees were condemned for crown gall, root hair diseases and severe woolly aphis. These diseased trees were burned on the grounds. I have looked after nurseries from North Salt Lake to Murray, and have inspected several parcels of trees ordered by express from other states. Thomas Walker, deputy inspector, has been occupied in the nurseries south of Murray. The other deputies have worked only a few days, each finishing up such work where former notices of pear blight had not been fully complied with.

"The fruit crop gathered before the storm of October 20 and 21 turned out very satisfactorily. What was left after that mostly became windfalls and culls."

PACIFIC COAST.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

Jack Ortignac, who for the past year has conducted the floral department of the Broadway Department Store, has retired, and taken his old position with Morris Goldensen, and Mr. Bertrand takes his place at the department store.

A. F. Borden, who has been in charge of the store of the Redondo Floral Co. for a number of years, has retired, and will start a store of his own in the Henny building on Third street, near Spring. Henry Friend, Mr. Borden's able second, will assume the management for the Redondo Co. Still more changes have taken place with this company. Mr. Lacy, the man in charge of the greenhouses, also has retired and gone into business for himself in Redondo.

J. W. Wolfskill, the leading florist in the upper part of the city, has rented a large building on Fourth street, one door west of the Angelus hotel, and will put in the finest florists' store in the west. Mr. Wolfskill is one of Los Angeles' pioneers and wealthy business men. The florists' business is one of his hobbies, and he proposes to have the best. David Wolfskill, his oldest son, is manager. In contemplating this extensive plan they sent George Watson, the manager of the growing end of the business, on a three months' visit to Europe and through the east. He has just returned with many new ideas. Mr. Lundy is head designer and decorator, and with this crew they will be sure of success.

HARDWOODED STOCK.

Propagating.

There are few varieties of hard-wooded cuttings that cannot be successfully rooted at this season of the year. I refer to evergreens fully as much as to deciduous trees and, although it may take several months to root many of the slower kinds, there is no more danger in handling them, and the chances are fully as good as with quick rooting stock. With conifers I find that the best results are obtained by using cuttings from the youngest growth on the tree. This is always matured enough at this season, after a dry, hot summer, and the tendency to callus and make roots is strong. With some kinds of deciduous trees and shrubs better success may be had with older stems than the latest growth, but this can be regulated by the pith in the cutting, always bearing in mind that the smaller the amount of pith the better the chance to root it.

I have tried various soils for many years in the handling of hard wood cuttings and I have for several years used half sandy loam and half clear sand in my cutting boxes. I use about one and one-half inches of each, with the sand on top. It is not a good plan to have the lower layer of soil too fine, as the tendency seems to be in such cases to make a definite line of demarkation on the cutting and the cutting often commences to rot at this point. This is especially noticeable in stock that is slow to root.

Considerable judgment must be used on the proposition of overhead heat during the winter season. We get so many warm days, when the temperature often climbs up to 85 or 90 degrees during the middle of the day, that this must be well provided for. Even shading heavily will not make up for an extraordinary degree of heat if there is glass overhead. For this reason it is much more preferable to do most of your propagating in a lath house on a raised bench. It is equally as difficult to root cuttings successfully if they are allowed to become too damp and cold for an extended period. They apparently lose their vitality and die in a short time.

of water to be used, the condition of the weather and the variety of cutting grown must regulate. Under the usual treatment evergreens will use a little more water than deciduous stock and at the same time they are a little slower to root. This may seem paradoxical, but it has been my observation that until deciduous stock begins to grow it should be kept rather dry, and the opposite condition suits evergreens.

As to the disposition of cuttings after they are callused, it is usually a good plan to leave them in the boxes an entire season after they are rooted. This may not do in all cases, but if they are not grown too close together I have found that it is advantageous to give them a year's growth before they are potted or planted in the open ground. This gives them a good, heavy set of roots and they will take hold better when given a chance under more favorable conditions.

G.

PACIFIC COAST SOCIETY.

On the evening of November 3 a regular meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was held in the park lodge in Golden Gate park, San Francisco. John McLaren, superintendent of the park, showed the plans for beautifying San Francisco with an extensive system of parks and boulevards, as drawn by Architect Burnham, of Chicago. Mr. Burnham was engaged by the city authorities to make these blue prints, and for suggestions they were submitted by Superintendent McLaren to the landscape gardeners of the horticultural society. In this connection President J. W. Bagge appointed a committee on suggestion.

The meeting also tested a new seedling pear originated by the late John Rock, of the California Nursery Co., at Niles. It has been named Winter Bartlett, and in quality, size and flavor the meeting declared it unexcelled by any pear known to the trade, and voted it a certificate of merit. It will be placed on the market by the California Nursery Co. in the near future.

The meeting also adopted a resolution of thanks to W. S. Tevis, of Burlingame, for the exceptionally pleasant outing he tendered the society the last Saturday in October. To this there were upward of 100 members, and a goodly delegation of the Society Hortensia of Oakland. When they arrived in their two electric cars at the end of an hour's ride it was eleven o'clock, and Superintendent Meyers, of the Tevis estate, was at the depot with plenty of vehicles to carry them to the Tevis mansion, where a repast was served, including unlimited quantities of beer, wine and lemonade. Following this, the guests were told that the place was all their own for the day. And for nearly four hours they found pleasure in visiting the conservatories, the orchard and extensive grounds. At four o'clock they assembled again in the great dining room of the mansion and did justice to coffee and cakes and made speeches. On behalf of the P. C. H. S. President Bagge offered thanks, and interesting remarks were made by F. Luemann, H. Plath, T. F. Taylor and Mr. Eldred, all prominent growers.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We were treated to a few showers in the early part of last week, but the weather has turned warm again and we are having tropical days. The effect is to make all classes of stock, with the possible exception of violets, very plentiful. The chrysanthemums are now in the height of their season and, although they are not quite as good as they were last season, they have improved since last week's showers. The price, too, has advanced somewhat and the growers have nothing to complain of. With indoor stock the demand is only fair. I do not think anything is being sacrificed, however. Prices are about the same as those received by the growers a year ago.

Quantities of short-stemmed carnations and roses are being brought into town and these do not bring good prices. For fancy stock, however, the demand is excellent. Violets cost the retailers $1 per dozen bunches. Valley has been scarce for the last ten days, although some of our largest growers will be cutting heavily in a week or two, and prices may drop a little.

Smilax and green stock of all kinds are plentiful. A few red berries are seen on the streets, but we have not as yet had any frosty weather to brighten them.

Various Notes.

NEW PINK CARNATION FOR 1907

Color—A peculiar shade of lovely pink, with a faint yellowish cast; several shades lighter than the Lawson. Unlike most pinks, the brightest sun does not injure the color. Size—3 to 4 inches in diameter when established. Odor—Pleasing, but not strong. Stems—Invariably strong, but always graceful, ranging from 12 to 30 inches during the season. Habit, etc.—A very quick, active grower, making specimen plants in a short time, even from late cuttings. On account of its rapid growth, requires supporting very soon after benching. Gets away rapidly, blooms early and gives long stems right from the start. Productiveness—Prodigious is the best word we know of to use here. It is the most incessant bloomer, early and late, we have ever grown. Stock limited. Delivery January 5 to 10 and later. Price $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

PEONIES IN AMERICA.

The following note from the Gardeners' Chronicle, London, shows the British view of peonies in America:

The formation of a special society is no novelty in this country. What is noteworthy, however, is that such a society should be associated with a university. We can scarcely conceive our sedate universities, such as Oxford or Cambridge, interesting themselves seriously in such, as they would judge, frivolous pursuits as peony growing. Our American cousins take wider views of the functions of a university, and so we find that the peony society is to meet at Cornell University next year, that a large collection of peonies, nearly 2,000 varieties, is being grown and carefully studied in the college grounds, and that one of the advanced students is preparing a thesis on peonies for his doctor's degree in the university. The robes of a doctor of music in this country are gorgeous enough—what must be the apparel of a doctor of peonies? That the peony is not universally appreciated in America was illustrated by the fact that some time since we were dining at a public table decorated with bowls of peonies. The company consisted largely of Americans, to whom the flowers in question seemed to be quite unknown.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

At Troy, N. Y., I found Sambrook Bros. busy on funeral designs, of which a 30-inch wreath of galax leaves with Bride roses, costing $25, deserves mention. The base was covered with smilax. Jas. G. Barrett, situated near the cemetery in Troy also had quite a big order on hand. The old Dingwall place has undergone quite a renovating at the hands of the new owner, R. W. Zoebel, who has everything spick and span.

A. D. Carpenter, of Cohoes, N. Y., has turned the most strenuous part of the business over to his two sons. One ably runs the store, the other the green-houses.

At Slingerlands, N. Y., Fred Goldring has been busy of late, rebuilding and adding Lord & Burnham houses. He has plans for two more, each 40x120. Two 100 horse-power return tubular boilers have been installed, one for emergency, as it does not pay to be caught napping in this climate. Stock looks fine. Richmond is a great red rose. Bon Silene is a good seller. H. G. Eyres finds a steady sale for this in his Albany store and has a standing order for the cut.

Alfred Goldring has secured the plant at Cobleskill, N. Y., and reports excellent business. I noted a big improvement at the Hendricks place, where the tall hedge well known to visitors has been torn down and in place large beds of iris and peonies are planted.

At Albany, N. Y., the store men all are busy. Whittle Bros., Whittle & Riggs, King, and F. A. Danker are

At Johnstown, N. Y., Thos. Barson has opened a store in the center of this town and hopes to meet with the success he deserves. He has for many years done business at the greenhouses, but as he has two separate places the idea of centralizing in a store seems a good one.

tions and chrysanthemums. He makes a hobby of hybridizing and follows the subject closely. Mr. Loeben is a relative of the famous Benary, of Erfurt. More glass is to be added for the Richmond rose, which is a big seller. Chatenay is preferred to Bridesmaid. Mr. Loeben says he can cut four blooms of the former to one of the latter. He also is largely engaged in outdoor work and has a carload of nursery stock ordered for planting next spring.

Cibotium Schiedei is not nearly so popular as it should be. Dreer has advocated the sale of it. At Rutherford are some splendid specimens and at Prospect park, Brooklyn, I noted specimens growing in round tubs six inches deep by about twelve inches across. The plants measured twelve feet in diameter. This is one of the hardiest of ferns for decorative purposes.

At Poughkeepsie, N. Y., W. H. Saltford had his window appropriately decorated for the show. He is a strong supporter and believes it benefits the busi-

ALLIANCE, OHIO.

One of the many cases for trial at this term of common pleas court is that of LeRoy Lamborn vs. the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., an action to recover $2,000. The plaintiff on July 12, 1905, was engaged in operating greenhouses near the tracks of the defendant in Alliance. Near his property the company constructed an underground sewer, and on the day mentioned a heavy storm visited that place. Owing to the inability of the sewer to take care of the water it overflowed, and, according to the plaintiff, damaged his property and greenhouse in the amount asked.

CHAMPAIGN, ILL.—J. E. Yeats is fitting up a new office in first-class style.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

This has been horse show week in Pittsburgh and much was expected of it in the way of helping along the cut flower business. While there were quite a number of social affairs which called for decorations, on the whole the results were not up to expectations. However, business in general has been good among the shops.

Among the wholesalers chrysanthemums are flooding them out. There never was a week when so many of these flowers were handled and prices were correspondingly low, buyers getting all they wanted at their own prices. Everything else was almost as bad. The exceedingly warm weather simply forced in everything. The weather changed Sunday, showers most of the day and getting colder at night, which will shorten up the stock and give the wholesalers a little time to get their wind.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening with quite a large and enthusiastic crowd present, and a fine display of chrysanthemums on exhibition. All the local growers were represented with some fine stock and it was generally conceded that the flowers as a whole were the best ever shown in this city. Phipps Conservatory and A. R. Peacock had a fine display from their collections. Fred Burki, H. L. Blind & Bros., Goodwin & Sons and F. H. Westhoff all showed commercial varieties for cut flower purposes. Exhibits from out of town include those from Thomas Meehan & Sons, R. Vincent, Jr., & Son, C. Peterson and E. G. Hill Co. Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., sent White Duckham, which was fine. After a thorough examination and discussion of the varieties, a committee was appointed to judge the varieties and write the out-of-town exhibitors the thanks and the opinions of the varieties exhibited.

At the next meeting Christmas plants and suggestions will be considered, and four or five members have been appointed to give brief talks along these lines. All are invited to bring a flower or plant of something they have interesting.

A. M. Murdoch was on the sick list for several days last week.

Frank Faulk, of Faulk Bros., Allegheny market, has the hunting fever. A couple of days in the woods this week will put him in good shape again.

Mrs. Elicker, who was on the sick list, is convalescent.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. is receiving fine violets, and the horse show caused enough demand to help them clean up nicely last week. Hoo-Hoo.

Prepare for Thanksgiving and the Holidays WATCH! PROSPERITY! LOOK!

Election is now over, the country settled to its normal condition. Great Prosperity is in sight for us all; why not for you? A little fortune lays in front of your door; grab it now when you have a chance. Look at others; see how successful they are. Why? Because they are wide-awake, they watch every opportunity and take advantage of bargains. A big demand is in sight now and for the holidays for the much-admired Decorative Plants.

Araucaria Excelsa, Araucaria Excelsa, Araucaria Excelsa, Araucaria Compacta Robusta. Where have you thought of buying them? Surely from a man who makes a specialty of importing araucarias and who can offer you Bargains. Godfrey Aschmann is the man. He has had the reputation for the last ten years of being the great IMPORTER and DEALER in araucarias of America. Prices are slaughtered one half. Never have been offered so low in the history of araucaria cultivation. Why is that? Simply for the reason to obtain room for the cultivation of our great Easter stock. About 5,000 araucarias, together with an immense stock of ferns, palms, rubbers, Gloire de Lorraine begonias, azaleas and thousands of other plants which must be sold by Christmas.

TAKE NOTICE!

Araucaria Excelsa, Glauca, Compacta, Robusta, only spring importations are offered raised in pots all summer and can be shipped safely.

Araucaria Excelsa, 5½-in. pots, about 15 to 18 inches high, 4 to 5 tiers, 3 years old, 60c; 5½-in. to 6-in. pots, 18 to 23 inches high, 5 to 6 tiers, 4 years old, 75c; 6-in. pots, 23 to 25 inches high, 5 to 7 tiers, 4 years old, $1.00; 6 to 7-in. pots, 25 to 30 inches high, 5 to 7 tiers, 4 years old, $1.25; 7-in. pots, specimen plants, $1.50, $1.75, $2.00.

Araucaria Compacta Robusta—Have several thousand of them; can supply all wants. These plants were never so fine in shape and condition as this year. The pet of the greenhouse. 6-in. pots, 3 tiers, 20 to 25 inches across, 12 to 18 inches high, 3 years old, $1.00 to $1.25; 6 to 7-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 18 to 25 inches high, 4 years old, $1.50 to $1.75; 7-in. pots, specimens, 6 to 7 tiers, 25 to 30 inches high, 5 years old, $2.00 to $2.50.

Araucaria Excelsa Glauca—This variety on account of its beautiful green-bluish tiers, dwarf habit, fine compact shape, gives it a striking appearance, and anybody seeing them, must undoubtedly fall in love with them at sight. 6-in. pots, 3 tiers, 20 to 30 inches across, 14 to 20 inches high, 3 years old, $1.00 to $1.25; 6 to 7-in. pots, 4 to 5 tiers, 20 to 30 inches high, 4 years old, $1.50 to $1.75; 7-in. pots, 5 tiers, 30 to 35 inches high, 5 years old, specimen plants, $2.00 to $2.50. These plants are as broad as long and the finest you ever saw.

TWIN CITIES.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are all the rage; consequently the sale of roses has slackened, which is possibly just as well, as they are off crop with nearly all the larger growers. Carnations have improved the last few days. Several growers have brought in nice Enchantress and Lawson. Craig has not done much yet, but the condition of the plants shows that it will be but a short time before we will have some fine blooms. Violets are slow with local growers. Eastern violets are handled to some extent.

As we are now fast approaching the holiday season inquiries are being made as to the condition of the lycopodium. From reports it is going to be scarce. The early snow has compelled pickers to stop work, and it is doubtful if the trade will be supplied with a sufficient amount to equal the demand. Prices will be higher. Some wholesalers are asking $6 per 100 pounds.

Minneapolis.

E. F. Lemke is cutting some fine Lawson and the cut will increase rapidly.

The Swanson Floral Co. is displaying some fine mums. The location of the store windows shows them to good advantage.

Gus. Colberg reports a good week's business and an especially heavy day Saturday.

Vogt Bros. say trade has about doubled the last few weeks. The Aberdeen hotel being reopened has had a good effect with tradesmen in general in that section.

Henry Krinke & Son are sending in some fine mums.

H. Puvogel reports his violets as being fine. He is now cutting heavily.

St. Paul.

The New York Floral Co. succeeds in keeping up a good stock and always one of the most attractive cut flower windows in the city.

The Donaldson Co. appears to be busy all the time. FELIX.

OWENSBORO, KY.—The opening of the new flower store of the Nanz Floral Co., November 1, was a leading attraction. This firm has recently completed an additional greenhouse. This, with other improvements made, materially adds to the facilities for handling the increasing trade.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Trade is fair in chrysanthemums and other cut stock, but no noteworthy decorative work was executed during the last week. It is yet early in the season, as official entertaining does not begin until the middle of December. The absence of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, the fatigue that follows a general election, and the flurry caused by prospective changes in the cabinet and diplomatic corps, have all contributed to put social functions for the present in the background. All the stores, including the market stalls, are showing fine stocks of mums. In pinks, Amorita and Dr. Enguehard are showing in good form. The Bonnaffons are now arriving and with many competitors still retain their popularity. There are plenty of roses and violets to supply all demands, but carnations are scarce.

Various Notes.

A case interesting to florists has been on trial at Alexandria, Va., during the last week. J. Louis Loose, president of the Washington Florists' Co., sued the Southern Railway Co. for $20,000 damages for alleged injury to his greenhouse stock by smoke and cinders from their roundhouse and machine shops. The case occupied the attention of the court for four days, going to the jury on Friday. After several hours' deliberation it reported that it was unable to agree and was discharged.

The chrysanthemum shows at the U. S. Propagating Gardens and Department of Agriculture have continued to attract many visitors.

George H. Cooke and George Shaffer are now bowling in the Y. M. C. A. team. The Y. M. C. A. gets two good bowlers. It is hoped that Cooke and Shaffer will be benefited spiritually—a florist can never get too good.

Alfred Ellabe, of Riverdale, Md., the Davis Bros. and H. C. Summers, of the District, have all been sending in fine specimens of the pompon chrysanthemums, which sell well as pot plants and are useful in funeral work.

Philip Buckingham has relinquished his position with F. H. Kramer and accepted another with J. J. Cummings, of Baltimore. A. F.

CHESTER, PA.—The effects of the late Thomas F. Delahunt were sold at public auction November 5. The greenhouses are being removed.

TROUBLE WITH HOT WATER.

I built a house this summer 40x54; fourteen feet to ridge, for carnations; in addition to my other houses, one 16x40; twelve feet to ridge, for bedding plants, the other 12x45; eight feet to ridge, for palms and ferns. I can heat my new house, but cannot bring the old ones up to the required temperature. I ran a 2-inch separate line from the boiler to the old houses, but am afraid the distance is too great for hot water to travel. This 2-inch line feeds 500 feet 2-inch pipe for the house 16x40 and 600 feet 1½-inch pipe for the house 12x45. The distance the water has to travel from the boiler to the highest point is about 192 feet. Can I heat these two houses with hot water, or can I drain the pipes and use steam? Would I have much trouble to keep up steam with such a system? G. J. L.

Notwithstanding the carefully drawn plan of the greenhouses which you inclose, it is not clear to one not familiar with the plant just the course the water has to follow in traversing the piping system. If, however, the water must travel 192 feet to reach the highest point before the return journey is begun, there is no wonder that the system will not heat. The maximum distance for the successful operation of water on a gravity system is 100 feet. With houses no larger than those in question it should not be difficult to arrange the piping so the water need not travel more than 100 feet before beginning the return journey. If I understand the plan, the new house is fifty-four feet long, one of the older houses sixteen feet, and the other twelve feet wide. This makes a total distance of eighty-two feet from the boiler to the most distant side of the house 12x45. An independent feed and return pipe carried from the boiler to the far side of this house could be used to feed coils at one end and drained by a direct return at the other. The house 16x40 feet should also have its independent system, a flow carried to one end and a return to the other, both returning to the boiler. By rearranging the piping this can be accomplished and a satisfactory hot water system secured. It is possible that you can put the plant on a steam basis and make it work, but I fail to see the reason for using a 1½-inch feed pipe between a 3-inch riser and a coil consisting of 2-inch pipe. Surely the feed pipe should not be smaller than the pipes in the coil.

It is easier to tell one how to keep out of such a difficulty than to get out when once he has fallen in. L. C. C.

RAFFIA

Raffia in Horticulture

A skein of raffia is an every-day necessity wherever floriculture or horticulture are carried on. Raffia is the favorite tying material with the plantmen for several reasons. Not the least of these is its comparative inexpensiveness, but greatest of all is the fact that it neither stretches nor shrinks under the influence of heat or moisture. Once properly adjusted, a tie of raffia does not loosen, releasing that which it was intended to hold; neither does it shrink and cut the plant, perhaps to ruin it. It is soft and pliable, and does not break or ravel when folded or knotted. These qualities bring raffia into general use for many purposes in nurseries and greenhouses, where heat or moisture are always found. Raffia is also especially adapted for grafting.

WHERE TO OBTAIN RAFFIA

We import only the best selected stock. It costs more, but it is money well spent. We can, therefore, offer a choice grade, selected on account of its clear color for dyeing purposes. The strands are broad and of good length.

We carry in stock an assortment of 20 different colors, including brown, 2 shades; blue, 2 shades; green, 4 shades; red, 3 shades; old gold, orange, yellow, pink, purple, black and white.

Prices on application. Color samples free.

A "New Wonder" For 1907

The Variegated Seedling

IMPERIAL

IMPERIAL Carnation has been shown extensively and took a prize at Philadelphia last Fall, besides ten Certificates of Merit and Diplomas from various places. The color is a variegation of delicate pink similar to the shade in Enchantress and a deeper pink of a pleasing shade. A splendid keeper and fine shipper. Flowers are from 3 inches to 4 inches in diameter, nicely formed, very fragrant and with an exceptionally strong calyx, less than a half-dozen splitting last season. Stems run as much as four feet in length, with 30-inch stem as early as November. A very early, free and continuous bloomer from October to July. A vigorous grower, but with no extra grass, every shoot making a flower.

The "Greatest Wonder" of 1907

The New Pink Seedling

PINK IMPERIAL CARNATION

THIS Carnation cannot help but be a winner, the color is a most pleasing shade of pink, one which has long been wanted in the cut flower market. It is a good sport of Imperial and has all its good qualities.

AS A MATTER OF COURSE YOU ARE LOOKING FOR THE BEST AND MOST PROFITABLE PINK CARNATION. WHAT SHALL IT BE? OUR ANSWER IS: INVEST IN THE

Rose-Pink Enchantress

IT IS A SURE THING

Enough were disseminated in various sections of the country last year to prove that it is the best and most profitable variety in sight to-day. And so, "lest you forget," we say again: Don't hesitate, don't doubt, don't delay mailing your order. The ROSE-PINK ENCHANTRESS is an ideal variety, viewed from whatever standpoint. Prices for strong rooted cuttings, January and later delivery:

$7.00 per 100; $60.00 per 1000.

"Rose-Pink Enchantress is by far the best carnation we have ever grown. Have had it in bloom now for two months and it has commanded 25 per cent better price than any other fancy carnation. Its pleasing color makes it a quick seller and am sure it will be one of the most popular varieties for years to come."—MRS. R. MAUFF, Denver, Colo.

"It is identical with Enchantress except for the lovely pink color. The 700 plants we have, although doing well, cannot furnish one-fourth enough to supply the demand for this color continually ordered in advance."—O. F. BAKER & SON, Utica, N. Y.

"The stock of Rose-Pink Enchantress furnished by you last spring was of a high character; the plants are producing blooms superior to its parent (Enchantress). We believe it to be far superior. Its shade of pink is a color long sought after. We are sure it is one of the best acquisitions in Carnations we have had in a long time."—J. BREITMEYER'S SONS, Detroit, Mich.

"Our Rose-Pink Enchantress are simply grand and we shall not sell any cuttings, but reserve all for ourselves."—GEO. E. BUXTON, Nashua, N. H.

"We are much pleased with the Rose-Pink Enchantress. We grew it under glass all summer and began to cut in August. It was a little light early, but far superior to Enchantress, which was a washy color. The color is fine now, just the shade the public wants. We shall grow 5,000 of them next season."—W. J. PALMER & SON, Buffalo, N. Y.

"We are much pleased with the Rose-Pink Enchantress bought of you last season. We find it strong and healthy, coming into bloom early, and being a clear pink, just the color needed. Shall plant more of it next year. We consider it one of the best varieties sent out the last few years."—PATTEN & CO., Tewksbury, Mass.

WATER CIRCULATION.

Our house is 60x65. In half of this the pipes are only about two feet above the bottom of the boiler, and the water does not circulate as freely as it should. We use an old boiler of about thirty horse-power and soft coal at $1.12½ a ton. Would it pay us to install a hot water circulator, and could we dispense with night firing? E. S. M.

If you have water power, cheap electric current or natural gas which can be used to furnish motive power for driving circulating pump, then the installation of such device would undoubtedly prove satisfactory. If, however, it is necessary to install and fire an auxiliary steam boiler to supply power to such a device, it will prove more economical to remodel the heating plant so as to work with satisfaction on a gravity basis rather than install the boiler and pump. A small gasoline motor might be rigged to do the work if water or electricity are not available. There are a number of satisfactory circulating pumps. Those built with a revolving auger pod for propelling the water are among the simplest devices for this purpose. L. C. C.

BOILER CAPACITY.

I desire to build two connected houses, each 15x50. Will a boiler containing 125 square feet of fire and flue surface be large enough to heat both houses? How much pipe will be required?

R. S. W.

If the boiler in question actually has 125 square feet of heating surface exposed to the action of the heated gases it will be large enough to do the work.

If 2-inch pipe is used for the system, twenty-two lengths of pipe, eleven in each house, will do the work. If two 2-inch flows and nine 2-inch returns are used in each house, the radiation can be easily managed. It is impossible to give details for piping the houses without a sketch or a description of the arrangement of the benches. In this estimate I have assumed that 70 degrees will be the maximum temperature required. If 60 degrees will do, less piping will suffice.

Kill Your Scale

If you want to Kill Scale on your plants
Absolutely, there is only one preparation

WILSON'S PLANT OIL

Take a can of this preparation, dilute to four times its bulk with water, and wash or spray your palms, ferns, aspidistras, smilax or any plants subject to bugs or vermin and your plants will be clean. No alkali. Nothing deleterious. Dries at once.

READ WHAT OTHERS SAY OF IT:

We have thoroughly tried your Plant Oil with very striking results. We may say this is the first insecticide we have tried on our palms that will remove the scale with the first application. We would like to say this is one of the few things that the florists cannot afford to be without, especially those who are growing palms and decorative plants. After one application of the oil the plants take on an entirely new appearance. We would be pleased to have prospective buyers visit our nurseries and inspect the palms on which we have used your oil.

PIPING A SMALL HOUSE.

My greenhouse is to be 19x50; twelve and a half feet to the ridge and sides five feet high, including sixteen inches of glass for side lights. The house is exposed on all sides and we have to figure on 20 degrees below zero. Hard coal will be used. Pipes will be under the benches. What size pipes and how many valves should be used? Can an overflow pipe from the expansion tank be returned to the boiler? C. G. A.

From the type of house you have described I assume it is to be used for roses or general stock, and have therefore figured the piping on the basis of such plants.

The piping can best be done with 2-inch pipe, which will require fifteen runs of pipe the length of the house, six returns fed by a reserve flow on the most protected side of the house and a flow and seven returns on the most exposed side. It will probably be advantageous with this amount of radiation to place valves at each end of the four returns, two in each coil. If this is done use gate valves only on a hot water system. It will not be practicable to return the overflow from the expansion tank to the boiler. The only way to overcome such loss is to have a large expansion

Dear Sir—We wish to say that your To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Paper is the most satisfactory agent for the destruction of Green Fly that has ever been brought to our notice. It is clean, quickly applied and effective. As you know, we have been heavy buyers of this product, all of which has been used in our own greenhouses. And as actions speak louder than words we think no further recommendation on our part is necessary.

TO-BAK-INE FUMIGATING POWDER

"The Kind That Kills"

Corfu, N. Y.

Dear Sir:—For the past 4 weeks I have used your To-Bak-Ine Fumigating Powder in several carnation and rose houses. Fumigating in the carnation houses once a week and in the rose houses twice a week. The quantity used each time was 4 half pounds of the dust equally divided as to distance in a house 125x20, burning it in pie dishes with the bottoms cut out and a piece of mosquito netting in its place and one end of dish raised 3 inches from ground which gives sufficient draft for the dust to smolder and burn clean up. It has entirely kept down all signs of Aphis. It leaves no odor on the flowers and has not in the slightest hurt either flower or foliage on the roses, as does burning tobacco stems.

Very truly yours,
WILLIAM SCOTT.

BURBANK AS A PLANT BREEDER

We take the following extract from the pages of Nature: "The review of Luther Burbank's work, written by Prof. H. De Vries in the Biologisches Centralblatt, September 1, gives the opinion of the foremost scientific plant breeder on the work of one of the most successful practical plant breeders. While fully recognizing the remarkable acumen of Burbank's judgment, and the practical value of his work, Prof. De Vries finds a marked contrast between the aims and methods of the two types of worker. Careful experiment in the cultivation of crossing on a limited scale of pure types with definite characters is the task of the scientific investigator; the hope of the nurseryman lies in the chance possibilities arising out of the production and selection from a vast number of variations; for instance, Mr. Burbank selected his plums from 300,000 hybrids. One of the most important features of Mr. Burbank's work has been the cultivation of remote species with possibilities that have escaped the consideration of less [? more] conventional cultivators. The stoneless plum was obtained from crossing some plants, 'Prunes Sans Noyau,' at one time cultivated in France. An intuitive genius for selection of promising varieties is the key to Mr. Burbank's success."

What We Are Trying To Do is show up to the florists that the trifling amount saved on the wood-framed house, over our iron frame one, is swallowed up many times in repair expenses—that the wide house is cheaper to erect, easier to work, heat and ventilate than narrow houses. When we make a man see these things we know he will get the right thing at the right price.

ADIANTUM CUNEATUM MATADOR.

We note in the latest issue of Moller's Deutsche Gartner Zeitung several illustrations of this remarkably beautiful variety of the common maidenhair fern. It was found in 1895 among a mass of spore-raised A. cuneatum, from which it differed, and was distinguished by the extraordinary length of the fronds, and their light green tint, and pretty feathered form. Hitherto, the raiser, Max Lyon, florist at Meissen-Zscheila, Germany, has not succeeded in obtaining spores from it, and its propagation has as a consequence been slow. The chief points offered by this variety are its distinct rapidity of growth, and the fact that the plants do not suffer from the constant cutting of the fronds, or from their entire removal. The illustrations show plants of very graceful appearance, and some large span-roofed houses filled with plants of this variety, in Mr. Lyon's nursery.—Horticultural Trade Journal.

EUONYMUS.

I have often wondered if it is generally known among nurserymen how much better euonymus propagates, grows and withstands frost if given a fairly heavy shade. A grower in England, known to me, propagates thousands every year in the shade of an apple and pear orchard. The trees are planted the usual distance apart and the ground below is utilized for euonymus, both green and variegated. This grower always propagates by putting the bushes in very deep, so that the soil comes several inches above the stem, covering as large a number as possible of the branches. After planting, quite six inches of moderately fresh horse manure is added, covering the whole space between the rows, which are about twelve inches apart. By this means a well-furnished bush will have perhaps fifteen or twenty or even more small branches, with their lower part in the soil. In twelve months' time these are taken up and each shoot cut off, when they will be found to be all separate and well rooted; and, if carefully planted out and treated well, will be fine, bushy stuff in one or two years' time. The usual method of propagation is by cuttings in a coldframe, taken in autumn, where success is moderately easy, as a little heat is really required. A small nursery in Cornwall, where the climate is very warm and frost almost unknown, roots them very freely out in the open ground, from both hard and soft wood cuttings, taken in their proper season. J. B.

BOILER CAPACITY.

I have a horizontal hot water boiler nine feet long and twenty-eight inches in diameter, with twenty-eight 2 1/4-inch tubes. How many feet of 3-inch pipe will it heat? G. O. K.

The boiler in question, nine feet long, twenty-eight inches in diameter and containing twenty-eight 2 1/4-inch flues, set as a horizontal return tube boiler, should be able to carry about 1,600 lineal feet of 3-inch pipe. L. C. C.

THE retail florist spends time and money without stint on his window displays, getting his customers interested and inside, then lets them down by showing palms and plants in a show-room greenhouse of heavy bridge-like construction, unattractive—almost dingy—and this is where the U-Bar Construction comes in, making a bright, cheery, bubble-like place—a charm spot to your customers. Which pays? Send for catalog. Pierson U-Bar Company, Designers and Builders of U-Bar Greenhouses, Metropolitan Building, 4th Ave. and 23rd St., New York.

THE TEST OF PRODUCTS WAS DEMONSTRATED

Which were the ones awarded the most prizes? Nine out of ten who received prizes were florists and growers whose houses were built with our material. The test of the products always proves our claim, that no better material or construction is to be had in America. Whatever has been your success in the past, we are sure you can do better with our material and we want you to write us for more information about our construction. Our plans are made so that any ordinary florist can easily put up his house correctly and our material is cut so accurate that there is no necessity for fitting it in place with the help of an experienced mechanic. Prize plants are money-makers and you should know something about the kind of houses in which the best stock is grown. Write us and we shall be pleased to talk matters over further, giving your letter our very best attention. Send for our circular which tells the history of cypress and why it is the best wood for greenhouse construction—then let us estimate on your needs and tell you why it pays to pay for quality.

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. One of our successful growers has this year taken out 6000 feet of wooden gutters, which were only 5 years old, and replaced the same with 6000 feet of the GARLAND IRON GUTTER, this being his fifth annual order.

Our long list of orders of this kind is our best reference. By writing any of the large growers at Chicago you will confer a favor on the

The Wide House—Its Advantages

There's nothing like actual comparison for conviction, so we made this sketch showing the 40-foot iron frame house (A) built right over the two narrow houses (BB) for comparison in glass area—the amount of shade—and the air space. The large house takes exactly the same amount of roof as the smaller houses—you cut out the extra ridge and gutter and the shade they cast—it actually costs less to erect because it takes much less framing. The large house has 26 per cent more air space that acts as a regular insulation against sudden changes. It's a cooler house in summer, more even temperature in winter. Ventilation is evenly distributed—less likelihood of mildew—last, but the hinging point of the whole proposition—it takes 15 per cent to 20 per cent less fuel—one man claims 25 per cent. If you are going to build next spring get the thing lined up now—there's a tremendous advantage in being thoroughly ready—sometimes a price advantage, too.
